MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

MAY 4, 1955
VOLUME 54 NUMBER 1

"HOLLYWOOD NEEDS A SWIFT KICK IN THE PANTS!"

So said a three column lead editorial in the large circulationed and important Hearst Herald Express of Los Angeles on April 22.

And, when you think about it, the need is either a kick at that end, or brains at the other end!

Justifying their suggested attention to the stern exposure of some pretty well tailored slacks, the editorial proceeds as follows:

"Here we are, the film capital of the world and yet the recent Academy Awards winning ceremonies were flashed across the nation via air waves as a major television production.

"An estimated 60,000,000 persons here and across the country sat in awe of a brilliantly staged program, star-studded not only by the year's finest performers, but aided and enhanced by the greatest array of stellar talent ever gathered on the ether waves or seen on television screens.

"Hollywood's giant film industry, with its high pressure brains and showmanship, should have been sponsoring the event, thus laying the emotional and humorous groundwork for next year's product and possible awards.

"It should have been selling forthcoming movies to the radio listeners and television viewers. It should have been dangling a lure of the future to its vast audience.

"And, just as a suggestion to the motion picture industry and the Academy, why not award the Oscars in a big, brilliant show in the Hollywood Bowl? Thousands of persons have wanted to attend the Oscars awards show down through the years. There should be little difficulty in filling the bowl, wih all the big stars present for such a grand spectacle as the film industry is capable of creating. With only the receipts for admissions, the cost of production probably would be more than paid for and all of the main TV and radio outlets probably would want to broadcast such an important national event instead of just one network.

"Penny wise and pound foolish, the Academy has submitted to the financial assistance of its deadly rival, TV, and thus sacrificed its own individual dignity and importance.

"Hollywood's film industry and the Academy need a shock vaccine of showmanship that will have it standing on its own industry feet!"

Here is a west coast editor who has more pride in the annual entertainment accomplishments of our great industry than seems to be possessed by the very people who produce them.

Has Hollywood lost its courage . . . its confidence in the future of the motion picture industry . . . or just its brains? It is certain that the two best shows, of general appeal to movie patrons, as shown on TV this year, were the two Academy Award evenings. Even theatre owners and theatre managers stayed away from their theatres on those nights through a natural and understandable interest. So an annual venture designed to promote the industry, and focus attention on it, has the positive result of tearing up all boxoffice income on two out of the year's 365 nights and helping TV to boot!

That vaunted boast, "Made in Hollywood," can now be attached to bad business at theatres as well as to several other things.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES

Just a few short years ago, the possibility of joint cooperation or concerted action between National Allied and the TOA seemed as remote as the proverbial 100-to-1 bet on a horse race. To even suggest such a possibility before any informal group of theatremen would produce cat-calls and suggestions that you "should go and have your head examined!" But that is exactly what has happened, and is happening. Should there be any production or sales executive who sincerely entertained doubts of the serions nature of the current economic threat to the nation's theatres, this one occurrence should provide the clinching conviction.

In Chicago, on April 20, what was heralded as "the first meeting that has ever been held between Allied and TOA leaders on exhibition problems" became a reality and resulted in "complete agreement" and "unanimity of thinking."

Let us hope that there will be many more such meetings and a continuation of close cooperation.

Failing in the accomplishment of the one theatre owner association which we have so often advocated, there seems to be a lot of merit in the two largest associations pulling together as a team and with their eyes focused on the same objectives.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

HIGH QUALITY NOTE: Recently we saw a sneak preview of Warners forthcoming release, "Mr. Roberts," which stars Henry Fonda, James Cagney, William Powell, and Jack Lemmon. Without a doubt this is one of the best and funniest films we have seen in years. The audience thought so, too, and there were some pretty tough cookies in the packed house. As the film ended there was a goodly amount of spontaneous applause. On the way out, the high quality of the film plus praise for the performances by the top four stars was foremost in everyone's conversation.

KONECOFF

The production in CinemaScope and WarnerColor has been booked by Russell Downing for his Radio City Music Hall for a July opening with solid business anticipated. It deserves it.

NOTE TO PROJECTIONISTS, EQUIPMENT MANUFACTURERS, EXHIBITORS: In Kiel, Germany, a theatre projector was expertly dismantled and stolen by a 16-year old boy. What he was going to do with it, no one seems to know but if he were going into business for himself, we'll bet he never considered the high cost of films, clearances, taxes, etc., etc.

The theatre manager refused to prosecute lest he ruin the career of a potential brilliant young technician when he was caught. He reassembled the machine without delay or trouble so that the show could go on. No, we don't know the projector's brand.

VIEWING DEPARTMENT: Last week saw IFE screen an episode from its forthcoming film, "Love In The City," for the American Society of Girl Watchers. This outfit is dedicated to "dicreet but relentless" girl watching, and they were highly interested in the Italian technique

Holdovers Set Pace

NEW YORK—Following the opening and strong holdover of "Strategic Air Command" at the Paramount, there was little excitement on Broadway last week, despite the arrival of several new films. The Music Hall and the Astor held up well with long running product.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount reported that this VistaVision attraction would hit $90,000 on the second week.

"A Man Called Peter" (20th-Fox). Roxy did $11,485 on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with the fifth week expected to drop to $23,000.

"The Glass Slipper" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, was still doing okeh with business for Thursday through Sunday reported as $78,000, and the sixth week estimated at $112,000.

"Run For Cover" (Paramount). Criterion claimed $29,000 for the opening session.

"The Wayward Wife" (IFE). Globe claimed $10,000 on the fourth week.

"Chief Crazy Horse" (U-I). Mayfair anticipated $18,000 for the first week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor held up well and did $24,000 on the eighth week.

"The End Of The Affair" (Columbia). Victoria was heading toward a $17,000 opening week.

"The Purple Plain" (UA). Capitol dropped to $24,000 for the fourth week.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State reported $26,000 for the seventh week.

Snaper Raps Release Policy

NEW YORK—Wilbur Snaper, president, New Jersey Allied, last week lashed out at distributors for their policy of holding back quality features. He described the film industry as the only one in which there was "very little if any concern of sellers for buyers." Snaper stated that the manner of releasing was having a detrimental effect on New Jersey grosses, and as a result of this holding up of releases, his Jersey houses will have no quality features to play in May and June. In addition to this, Snaper attacked the present policy of large cities such as Newark having to wait for the completion of New York runs before they could obtain a picture. He called this policy ridiculous and suggested it be substituted with a plan which would make films available a predetermined number of days after New York openings.

It was disclosed that Irving Dollinger was instructed to present this plan to National Allied at their next meeting. Dollinger is the Jersey Allied representative on the National Allied board.

Snaper revealed the findings of a recent Jersey poll of exhibitors which indicated a continued drop in theatre attendance, although it is not a severe one.

Allied Launches Federal Regulation Drive

Brylawski Opposes Wage-Hour Proposal

WASHINGTON—A. Julian Brylawski, appearing before the Senate Sub-Committee of the Committee of Labor and Public Welfare, opposed the administration's proposal to extend the federal minimum wage-hour act to include employees of theatre chains with branches in more than one state or dependency of the United States. The TOA official spoke for both his organization and National Allied.

Brylawski stated that the main reason for opposition of the extension of the act was not the minimum wage, which is already exceeded by most theatres for all employees with the exception of ushers, but the 40 hour work week and requirements for premium pay for Saturday, Sunday, and holiday work.

Brylawski stated that theatre operation today is essentially a weekend business, and said that any additional expense would inevitably drive more theatres out of business.

He pointed to many decisions of the National Labor Relations Board and other government bodies, holding that theatres are not engaged in interstate commerce, arguing that theatres have always been considered a strictly local enterprise.

Brylawski said that extension of the minimum wage act to theatre chains would be discriminatory, placing a chain theatre engaged in interstate commerce in an "unfair competitive situation with competing theatres operated by circuits completely contained within the limits of a state."

Stating that theatre owners are in a "deplorable condition" because of competition from other media of entertainment, he noted that evidence had been presented before the previous Congress of the closing of 5,000 theatres since 1947. He said that more theatre closings would lead to enormous losses, because single purpose theatre buildings can seldom be used for other purposes, and pointed out the loss to the business community from the loss of the attraction of a theatre.

Toll-TV Deadline Extended

WASHINGTON—The Federal Communications Commission last week announced the postponement of the deadline for public comment on toll-TV from May 9 till June 9, and also extended the time alloted for rebuttal statements until July 11.

Acting at the request of International Telemeter Corporation, which had requested an extension because the lawyer working on the case had to go to the hospital, the FCC said that it felt that the postponement was "warranted and in the public interest."

No objection was made to the delay by any other interested party. The Committee against Pay-As-You-See TV will use the extra time to bring its message to the public on a stepped up scale, according to its public relations counsel, Robert Taplinger and associates.

TESMA Proposes Plan For Theatre Improvement

NEW YORK—Merlin Lewis, executive secretary, Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association, last week proposed that exhibitors insist on withholding three per cent of the gross "off the top" for purpose of buying new equipment and rehabilitating theatres.

In a letter sent to various exhibition leaders, Lewis admitted that he had a selfish interest in the plan, but suggested that distributors could not deny such a contract without putting themselves in the "position of forming the We Want It All Club, membership in which, it is presumed, they all enjoy at the present time.

"The distributor, too, should be able to understand that theatres must be made inviting and comfortable for the potential customer, if they are to obtain what they believe to be a sufficient amount of money out of the pictures they lease to you—and therefore they should be willing to pay part of the cost to accomplish that comfort."

Lewis suggested that the plan might be called the "TESMA Three Per Cent Plan."

Military Plan Collapses

WASHINGTON—The Defense Department last week rejected another industry proposal for the ending of competition between post theatres and nearby privately owned first-run theatres.

The plan, submitted last fortnight at the request of Secretary Wilson, proposed that military and competing theatres divide up the first-run product of each distributor each year. The Army and Air Force Motion Picture Service was to work out the details with each distributor in each area.

A. Julian Brylawski, member of the industry committee that is bargaining with the Defense Department, told the press that the department "is apparently going to insist on the status quo."

Berger, Myers Visit Congress, Report Sympathetic Reception; Question Remains As To Who Will Introduce Specific Bill

WASHINGTON—Allied States Association last week began its drive for federal regulation of film industry by sending Benjamin Berger, president, North-Central Allied, and new chairman, Allied's Emergency Defense Committee, and Abram F. Myers, general counsel and board chairman, to Capitol Hill to discuss the outlook with various Congressmen.

The two officials reported a sympathetic reception and promises to help the exhibitors, but refused to disclose the exact plans which had been discussed for putting the bill through Congress. They said that they were undecided whether they should have a bill for Federal regulation introduced and have hearings later, or whether to press for early general hearings on the plight of the exhibitors, to be followed later by a specific bill.

There was no indication given of whom the two men had spoken to, except that they had been in the Senate and had spoken to more than one man. To name individuals, said Myers, "would bring into opposition prematurely all the forces of opposition. All the rats and snakes and tumblebugs would come out of their holes."

It was not disclosed, for the same reason, which committee Allied might choose for the presentation of its case. If a specific bill is introduced, it would probably be considered by the Judiciary or Commerce Committees, while if no specific bill is introduced, the general situation could be debated in the Senate Small Business Committee. All three committees have scheduled early hearings on the Attorney General's anti-trust committee report, and these could be used as the occasion for an Allied appearance.

Variety Newsmen Named

LOS ANGELES—A six-man team will handle the news coverage on the Variety Clubs International convention opening this week, it was announced by M. J. E. McCarthy, chairman of the publicity committee.

Pete Latsis will serve as official contact and planter for the downtown papers and wire services. John Flinn will act as chief contact for the trade press. W. C. Lewellen will be in charge of radio and television. Also serving in an advisory capacity will be Seymour Peiser, Perry Leiber, and Jim Schiller.

Dembow In England

NEW YORK—George F. Dembow, recently named president, National Screen Service, last week arrived in London for several weeks of meetings with Arnold Williams, managing director, National Screen Service, Ltd. He will visit Italy and France as well to look over the European market and is expected to return on May 30.

...hm of a 20th musical smash!

Touring institutions partially or wholly supported by Variety Club funds, Hoover is shown here with Tracey Hare, left, nurse Mrs. Ruth Samartine, an intern, and an unidentified patient in an oxygen tent.

Variety's George Hoover Looks Back On A Year Of Real Accomplishment

"And A Child Shall Lead Them"

Chief Barker Hoover addresses the group at the dinner for the installation of new officers.

ALL industry roads last week led to Los Angeles, for it was in the world's film capital that the heart of motion pictures, Variety Clubs International, was to convene in its 19th annual convention, set to open today (May 4).

From all over the world they came, 1,200 strong, representing Tents as far away as London, Dublin, Paris, Bombay, Hamburg, Toronto, Tokyo, Rio De Janeiro, Buenos Aires, and Mexico City. The convention theme this year is based on the slogan, "And A Little Child Shall Lead Us."

The world-wide charitable organization has been headed this year by International Chief Barker George Hoover, Miami, Fla., who since his election has traveled extensively spreading the gospel of Variety and inspecting the principal charity efforts of a whole host of Tents. On these pages can be seen a few of the activities which kept Hoover and other international officers busy over the past year.

All branches of the entertainment industry are represented in Variety's organization, which has expanded since 1927, when a small group banded together to help one Pittsburgh orphan, to a position where 10,000 members all over the world are active in 45 Tents.

The host for this year's convention is Tent 25, and high on the list at the agenda is a proposal to extend the terms of the international chief barker and international crew to two years instead of one. It will certainly not be all work for delegates, however, as a varied series of social activities has been planned for barkers and members of Variety's Ladies' Auxiliary, expected to be more than 400 in number.

As usual, the convention will be climaxed by the presentation of the coveted annual Humanitarian Award to the individual to be named by the organization as having made the most outstanding contribution to humanity in the past year.

The convention marks the first year since 1947 that the showmen have met in Los Angeles, and top flight entertainment luminaries, along with federal, state, and civic officials, will take part.

Several Sales Policies Needed To Fit Situations, McGee Says

DENVER—Pat McGee, head, Cooper Foundation Theatres, and TOA vice-president, commenting last week on the present bitterness between exhibition, distribution, and production, stated that "enlightened self interest" on the part of production and distribution should require several sales policies instead of a single policy. No neighborhood theatre can afford to pay 50 per cent film rental as a policy and exist, he stated. This leads many exhibitors to pass up the better features and results in lowered attendance. Several sales policies instead of a single policy would enable the top pictures to play eight or 10 thousand situations, "instead of the four or five thousand that is the case today." Film prices should be based on ability to pay, not paid out of losses, he added.

Accusing distribution of "dragging its feet" on the matter of arbitration, McGee said that the feeling is now prevalent among exhibitors that "even if we got it (arbitration), we would have very little to benefit us." Exhibitors feel completely frustrated when they see great profits on the one hand and little or no profit on the other. Exhibitors face the threat of toll-TV, while producers think that if they can't sell the theatres, they can sell the home boxoffice, the exhibitor added.

If the company presidents will only meet with exhibitors, "they might find us willing to go to Congress in an effort to adjust several troubling matters, including a change in income tax rulings." Such a change might change the present trend towards star personalities and technicians demanding a piece of each picture, which includes a voice in its sales policy. Many a picture has gotten into the 50 per cent must category because these Hollywood partners demand that it be marketed that way in the beginning, and then fail to change their minds when it fails to measure up, McGee opined.

If these company presidents fear further legal problems resulting from an industry conference, said McGee, the Department of Justice could annul their fears by sanctioning the meeting ahead of time. He also suggested that exhibitors who hold stock in the film companies should attend more stock meetings if that is the only forum open.

McGee pointed out that Si Fabian, Sam Pinanski, and others proposed an exhibitors film financing group many years ago, and that the group has finally been organized. He said that the permanent solution to the need of theatres for more films lies in their active participation in production, particularly if toll-TV becomes a reality. He said that regulation by Congress is not a permanent solution, for if a ceiling is placed on the price of films, the quality of the films will surely decline.

Lait Joints Paramount

HOLLYWOOD—George Lait, who resigned recently as publicity director at Columbia, joined the Paramount publicity department last week to handle special exploitation assignments. His first campaign will be for the release of "Ulysses."

"SAC" Terms Rapped In Letter To Air Force

NEW ORLEANS—Abe Berensen, president, Allied Theatre Owners of the Gulf States, last week protested to Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbot that confiscatory terms being asked by Paramount for "Strategic Air Command" would prevent many theatres from showing the picture.

Berensen stated, "We as theatre men and tax payers know SAC was made through the cooperation of and at great expense to the United States Air Force." He added that the obvious intent of the Defense Department must be "to have the greatest number of people witness this picture, and it is also the desire of theatremen to show the picture at every theatre.

"At the present time, the Paramount Pictures Corporation are asking such exorbitant and confiscatory rental terms that I venture to say that few, if any, of us will be able to afford the exhibition of this great motion picture. As president of this group of independent theatre operators, I feel that it is my duty to make you aware of the circumstances."

Berensen also sent a similar letter to Arthur Godfrey, who has been plugging the picture on his television show.

William H. Pine Dies

HOLLYWOOD—William H. Pine, 59, producer and partner in Pine-Thomas Productions, died last week in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital 10 days after suffering a heart attack.

Born in Los Angeles, Pine entered the film business with Balaban and Katz in Chicago. He met William Thomas 23 years ago when he came to Hollywood as studio director of publicity and advertising for Paramount; in 1940, they became producers for Paramount. Their Paramount association ended late last year.

Deborah Kerr, star of the legitimate show, "Tea and Sympathy," recently lived her role as she poured tea for Jack Kirsch, president, Allied Theatres of Illinois, who was honored at a testimonial banquet at the Covenant Club, Chicago, recently. Miss Kerr hands Israel Bond subscription blank which is for admission to testimonial, to Kirsch.

Skouras Optimistic On 20th-Fox Future

NEW YORK—In a message included with the company's annual report, Spyros P. Skouras, president, 20th-Fox, predicted that its domestic business would be as good or better than last year with a "marked increase in foreign grosses."

Skouras based his confidence on the company's pictures in production or preparation, planning to release about 25 pictures, 20 to be made by 20th-Fox in Hollywood and the balance from independents here or abroad.

Increased foreign returns are expected to result from the increasing number of CinemaScope installations abroad and unplayed product available, plus the fact that TV is little competition there. The firm has also extended its theatre outlets abroad, operating 10 in England, three in India, one in South Africa, with two under construction and another planned, and another set for Israel.

Film rentals reached an all-time high of $106,355,068 last year, of which domestic rentals accounted for $65,018,411. In 1953, rentals were $105,662,266, with domestic rentals $67,309,274, as number of features released dropped from 32 to 22. The average cost of a feature with stereophonic sound was about $2,000,000 as against $1,300,000 before CinemaScope, although comparative costs are lower because of fewer camera setups needed, the increase being due to making bigger pictures. The book value of 20th-Fox common stock increased from $29.50 a share to $31.39 a share during 1954. Management purchased 100,000 shares of stock on the open market at an average of $19.92 a share, now holding 125,000 shares in the company treasury.

A revised schedule of 16 major, top-budgeted productions to be released domestically between April and September of this year was announced recently by 20th-Fox. Of the total, 13 are in CinemaScope and in color and three are in standard dimension, one in color.

SW Net Soars

NEW YORK—Stanley Warner Corporation and subsidiary companies report for the 26 weeks ending Feb. 26, 1955, an operating profit of $3,648,300, before losses arising from the sale of fixed assets and provisions for contingencies and Federal and Canadian income taxes. The losses on sales of fixed assets were $176,700, the provision for contingencies $25,000 and the provision for Federal and Canadian income taxes $1,825,000. The net profit after all charges is $1,621,600, equivalent to 73 cents per share on 2,208,680 shares of common stock outstanding. The figures include operations of International Latex Corporation which was acquired April 30, 1954.

For the 26 weeks ending February 27, 1954, the operating profit was $2,030,800 before profit on the sale of fixed assets and provision for Federal income taxes. The profit arising from the sale of fixed assets was $20,600, the provision for contingencies $75,000 and the provision for estimated Federal income taxes $785,000. The net profit after all charges for the 26 weeks ending February 27, 1954, was $1,191,400, equivalent to 50 cents per share on the 2,367,696 shares of common stock.

WOMPI To Benefit From Variety Advice

TORONTO—A suggestion was made to members of the Women of the Motion Picture Industry at their charter dinner by J. J. Fitzgibbons that they should feel free to ask the Variety Club for advice.

The president and managing director of Famous Players told the women who make up the first organization of its kind in Canada that they "need not copy Variety," but that they could approach the senior club "for expert and honest financial advice."

He warned them that they should avoid cliques, pointing out the road ahead was difficult, but, like the Variety Club, the women would be able to overcome any difficulties.

Fitzgibbons told how in the early days of the Variety Club in Toronto it appeared a "hopeless" undertaking, "but I think it proved a success because it was too big and every member gave what he had to give regardless of creed, color or origin."

A theatre and movies would be provided the women by Variety, said Fitzgibbons, to aid them in any fund-raising projects. President Anne Kaplan received the charter for the club from Max Chic, associate editor, Canadian Moving Picture Digest. Already, she told members, the membership had pitched in to provide clothing, food, and toys for needy families at Christmas.

Canadian Comment

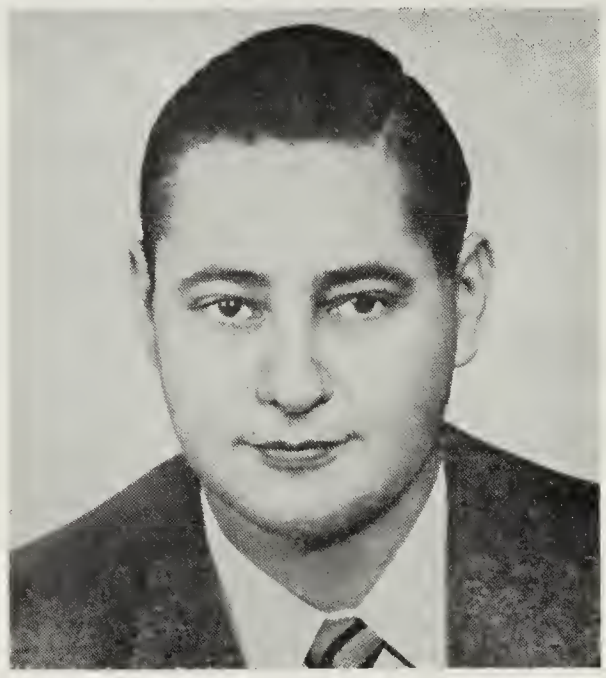
Sometimes known in the Canadian motion picture industry as the "seer," humorously, but certainly a tremendous fount of knowledge insofar as the industry is concerned, Hye Bossin was recognized with a special award from the Canadian Film Awards Committee.

Bossin, editor, Canadian Film Weekly, was given the award in recognition "of his distinguished contributions to the film industry in Canada and particularly his promotion of the Canadian Film Archives."

Bossin, who started his career as a printer's devil, finally landed in the front office of the Star Weekly in front of a typewriter where he wrote the memorable "Tattlers' Tales" column. Later, he shifted to the editorship of the Film Weekly.

In this position, he has been given the opportunity of doing for the film industry what a hundred public relations men have been unable to do, become a friendly source of facts and figures about the industry. He is known to have been responsible for the rise in the writing careers of many in the entertainment industry, and there isn't a columnist in Canada who hasn't depended on Bossin's weekly magazine for material two or three times a week.

Top award given by the Canadian Film Awards went to the National Film Board production, "Stratford Adventure," the story of the Shakespeanean Festival in Stratford, Ont. Other awards went to such widely diversified groups as the Alberta Government Film Branch and the United Church Committee on Missionary Education.



Arnold M. Picker, United Artists' vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, recently announced that the company's first world-wide series of foreign sales conventions would be launched in London on May 3. The week-long session will bring together over 150 UA executives and representatives from Europe, the Near East, and South Africa.

The Telegram, Toronto, one of the country's largest newspapers is cooperating with Famous Players in the showing in Toronto of the Billy Graham movie, "The Mighty Fortress," when it opens at a number of suburban houses. The 40-minute picture, showing highlights of the American evangelist's crusade in London and continental Europe, was given a special screening for ministers in Toronto.

Personal attention in buying and booking of films is promised by Curly Posen, who recently resigned from Allied Theatres to form his own booking and buying organization in Toronto. At the present time, Posen claims to have 10 theatres signed to his organization. Posen, besides being well-known as an orchestra-leader in Toronto, is a veteran of 35 years in the theatre business, having started with the late Jack Goldhar.

During the recent newspaper strike in London, England, newsstands, naturally, could not furnish news of current film attractions in the theatres; but they did give over their stands to posters about Paramount's "Mambo" and "Conquest Of Space" and also distributed copies of Paramount's special news sheet carrying information about current West End films and news of current and forthcoming Paramount product.

65mm. Process Due For New MGM Films

HOLLYWOOD—E. J. Mannix, general manager, MGM, announced the development of a new 65mm. process to be used in new MGM pictures.

The new system involves filming the picture on 65mm. film in cameras having conventional mechanisms, but equipped to handle double sized film fed horizontally. The larger sized film is adaptable to projection on the largest screens now made, and reduction to 35mm. can be made which will make the picture suitable for either conventional large screen or CinemaScope projection. A special lens has been developed by Panavision, Inc., which will provide for simple operation. The system is adaptable to a multiplicity of sound systems now in use, whether magnetic or optical.

Mannix also announced that the studio's production facilities are being increased. Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production, announced that the company expects to begin filming its first picture in the new process in August. He announced that the studio would not film all its pictures in the new process, but only those which were "suitable." It was indicated that only color pictures would use the new system. Aspect ratios from 1.85 to 1 to 2.5 to 1 will be available.

Charles S. Chaplin, Canadian general manager, United Artists, has been elected president, Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association, which is composed of the Canadian general managers of all distributing companies. Veteran of 25 years in the industry, Chaplin is vice-chairman, Canadian Motion Picture Industry Council, and has been chairman, Motion Picture Section of the Community Chest, for the past four years. He is also a member of Empire Lodge, B'nai B'rith, the Toronto Board of Trade, Variety Club, Tent 28, and the Canadian Motion Picture Pioneers.

England

LONDON—Arthur Dent is using an anamorphic lens developed in France to produce black and white pictures indistinguishable on the screen from CinemaScope, it was learned last week. The lens produces a picture in the ratio of 2.55 to one. It is understood that the J. Arthur Rank Organizations are also experimenting with this lens.

France

PARIS—A new French-Italian co-production agreement, running until Dec. 31, 1957, was signed last week. The agreement states that only high-quality pictures can profit from co-production deals. The Italo-French film Accord Commission issued a statement that the co-production advantage should be used to produce pictures that will find favor with young people.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Old And New Ballyhoo Put Shine On Schine

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—Many have long advocated a return to the good old forms of showmanship of yesteryear, claiming that there's new boxoffice dollars to be found in the tried and proven bally of the good old days.

The Schine Circuit and its hustling managers have put into effect just such down to earth ad-pub-exploitation gimmiks in various towns, both large and small. Recent examples are the pie-eating contest (that's reaching 'way back, isn't it?) Dick Williams, manager, Avalon, Easton, Md., promoted in cooperation with the local Acme market. The pies were furnished free and the winners got additional prizes promoted from local merchants. To round out this oldie, Williams had other stage contests such as a balloon blowing contest, etc., none of which cost the theatre anything but time and effort.

Schine managers also seem to concentrate more and more on kiddie matinees, dreaming up a flock of stunts to keep the youngsters, the adult patrons of tomorrow, coming again and again. Recently, special Easter shows had live rabbits and baby chick given away in many houses.

In Van Wert, O., Clarence Cropper, Van Wert, has set his kiddie Safety Club ir motion, sponsored by the local Odd Fellows Lodge. The program has just started and the free show will be held on July 18. Both the Sheriff and Police Departments are assisting. At Federalsburg, Md., Pearl Bryant's Easter Kiddie Show at the Federal was more successful this year than last, according to her reports. Two big live bunnies were given to the kids and she promoted a 40 pound Easter egg from the local druggist. The kids even took the trouble to thank her for the wonderful party.

In Lexington, Ky., Foster Liederbach, Strand, pulled a "Davy Crockett Pantomime Contest" on stage, similar to the pantomime seen on TV, to the tune, "The Ballad Of Davy Crockett." Naturally, the entrants were mostly kids who had done this sort of thing in school shows. Liederbach promoted a three-way phonograph as first prize; but the big pay-off proved to be a tieup made with the local TV station. It seems there is a gal who does a pantomime show there, and she was plugging the contest. She was also on stage at the contest to invite the winner to appear with her on her show. Along with the lobby display was the record player plugging the tune, and in the music shop which donated the player, a large poster plugged the contest and prize.

These few instances should serve to prove that the Schine managers are on their toes week in and week out—selling to the best of their abilities in down to earth fashion the attractions as they come along or cooperating with local authorities and people so that all become friendly and have fun at the movies—making holiday rentals easier to obtain and creating a link of good will between patrons and management hard to break down.

In connection with the New Haven territorial saturation openings of U-I's "Revenge Of The Creature" starting at the Roger Sherman, New Haven, recently, a monster stunt was used as can be seen with the same costume and stunt being duplicated in Bridgeport, Waterbury, Hartford, and Stanford, all in Conn. U-I developed the street bally to aid all the openings with the individual managers reporting considerable attention to their towns.

NSS Promotes Memorial Day

NEW YORK—National Screen Service announced it has available Memorial Day trailers to help exhibitors of both conventional theatres and drive-ins make May 30 a big money weekend.

Dance From "Daddy" Aids Picture Ballyhoo

Over a period of weeks, an estimated TV audience of 359,083,000 will be reached by programs plugging the songs, dances, and stars of the musical. Beginning on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town," the picture has been ballyhooed on "What's My Line," "I've Got A Secret," "The U. S. Steel Hour," "Masquerade Party," and the "Buick Berle Show."

A group of Fred Astaire dancers introduced "Sluefoot," one of the dances in the picture, on "Toast of the Town," and the entire score of the picture will be featured on CBS's "On A Sunday Afternoon" national network radio program.

Decca records has recorded the Four Aces in "Sluefoot," and Sammy Davis, Jr., in "Something's Gotta Give," and is putting tremendous promotion behind these records. To give the disc jockeys a variety to choose from, the same two songs have been recored for Coral Records, with the McGuire Sisters doing "Something's Gotta Give," and the Modernaires waxing "Sluefoot," with Bob Crosby's orchestra. The orchestra featured in the film, Ray Anthony's aggregation, have made for Capitol a special recording of the same two songs and also "Dream" and "Thunderbird."

Fred Astaire dance studios in 135 key cities across the country are scheduled to introduce and teach the "Sluefoot," planning to organize "Sluefoot" clubs. Dance Magazine is sponsoring a national dance contest, with trips to Hollywood as prizes.

To stimulate the interest of teen-agers, full page ads in color are scheduled to come out in May in Seventeen, Mademoiselle, Charm, and Glamour, which have a readership of over 20,000,000. Two page, two-color adds are being placed in all the national fan magazines to heighten the effect.

Exhibs "Do-It-Themselves"

NEW YORK—The "Do-It-Yourself" Department, inaugurated by RKO publicity director Perry Lieber in the company's recent pressbooks has not only caught on with exhibitors but, industry-wise, offers proof that there are plenty of live-wire showmen in small towns as well as big cities across the nation.

Under this set-up, RKO offers a $10 bill for each Do-It-Yourself exploitation idea which requires no cost, or a small cost, from any theatre employee, if used in a pressbook. Contributors' pictures are used with the winning ideas, which can apply to a specific RKO picture or may be workable for general exploitation.

Pressbook editor Phil Gersdorf reports a growing enthusiasm for the idea.

CANDYDLY SPEAKING

PERHAPS THE MOST significant advancement in the drive-in field in recent years has been the increased importance of concession operations and the growing percentage of profits that result from these operations.

THE TREND can be traced to the first exhibitor who realized that the great outdoors was conducive to sharpening the appetite, and the family car was not only an ideal place to sit while watching a movie but also the perfect spot for a snack, a sandwich, and, more recently, an entire meal.

THE ADDITION of new items in concession stand activity created a wide demand for equipment and services hitherto outside the scope of the theatre field. Many problems peculiar to the motion picture industry had to be solved, and concessionaires, equipment dealers, and suppliers were on hand with trained personnel to aid exhibitors in extra profits expansion.

SANDWICHES, PLATTERS, and other hot items must be prepared in volume for distribution during limited intermission periods. Merchandise must be available for extensive storage without spoilage. Through freezing and the introduction of a variety of equipment changes and improvements, these problems were faced and solved. There is apparent now a trend in the building of new outdoor showplaces to expend an increasing percentage of total investment for concession stands and kitchen equipment.

FOR THESE REASONS and to acquaint theatremen with new and proven ideas in hot food merchandising, this issue of EXTRA PROFITS is devoted to activity in this field, with particular emphasis on the variety of equipment available and suited particularly for drive-in use.

Hot Foods Fuel Drive-In Concession Stand Profits

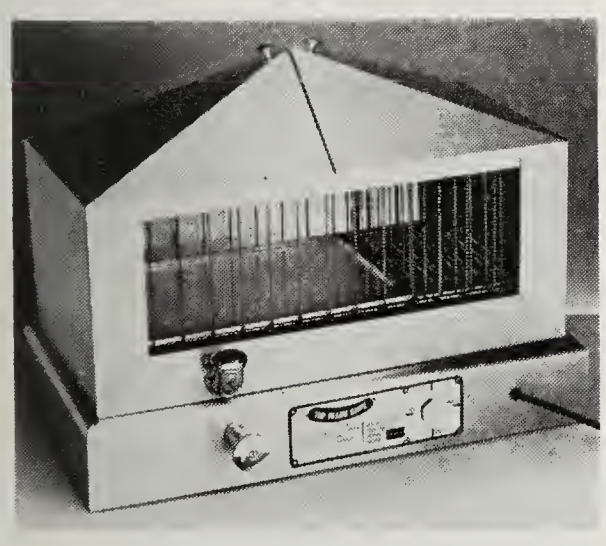
Shrimp Roll, Turkey Steamroller

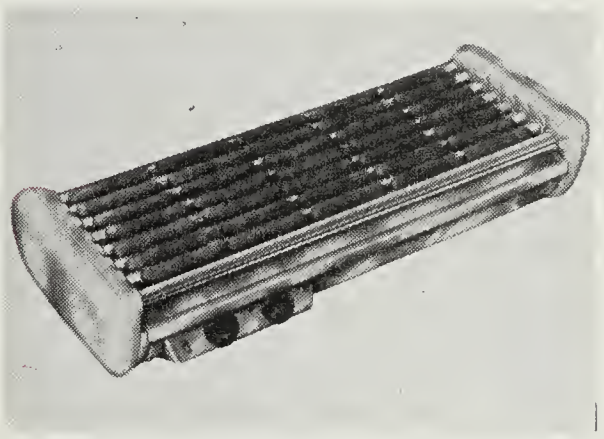
NEW YORK—Flavo-Rite Foods, Inc., announced the new Turkey Steamroller is now available to drive-in concessions. Consisting of turkey, gravy, and green peas in a bun, they will be delivered frozen in cartons containing 48 units. To serve, insert the roll in an individual glassine bag provided, and place it in the bun warmer until heated through. At a temperature of 200 degrees, they will be ready in 25 minutes. They will then remain hot throughout the evening, and the unsold balance can be cooled, refrigerated, and re-heated for the next performance. Flavo-Rite also makes shrimp rolls, now being sold in over 1,000 drive-ins. A mixture of shrimp, celery, and seasonings encased in flaky noodle jacket, they can be served with two minutes of deep frying. Since this is a meatless item, it perks up the normal Friday slack, although also sells well during the week. These come frozen, 50 to the carton, and can be kept under normal refrigeration up to 10 days, although it is recommended that two or three days supply be placed under refrigeration and the rest in deep freeze.

Manley, Inc.
Frank-Bank



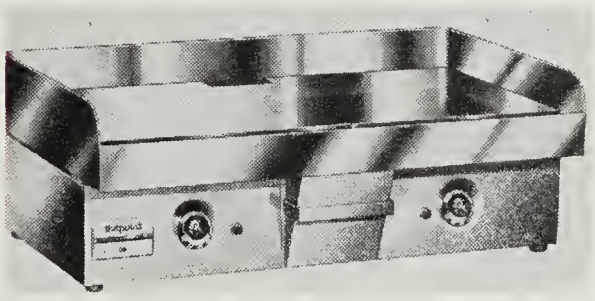
KANSAS CITY—Hot dogs cooked and served the Manley Frank-Bank way are said to be just the thing for drive-in concession operation. It's a big capacity hot dog machine holding seven dozen buns, 10 dozen hot dogs, or five dozen hot dog sandwiches. The top is removable and can easily be used in self-service drive-ins for quicker, easier service. The just-right water temperature is positively controlled. Heat may be varied through three heats. The bun rack is adjustable to make them fresh, or keep them fresh. The variable heat selector offers a positive control so that one can steam hot dogs at 350, 700, or 1,400 watts. This big capacity machine will speed your service and help you get the most out of hot food operations at outdoor concession stands.

J. J. Connolly, Inc.
Roll-A-Grill



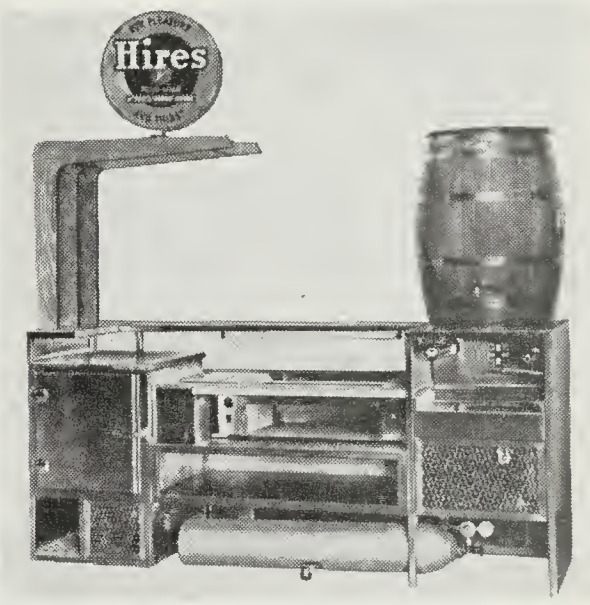
NEW YORK—An entirely new, compact, budget priced frankfurter grill, with a capacity of 35 franks at a time and 700 per hour, has been introduced by J. J. Connolly, Inc. The grill, Roll-A-Grill Model A-35, operates by an exclusive patented principle, fast heating rollers automatically turn the franks over and over at a slow, even speed. It is said to increase the size of the frankfurter up to 50 per cent and operate without smoke or odor. It eliminates the need for constant watching. The stainless steel rollers do not need greasing and will not rust, stain, or tarnish. The unit features easy field maintenance, and carries a full year's guarantee. It has eight rollers, with seperate heating controls for each set of four rollers. Heat can be lowered, increased or shut off in each set of four rollers as required. A smaller model, Roll-A-Grill Model C-14, cooks 14 franks at a time, 280 per hour.

Hotpoint Company
Rocket 12 Griddle



CHICAGO—The new Hotpoint Rocket 12 Griddle which will be formally unveiled at the National Restaurant Show beginning May 9 bears the unique distinction of being the world's most powerful and fastest big production electric griddle. Among the claims made for this new griddle is that it cannot be "killed" even under continuous loads of frozen hamburger on a 24-hour a day schedule. It automatically assures perfect quality control. The grid of this griddle plate is 36 inches long by 18 inches deep, with the entire grid area usable for cooking. It is capable of producing over 700 quarter-pound hamburgers every hour. Orrin E. Wolf, vice-president in charge of Hotpoint's commercial division, explained that on the new Rocket 12 a high temperature setting was unnecessary. After it has reached the correct dialed temperature, the small temperature drop is compensated for automatically and the griddle is returned to correct cooking temperature. Features of the new Rocket 12 include two sectional heat controls that permit the operator to use either side of the griddle independently; automatic signal lights that indicate when the griddle has reached correct cooking heat; front and back grease drain for easier scraping of the griddle; new grease guard on back and sides protects counter and wall from splattering; preheats to 375 degrees F. in 7.7 minutes; and new six-quart capacity removable grease container.

Charles E. Hires Company
Hires Snack Bar



PHILADELPHIA—The Charles E. Hires Company, originators of the Hires Snack Bar, pioneer in 1876 of the famous keg, and developer leader of dispensing equipment, again contributes an important first to beverage merchandising with the their eight foot and six foot snack bars. The eight foot bar is counter height, 45 inches; eight feet long with a 30-inch width and an over-all height, including revolving sign, of nine feet one inch. Features of the Hires snack bar are its high geared sales attractiveness, exclusive design of stainless steel and beautiful natural oak. It is a completely self-contained unit, ready for instant operation, featuring Hires own profit proved keg, unexcelled for fast service and its exclusive simplified expense saving faucet, either ice cooled or electrically refrigerated. The high speed frankfurter grill operates with fluorescent lighting for natural color appeal and dominating revolving sign for maximum attention. Included are generous stainless steel storage shelving and sink with hot and cold water faucet and full length hard maple cutting board; bun warmer of high capacity, easily removed as complete unit for cleaning, thermostatically controlled; and built in space saving cup dispensers and two self-closing waste containers. The Hires Snack Bars also come in six foot and 10 foot sizes.

Ice/Cader Available

CHICAGO—The Ice/Cader is Frigidrink Dispenser Company's reply to the demand for an ice-cooled dispenser for non-carbonated beverages. An enclosed and sealed pump circulates the beverage through stainless steel coils in the ice chamber. As in the other popular Frigidrink dispensers, merchandising effectiveness is increased by illuminating the beverage as it flows over plastic cascades within the sparkling clear glass bowl. This combination of light, color, and animation has proven to be a sales stimulator.

The Ice/Cader is easily filled with ice and can be maintained and cleaned without difficulty. Among its features are stainless steel fast-flow faucet, hammertone steel base with etched and anodized inner lining, extra heavy insulation, and almost instantaneous cooling in stainless steel coils.

Popcorn Seasoning Bar Developed By E. F. Drew

BOONTON, N. J.—E. F. Drew and Company recently announced the availability of the Tasty-Pop popcorn seasoning bar through the 29 nationally located offices of the National Theatre Supply Company.

The Tasty-Pop seasoning is packaged in ¼-pound bars to be used at a ratio of one bar to one pound of popcorn. A special hardening process was developed that raised the softening point enabling the company to package the seasoning in the convenient bar form.

The ease of handling has made it possible to carry stock in all National Theatre Supply branches and, it is stated, the convenience of the bar shape has boosted sales.

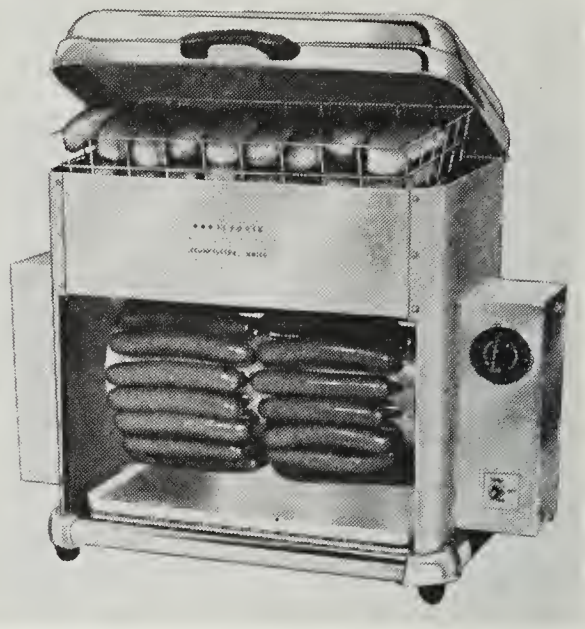
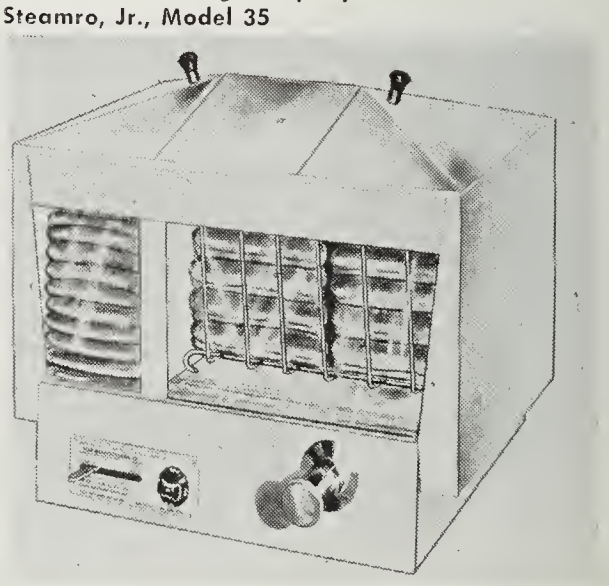
Broil-Quik Appliance Company
Infra-Red Frankfurter Grill



NEW YORK—The Broil-Quik Appliance Company has developed the new infra-red Broil-Quik Frankfurter Grill. It cooks frankfurters faster, tastier, and easier with penetrating infra-red rays. The grill consists of two easily removable drums, each drum individually operated with automatic controls. It has two incaloy sheathed tubular infra-red grilling elements, one in the center and one at the top of each drum. Each drum holds 40 frankfurters. The grilling is done on one drum at a time while the other can keep the finished franks hot and tender for hours. The grill can cook 40 frankfurters every five minutes. Each drum is automatically timed. When the frankfurter is cooked, the heat is automatically turned to medium. The grill has a bun warmer on top with a water pan which steams the buns and keeps them soft and tasty. It is made of triple chrome plated steel and the drums are of stainless steel. It can be easily cleaned. It measures 21 inches wide, 11½ inches deep, and 28 inches high. This unit comes in two sizes, Model F with two drums, which holds 80 frankfurters, and Model FJR with one drum, which holds 40 frankfurters. Otherwise, both models are similar in every respect.

Star Manufacturing Company
Steamro, Jr., Model 35



ST. LOUIS, MO.—Star Manufacturing Company is now featuring the Star Steamro, Jr., Model 35, electric combination hot dog steamer and bun warmer. Low in cost, it is a compact counter unit for serving piping hot frankfurters and buns quickly and conveniently.

"As soon as we switched to

says Mr. Will J. Conner,
. . . Executive Vice President of the John Hamrick organization, operating 16 theatres in Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., and Portland, Ore., with executive offices at 410 Orpheum Building, Seattle.

Mr. Conner says, "The butterlike flavor that POPSIT PLUS gives popcorn did wonders for our refreshment stand sales. We wouldn't think of using any other popping oil today!"

Thousands of theatre operators, concessionaires and carnival men have had the same experience. POPSIT PLUS gives popcorn an easy-to-sell flavor . . . leaves fewer duds in the bottom of your popper . . . and because it's always liquid, it's convenient to pour, measure and store.

Test POPSIT PLUS in your own refreshment stands for just one week. You'll make it your only popping oil from then on.

Made Only of Pure Peanut Oil made by
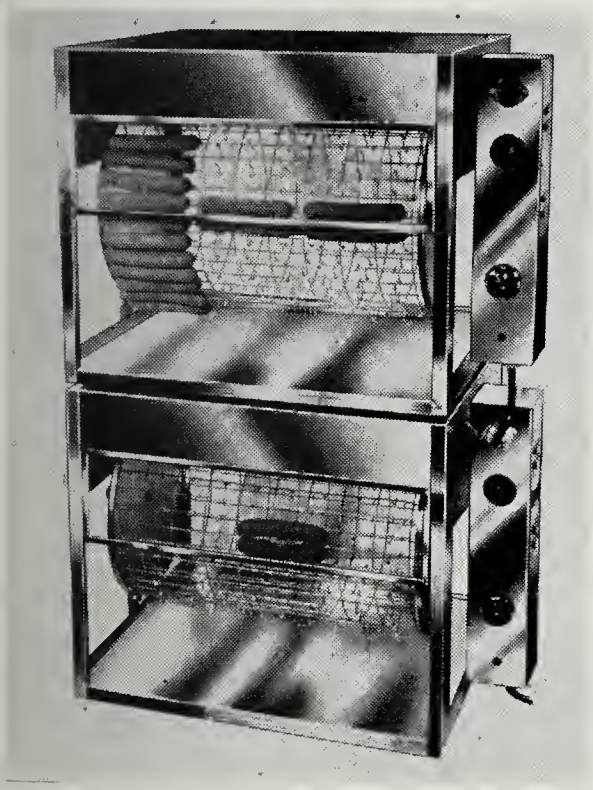
C. F. Simonin's Sons, Inc., Phila. 34, Pa.

Its efficient, economical steaming process prevents frankfurters from shriveling, drying out or becoming tough. A Fenwall Thermostat provides proper heat at all times. An adjustable humidity control keeps buns fresh and hot to retain their flavor and provide for instant service.

The steamer section holds up to 150 hot dogs and the bun warmer section holds from 30 to 40 buns depending on size.

The model makes an attractive counter display unit being of bright red baked enamel. It is said to be easy to install, easy to clean and its sturdy construction comprises stainless steel metal body, racks and trays; heavy-duty enameled steel base; three removable aluminum hinged lids; solid brass chrome plated drain valve; three quart stainless steel water reservoir; heavy-duty Chromalox imbedded type element; and plate glass compartment display windows. Its overall size is 13¼ inches by 18 inches by 16 inches high.

Dalason Products Manufacturing Company Jumbo Bar-B-Frank



CHICAGO—Due to demands from many sources, including drive-ins, Dalason Products Manufacturing Company is making what is known as the Jumbo Bar-B-Frank machine, which barbecues over 1,000 hot dogs per hour. It is said a larger, juicier, fluffier, more tasty frankfurter results when cooked on a Bar-B-Frank, because infra-red coils are accurately spaced to cook from the center out, opening up every grain of meat to bring out its full flavor. All models are made of same top quality, like 302 stainless steel, Robertshaw thermostat, Dalgrid Infra-Red unit, Super-Test heavy duty motor, which is why the mechanical operation of all parts are guaranteed a full year. All parts are easily removable for cleaning and satisfy all state food requirements. The Jumbo Bar-B-Frank Model 900 holds 111 average franks, up to 555 per hour. It is 19½ inches high; 27 inches wide; has a depth of 17 inches; uses 1250 watts; and has a shipping weight of 45½ pounds. The Jumbo Bun Warmer Model 905, drawer type, with water reservoir and thermostat, handling 100 buns at a time, processing 1,000 per hour, has a height of 10¾ inches, a width of 25 inches, a depth of 17 inches and uses 475 watts. Its shipping weight is 37 pounds.

IPA Convention Plans Set; Siegel Named

CHICAGO—The popcorn and concession industries "Greatest Show" will take place Nov. 6-9 at the Morrison Hotel when International Popcorn Association joins with National Allied, TESMA, and TEDA to present "Popcorn, Candy, and Concession Hall," devoting the entire third floor exhibitor area to popcorn and concession items, IPA will offer 117 booths to exhibiting supply firms.

Carl Siegel, Stanley Warner Management Corporation, New York, has accepted the exhibition chairmanship for the 1955 show. Siegel, who also was exhibit chairman last year for IPA's Popcorn, Candy and Concession Hall during the TOA-IPA-TESMA-TEDA show at the Conrad Hilton, has announced a special exhibition committee to assist him.

Serving on the committee are Bert Nathan, Theatre Popcorn Vending Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., and president, IPA; Lee Koken, RKO Theatres, New York City; Lester Grand, Confection Cabinet Corporation, Chicago; Melvin Berman, Tri-States Automatic Candy Company, Buffalo; Leo Beresin, Berlo Vending Company, Philadelphia; Joe Kernell, ABC Vending Corporation, New York; Nat Buchman, Theatre Merchandising Corporation, Cambridge, Mass.; and Loyal Haight, W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Detorit.

Although advance requests for booth space made by supply firms will take 80 per cent of the 117 booths, none have been assigned as yet. The exhibit brochures will be mailed April 23 and all booth reservations will be accepted in the order in which they are received, with the postal date on the envelope controlling.

Allied supply firms selling popcorn concession items, machinery, and equipment and who are desirous of exhibiting at IPA's 1955 show are requested to write to Carl Siegel, exhibit chairman, International Popcorn Association, 201 North Wells Street, Chicago.

Peanut Scarcity Seen In Wake Of Drought

WASHINGTON—Peanut candy, peanut butter, salted peanuts, and other peanut products will be higher in price and harder to buy in 1955 unless additional supplies of peanuts are imported to augment domestic production drastically decreased by drought conditions in southeastern and southwestern growing areas, Charles F. Scully, president, Williamson Candy Company, Chicago, said here recently at a peanut hearing before the Tariff Commission. Scully was spokesman for the National Confectioners' Association, an organization of candy manufacturers.

Scully, chairman, Association's peanut committee, said, "Government reports indicate that the total 1954-1955 crop of peanuts is estimated at over 34 per cent less than the 1953-1954 crop, and 47 and 50 per cent less, respectively, in the southeast and southwest areas where most of the Spanish peanuts, the principal type used by confectionery manufacturers, are grown."

Scully further said, "The present crop of 1,044 million pounds is the smallest crop since 1934 when 1,014 million pounds were harvested. The population of the United States in 1934 was about 37 million less than at present. Obviously, a supply of peanuts adequate for a population of 123 million is inadequate to satisfy 160 million people. A present population with a national income of over 300 million dollars certainly would purchase more peanuts than the population of 1934 with a national income of 40 million dollars.

"Shelled peanuts are now selling at about 25 cents per pound, a 30 per cent increase in the last three months, with prices received by farmers above the Government price support level," Scully said. The confectionery industry uses over 22 per cent of the total edible peanut crop.

"The consumer of peanut products will have less of these favorite American foods to eat," Scully said, "unless help in the form of additional quantities can be obtained from outside the United States. The confectionery industry asks that all restrictions on importation of peanuts be removed until Aug. 1, 1955, and that a hearing be held then to determine what restrictions, if any, should be imposed."

Maurice Glockner was recently elected vice-president and director of purchasing of Automatic Canteen Company of America. He had been associated with the Schine organization for 18 years and was also an executive, A.B.C. Vending Corporation.

NATIONAL THEATRE SUPPLY

Mills Open House

CHICAGO—Now established at its new location at 4235 West North Avenue, Mills Industries recently opened house to a crowd estimated at nearly 400. Customers, distributors and long time associates of Mills came from across the nation to inspect the new facilities, meet new top management and see the latest Mill equipment in operation. Thomas J. Riggs, Jr., president of both F. L. Jacobs Company and Mills Industries; Jack Keller, vice-president and general manager of F. L. Jacobs Company; and Pete Maloy, new sales manager, Mills, were on hand for the occasion along with the Mills sales and service personnel. Center of interest was the Millshake shake and malt machine which combines freezing, built-in refrigerated syrup pumps, and blending into a single unit. Mills personnel explained how these improvements over previous machines can help.

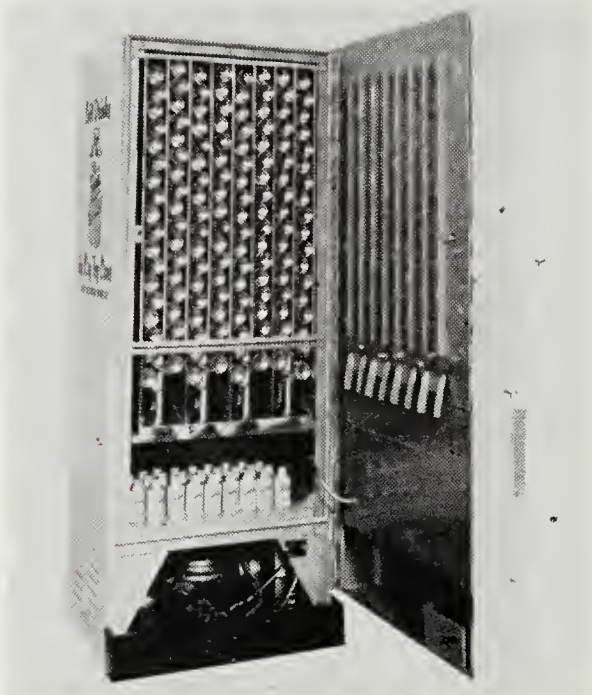
Malco Concession Tops

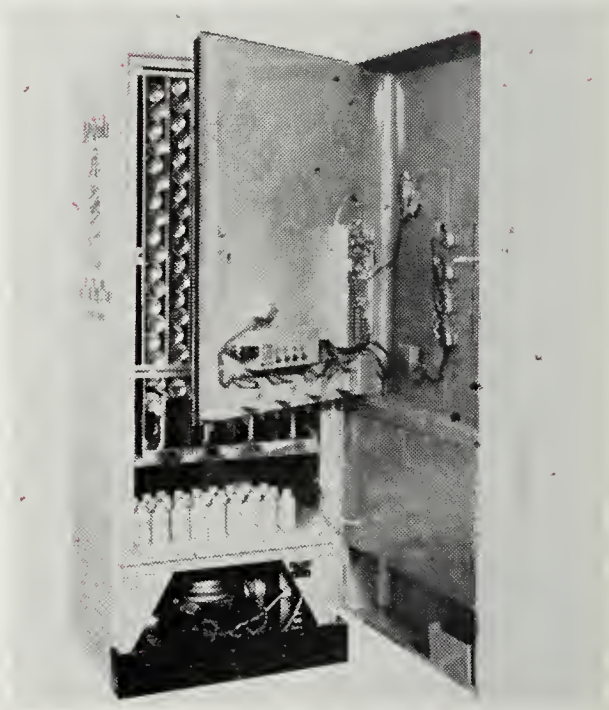
HELENA, ARK.—Employees of the Malco are proudly displaying a large gold plaque signifying that their concession stand is the best of all of the 22 United Theatres during the past month.

The award was started this year by M. S. McCord, president, Helena Theatres, and the local Malco is the first to be honored with it. It is awarded for best sales, cleanliness of the stand and appearance and courtesy of the employee, and will remain in the Malco Helena stand for 30 days and then will be again awarded to the outstanding United snack bar.

Super Coola Can Vendor Provides Maximum Service, Minimum Cost

HARTFORD, CONN.—Central Tool Co., Inc., are now manufacturing and distributing for the Cantrell and Cochrane Corporation the Choice Vend, multi-flavor, fully automatic can vending machine. The Choice Vend dispenses four flavors. The entire vending mechanism is built as a "packaged" unit and may be removed and replaced in a matter of minutes. Especially designed to vend the Super Coola six-ounce cone shaped, cap sealed can with sanitary drinking top, the Choice Vend comes as a sturdy, all-steel cabinet to withstand rough usage and to make it tamper proof. The Cantrell and Cochrane Corporation, located in Chicago, Englewood, N. J., Fort Worth, Tex., Lake Alfred, Fla., Los Angeles, and Narrows, Va., also furnish one gallon cans of syrup that can be used in a cup or counter vendor. The gallon cans of syrup are designed so that they can be reused.





NCA Convention Notes

CHICAGO—An important feature of the 72nd convention and 29th exposition of the National Confections' Association, scheduled for the Conrad Hilton Hotel on June 5 to 9, will be discussions among delegates aimed at increasing the sales of candy throughout the country. An important outlet for candy on the retail level and one that is certain to come in for its share of attendance is the theatre concession stand, in both indoor and outdoor situations.

According to the announced agenda, made public by the convention program committee, several sessions will be devoted to sales, sales promotion, and other merchandising ideas designed to increase candy consumption.

Harvic Has Pizza Oven

NEW YORK—The Harvic Supply Corporation recently announced the introduction of a counter model pizza oven with two baking decks. It is known as model G-218 and is equipped to operate with any kind of gas, manufactured, bottled, or natural. Besides preparing pizza, it is also designed to roast meat and fowl and to bake cakes and bread.

On "The Glass Slipper," at the Sheridan, Miami Beach, Fla., Florida State's publicist Al Glick had a comprehensive campaign to find a "Cinderella." Herb Rau, Miami Daily News amusement page columnist, used practically his entire column for the contest and a picture. Other publicity breaks occurred in The Miami Beach Sun and "This Week" and "Movie Vues" magazines, both Miami Beach publications. "Prince Charming" conducted his search for the young lady with the right shoe size in most of the ocean front hotels, including the fabulous Saxony, Fountainebleau, and Roney Plaza. The "search" was also made around the high schools. Finals were held at the Sheridan with comedian Gene Baylos, manager Tom Capuzzi, and Sy Bloom, Mary Jane Shoes, as judges. All ads in the Cinderella search gave the picture and playdate and theatre credit. Glick's campaign proved its worthiness at the box-office.

Tennessee

Chattanooga

Local 259, IATSE and MPO of the U. S. and Canada, has answered in a demurrer charges against its procedures filed recently in chancery court by three members of the union. The complainants are W. L. Bryan, Carlyle W. Patterson, and J. Paul Smith. The demurrer said the plaintiffs have not exhausted all the normal out-of-court union remedies in their case, and as members of the IATSE consented to be disciplined by its constitution and by-laws. The plaintiffs alleged the local and its officers had discriminated against them in assigning operators to motion picture theatres in the Chattanooga area and that the union has violated Tennessee's open-shop law in failing to enter into written contracts with the operators' employers. The demurrer cited a section of the IATSE constitution which states each local is granted the right of home rule "to exercise full and complete control over its own affairs" as long as no local's regulations conflict with the constitution and union by-laws. In reply to the allegation that Local 259 would not admit the plaintiffs to membership, the demurrer said the IATSE's rules give a local the right to say who shall become members. The charge that the local has violated the open-shop law was disputed. Only an employer is affected by the statute, the demurrer stated. There is no restriction on a labor union, it added. The demurrer said the complainants are not proper parties to seek an accounting of the local's funds since they are not members. Bryan, Patterson, and Smith charged they are members of the IATSE but never have been permitted to vote in affairs of Local 259. They said they went to the courts after trying unsuccessfully with both the local and international to join Local 259 and get the privileges of its voting members.

Pendleton pointed out that the speed limit in he drive-in area is 10 miles per hour. Magisrate Willard Norris fined Lewis $25 and $4 costs but suspended the fine. He sternly lectured the youth and said that in a repeat performance the fine would be tacked onto any other he might receive.

Mt. Vernon

George Cameron, manager, Schine's Vernon, has already tied in with the local Ground Observer Corps, and local merchants on a Memorial Day event. This is but another example of how theatres can tie in with almost any civic event, thus keeping themselves in the forefront of the populace. A front page news story in the Mount Vernon news in heralding the forthcoming event stated, "The Ground Observer Corps has announced it will seek a GOC queen and two attendants to ride on its float in the Memorial Day parade this year. The contest will be open to married or unmarried women, aged 21 to 29, living in Mount Vernon and vicinity. Entrants need not be members of the GOC, but if the final winner is not now a member she must become an active member. The queen will receive a $25 savings bond and the two attendants will receive gift certificates from Ringwalt's and Rudin's. The winner will be chosen by applause meter at the Veron Theatre. GOC states entries must be in by May 15 and blanks may be obtained at Rudin's, Ringwalt's, or the Vernon Theatre."

Marion

This city of 35,000 population may soon be without movie entertainment in indoor theatres. The Palace and Marion, operated by Northio Theatres Corporation, closed in protest against City Council's refusal to repeal the city's three per cent admission tax. The State and Ohio, the other two Marion houses, may be closed soon. Following arguments presented at the meeting of the Council by theatremen, the repeal proposal was referred to the city's finance and utilities committees. City Council will hear the committees' reports on May 9. Appearing before the Council were Robert Coyne, representing COMPO; Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio; Harold Brown, general manager, Northio; and Gilbert Green, Northio district manager; Lee Kramer, manager, Ohio; James Rairdon, manager, Palace and Marion; and Charles Settos, owner, State.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Chicago

An overflow of more than 650 Guardians of Israel, each of whom had purchased a $1,000 bond, attended the testimonal dinner for Jack Kirsch at the Covenant Club. He was presented a copper plaque handwrought in Israel of copper from the King Solomon mines in recognition of his efforts in behalf of Israel's economic defense. Jack Benny received an "Israel Oscar" showing the map of Israel, also from King Solomon mines copper. Kirsch expressed his appreciation of the honor and pledged a continuing effort to sell bonds to support the young nation. Judge Henry L. Burman, chairman of the board of governors, Israel Bond Organization, announced that April 19-May 19 has been declared Israel's Seventh Anniversary Month in Greater Chicago and that Mayor elect Richard J. The suit of Laura Blackburn Shaw, widow of Jack Blackburn, against United Artists and a group of local exhibitors, including the H and E Balaban chain and Warners Theatres, Inc., has been settled out of court. Mrs. Shaw receives $20,000 and a percentage of the prospective television gross of the movie. The suit arose out of the production and exhibition of "The Joe Louis Story," in which Blackburn is portrayed without consent of Mrs. Shaw. The settlement followed a precedent making decision by Judge John P. Barnes, United States District Court, Northern District of Illinois, who sustained the legal position advanced by Harold R. Gordon, Mrs. Shaw's attorney, that Blackburn's name and picture were rights which accrued to his estate and which could not be appropriated by anyone else for their own profit. This is the first time that a plaintiff in this type of case has sued for an appropriation of property rights, rather than invasion of privacy.

The fight to end the regulation requiring two men in a booth when safety film is used was won with the filing of an amendment to the exisiting regulations by Public Safety Commissioner Otis M. Whitney. The regulation became effective the day it was filed, April 21. The Commissioner's amendment states, "In the exhibition of motion pictures, no nitrate film shall be used. All film shall be acetate film, known as safety film. Every motion picture machine shall be equipped with a dowser handle and control switch operated from either side of the machine. While exhibiting motion pictures, the operator shall devote his entire time and attention to that work. In any theatre where the equipment in the booth meets with these requirements, and is approved by an inspector, only one operator will be required, otherwise two operators shall be in attendance during the exhibition of motion pictures." Under the existing law, use of nitrate film will be prohibited after the end of 1955, but some newsreel and other material is still in use on nitrate film. For this reason, Ray Feeley, executive secretary, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, is advising his members to be particularly careful to see that two operators are on duty if any such nitrate film is in the booth. Public Safety Department inspectors are on the watch to see that this requirement is met while any nitrate film is still in existence, he urged. In his office, Edward Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, said, "It has been a long up-hill battle by the exhibitors in the Commonwealth to have the burdensome and oppressive regulation lifted, requiring two men in a booth. A lion's share of the victory goes to IENE, led by former president Irving A. Issacs."

Completely recovered from his recent surgery in New Hampshire, David Zerinsky, Plaza, Derry, Mass., came to town with his wife to say bon voyage to Mrs. Zerinsky's parents, who had been visiting them from Manchester, England. The couple have one daughter, six-year-old Vivian. Dave's brother, Bob Zerinsky,

Goldman Appointed To IENE Position

BOSTON — Carl Goldman has been appointed executive secretary, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, the local unit of National Allied. The position was made available due to the resignation of Ray Feeley, who has held the post for the past nine years. Feeley's recent acquisition of four independent theatres has pressured him into withdrawing from the IENE top spot to devote his full time to the operation and management of his new circuit. He will continue as an active member in the organization, however.

Goldman, 31, gave up his position as booker at Affiliated Theatres Corporation to accept the new assignment. His industry experience has been wide as he has had training in every phase of the business with the exception of distribution. His career started in his high school days when he took a job as a part time usher at the Paramount, Boston, working his way up from doorman, chief of ushers, chief of service, to assistant manager. When American Theatres Corporation took over the Esquire, Goldman went in as assistant and later became full manager. After the theatre closed, he joined United Artists as a field representative. Later he became house manager at the Astor, Boston. In 1948, he joined Affiliated Theatres as a booker and has been there since except for a brief spell when he entered another field of business. He lives in Dorchester with his wife and son Joel, five, and daughter, Sandra, one.

In announcing the appointment, Edward Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., stated, "We are fortunate in being able to replace loyal hard-working Ray Feeley with Carl Goldman who has a broad background of experience in exhibition, who is aware of current industry problems, and who knows exhibitors from every state in New England. In his new full-time position as executive secretary of our active Allied unit, he will travel into the small towns all over the territory in order to bring Allied's opinions and policies to the grass roots exhibitors."

World War I, he is surivived by his widow, two sons, and a daughter. . . . Michael Bruno, owner, Tilton, Tilton, N. H., who visits the district regularly, was recently installed as Exalted Ruler of the Franklin Lodge of Elks.

Newly elected to the Board of Trustees at Variety Club's Children's Cancer Research Foundation in Boston were, left to right, Samuel "Steve" Broidy, president, Allied Artists; Ralph Wheelwright, executive at MGM, Hollywood, Cal.; Claire R. Emery, TV personality known as "Big Brother"; Simon H. Fabian, president, Stanley Warner Theatre Corporation; Leonard H. SAVEABLE REVIEW SERVICES were an innovation by MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR in 1936. Prior to that year many Trade Papers reviewed features and shorts, or at least listed them for reference purposes;—but none followed any uniform style or method that permitted saving in other than a heterogeneous glob in a scissors and paste pot scrapbook.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR changed all this! In 1936 it introduced a separate, saveable section, in which all reviews and indexes relating to any particular year were carefully brought to the executive theatreman for his current and future knowledge. Now imitated or adapted by most other Trade Papers, the basic method has never been improved.

But MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR went further than this! ONLY MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, down through the years, has maintained a 100% Review Coverage of ALL features and of ALL shorts, whether foreign or domestic, that were available to Executive Theatreman consideration. ONLY in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has continued to appear the MOST COMPLETE of all Reviewing Services. The record speaks for itself!

Wallingford

The Wallingford home of George H. Wilkinson, Jr., Wilkinson owner and MPTO of Connecticut president, was ransacked by thieves for the second time in two years. Police reported approximately $5,000 in stocks and a gold necklace missing.

Windsor Locks

Latest development in the civil suit against the Rialto was a disclosure by the Police Commission that it would "stand pat" on the situation. The Commission contends that the theatre owes the town some $1,800 for police duty. Owners of the downtown theatre, however, want to settle for $1,000 and have the ordinance withdrawn, or settle for $1,000 and have theatre staff members deputized. This information was passed on to the Commission last week by Town Counsel Anthony Ward.

Rhode Island

Providence

Spearheaded by the largest newspaper advertising campaign run in many years, in this territory, 16 Rhode Island theatres united in presenting "Davy Crockett, Indian Scout." Utilizing fantastically large units in the local and surrounding press, the houses combined to make this a record-breaking promotion: Castle, Elmwood, Hope, Uptown, and Liberty, all of Providence; Palace, Washington Park; Community, Centerdale; Olympia, Olneyville; Bijou, Woonsocket; Community, Wakefield; Hollywood, East Providence; Palace, Arctic; Park, Auburn; Route 44 Drive-In, Smithfield; Bay State Drive-In, Seekonk; Rustic Drive-In, North Smithfield; and Hilltop Drive-In, East Greenwich.

The Metropolitan, largest of the downtown houses, which has tried about every imaginable type of entertainment to keep in operation, recently announced that an attempt would be made to revive vaudeville in this area. Starting off with weekend shows, operating only Saturdays and Sundays, the Met will present six acts of vaudeville direct from New York, together with an outstanding screen attraction. With a top admission of 90 cents, management announces that if patronage warrants, a seven-day-a-week schedule will be in effect after the initial try-out.

It was recently announced that Robert F. Aiken, former chief-of-service, RKO Albee, was elevated to the rank of Airman Second Class.

Many other notables were present.

The following managerial changes took place in the Stanley Warner New Jersey zone this week. John Stanek, manager, Fabian, Hoboken, was upped to manager, Branford, Newark, due to the promotion of Bernard Silverman to district manager. Fred DeAngerlis went to the Fabian, Hoboken, from the Sanford, Irvington, and James Stavron, assistant manager, Branford, became manager, Sanford, Irvington. Morris Blacker, manager, Ritz, Newark, became manager, Tivoli, due to the resignation of A. Kirby, and Joseph Frankel became the manager, Ritz, Newark.

New York State

Albany

The independent and articulate Schenectady Union-Star editorially asked if the citizens of New York and four other states maintaining censorship "need statutory protection for their tastes in motion pictures more than 43 other states, or if Kansas will be any worse after June 30, when the present censorship law expires. Movies have been steadily improving, even without censorship in 43 states," continued the editorial. "Public opinion, not legal surveillance, accomplished it. Only an occasional picture was banned, and that sometimes raised a fury, as with "The Moon Is Blue."

Variety Club members, following the weekly dinner, held at Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel, inspected the new rooms which Tent 9 will occupy there. Manager George B. Chelius, Jr., a Variety member, arranged this layout. Harry Lamont served as King for a Day. Later, the diners repaired to the headquarters, where they viewed motion pictures of Camp Thacher and other Variety activities, photographed by Lamont.

Strand presented a group of beautiful girls and striking costumes in "Miss Albany Model of 1955" competition, staged with cooperation of the Albany Artists Group, to highlight the screening of "A World of Beauty," the annual Miss Universe contest film, and the Group's Beaux Art Ball. Young woman chosen "Queen" was crowned at the ball in the De Witt Clinton Hotel. She and two runners-up where chosen by a panel of judges on the Strand stage. Eight girls, including Geneva Barcomb, U-I stenographer, were introduced by Alex Blake, WABY disc jockey. Prizes went to the top three. Manager Al La Flamme and officers of Albany Artists Group, expressed satisfaction with the promotion, in which The Knickerbocker News joined.

Spar has been equipped with new lenses for CinemaScope, shown on its regular 60-foot-wide screen.

Fabian's Saratoga Drive-In reopened for its 15th season with a new wide-screen, on which "King of the Khyber Rifles" was shown as the first CinemaScope production. Roses to the women and cigars to the men in the first 250 cars, plus lollypops to all the children were an added feature of the relighting. George Lourinia manages the Saratoga, built by Neil Hellman in 1941.

A former Albany motion picture critic, Clifton E. Bradt, The Knickerbocker News, is suing Paramount for $125,000 for injuries claimed to have been suffered in attempting to rescue actress Cass Daley from a runaway steer on Bing Crosby's Elko, Nev., ranch while Bradt was there as guest of Paramount for the world premiere of "Here Comes the Groom." Bradt, now an editorial writer, stated in papers filed with the Albany County Clerk that the incident occurred July 31, 1951, during a riding contest staged by Paramount on Crosby's ranch. Miss Daley's steer broke loose as Bradt stood nearby, according to the complaint. In compliance with the instructions of the defendant's employes to "grab the rope," Bradt added, "he did so in an attempt to rescue the rider." The newspaperman contended he was thrown to the ground and dragged into a pile of rocks, suffering a broken collarbone and torn ligaments.

Chancellor Henry T. Heald, New York University, recently presented Stanley Kramer, producer, UA's forthcoming "Not As A Stranger," with a citation honoring his film achievements at ceremonies held in NYU's Vanderbilt Hall, as Mrs. Kramer looked on. Kramer is an alumnus of 1933.

The Evangelist, official weekly of Albany Roman Catholic Diocese, for the second time within a month set its editorial sights on a local theatre exhibiting a "condemned" by the National Legion of Decency picture. The Grand and "Three Forbidden Stories" were the target, under the caption, "Albany Theatre Shows Contempt For Decency." Editorial said, "The Grand Theatre, Albany, is the most recent movie house to bill a picture totally objectionable for all audiences. . . . Catholics as individuals and in groups as members of Catholic organizations, are reminded of their oath to uphold the principles governing the Legion of Decency, and are urged to demonstrate effectively their objections to the management of the Grand Theatre by boycotting this movie house."

Daylight saving time, often unwelcomed by theatre operators, is mandatory throughout New York State from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October this year. Governor Averell Harriman signed the Williamson bill changing the long-followed optional plan and extending "fast time" a month. The new schedule will "enrich our people's lives" and "should prove a boon to our working people who may spend more daylight hours with their families," commented the Governor in signing the measure. Its introducer, Senator Pliny W. Williamson, Scarsdale Republican, had said the legislation was designed to elminate time conflicts with neighboring states and clear up confusion within New York State.

A projected drive-in at Sidney, N. Y., ran into delay when the site originally selected had to be abandoned because the lights would interfere with planes landing at a nearby field, according to word from that Delaware County community. Another location was to be chosen.

The Federal Communications Commission held a hearing in Washington on a protest filed by Van Curler Broadcasting Corporation, operator, WTRI-TV, now off the air, over the change in ownership and control of Hudson Valley Broadcasting Company, operator, WROW-TV. Stanley Warner Theatre Corporation owns a 50 percent interest in Van Curler. The latter charges transfer of control of WROW to a new group of stockholders, headed by Lowell Thomas and Frank Smith, involved a prior agreement to shift the Columbia Broadcasting System's local alternate affiliation from MGM's 15th Ticket Selling Workshop held in Buffalo recently at the Statler Hotel drew a crowd of over 350 exhibitors from Canada and the Buffalo area. P. Byrne, eastern MGM sales manager; Tom Spencer, district sales manager for Coca-Cola; and Emery Austin, MGM exploitation head.

WROW to WTRI. When the latter happened, WTRI signed off, because it had no network connection and could not compete for advertisers and viewers. WROW also continued American Broadcasting Company and DuMont tie-ups. WRGB-TV, pioneer VHF station in Schenectady, holds a CBS hookup for many shows. WROW and WTRI are UHF operations. WTRI's sports and publicity director, Steve Davis, is a new father. Mrs. Davis recently gave birth to a daughter in Albany. Davis served in exploitation capacities for MGM and National Screen Service, New York, prior to joining WTRI- TV here. He also was sports director of a Glens Falls radio station at one time.

Buffalo

F. W. Durkee, Jr.'s latest teleplay, "Watch Me Die," performed on NBC's Philco TV Playhouse, has just been purchased for the movies by Lou Walters, owner, New York's Latin Quarter, who will make it his first venture as an independent Hollywood producer. . . . Safety clubs for children have been organized by Charles McKernan in the Seneca, and Bill Colson in the Niagara, both UPT community houses. The clubs have been endorsed by Francis P. Gaughan, police traffic director. Special membership cards are being presented to the children when they sign up at the Saturday matinees. Each card is numbered on the back and each Saturday there are special prizes for the kids. Members pledge to abide by all safety rules.

Arthur Krolick, district manager, Paramount theatres, Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y., returned from the world premiere of "Strategic Air Command" at the New York Paramount enthusiastic over the outlook for the local engagement at the Paramount the middle of May. Krolick also wired from New York greetings to the 2256th Air Reserve Flying Center from James Stewart. The Buffalo organization, the Bison Wing, is a lineal descendant of Stewart's World War II bomber command, and proud of the relationship.

Jack Tishkoff certainly went to town in announcing the re-opening of his Central drive-in on Long Pond Road near Rochester. Jack used big ads to announce the installation of a new CinemaScope screen and a new, enlarged ladies rest room, as well as a new refreshment pavilion. . . . There's a new drive-in, the Wehrle, near the drive whose name it has taken. It was constructed with all the fittings devised for presentation of the latest projection processes. Area drive-in operators have spent from $25,000 to $75,000 for new equipment, for remodeling, and for ground improvements. The half score now presenting programs changed Sundays and Wednesdays can accommodate close to 10,000 cars.

Myron Gross, manager, Buffalo cooperative Theatres office, sets 62 programs every week, every one with double features. The total is more than twice the number of theatres because eight of the 27 booked by Gross change their programs three times each week, while the majority change just twice. . . . Drive-ins in some instances are used for church services. The Skyway Niagara, for example, has been utilized for community services in the summer months for several years. Bill Brett, manager, Niagara, inaugurated the idea. There are several in the Rochester area used in like manner, where many were used this year for Easter Sunrise Services.

The Amateur Cinema Club of Buffalo put on its Ninth Annual Movie Salon in the Museum of National Science. Films shown were selected from the top 10 of the Maxim Memorial Winning Films of 1953. . . . Lester Pollock got a lot of publicity in the Rochester prints when he arranged to have newspaper photogs grab shots of Cleo Moore, who was in to do some tub-thumping for "Women's Prison," Loew's. . . . Eddie Meade, Shea circuit ad-pub chief, arranged a two-week exhibit on the mezzanine of Shea's Buffalo showing the work of the Buffalo chapter of the Professional Photographers Society of New York. Twenty-eight exhibitor members participated. The exhibit attracted much attention from patrons of the Shea circuit flagship. . . . Among the industryites who will attend the International Variety Clubs convention in Los Angeles, May 4-7, are Gus Basil, Basil Circuit and Mrs. Basil; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Jacobs; Mr. and Mrs. Billy Keaton; Dewey Michaels, Michaels Circuit; Mr. and Mrs. Dave Miller; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sciandra; and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Whiteman.

The Women's League of the Buffalo Variety Club announce the following new members: Fay Kahen, Freda A. Marcus, Mamie Olshan, and Mae A. Rowe. Happy birthday congratulations are in order for these league members, Lee Gross Adams, Lil Altman, Mary Basil, Helen Chinell, Rose Fried, Debby Gaines, Ruth Geffen, Nedra Gray, Bertha Kemp, Florence Kiley, Rita Rothschild, Pauline Shuman, Gladys Simon, Lillian Sussman, and Mildred Whiteman. . . . Sidney Pfeifer, prominent Buffalo attorney, and a member of the National Board of Directors, United Negro College Fund, Inc., was the speaker at the Variety Club of Buffalo Women's League luncheon and meeting in the Tent Seven headquarters.

The condition of Federal Judge John Knight, who presided at the lengthy Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., trial in Buffalo and from whom a verdict still is awaited, is "fair" according to Buffalo General Hospital, where he was taken following a mild stroke. Judge Knight, a resident of Arcade, N. Y., will celebrate his 84th birthday on April 29. . . . Elmer F. Lux, head, Elmart Theatres, and president, Buffalo Common Council, presided at a meeting of the board that operates Kleinhans Music Hall and at which Charles H. Diefendorf, board chairman, Marine Midland Corporation, and president, Marine Trust Company, was named the new president. Lux is second vice-president of the board, the official name of which is Kleinhans Music Hall Management, Inc.

Saundra Unger, biller, Paramount, was married to Sherman Chodrow, Buffalo accountant. Rabbi Joseph Fink officiated.

Gloversville

Following the screening of "East Of Eden," Glove, recently, manager John Corbett and Bob Van Buren felt that James Dean was going to be a star the teenagers could drool over. With the booking set, Van Buren worked out a plan to get the kids talking about Dean in advance and here is how it was done: A meeting was arranged of high school girls, at which an informal discussion was held in the theatre. This group was named the Young Theatre Group of Gloversville High School. Some of the girls had seen Dean on TV, and all were in accord that he was just what they would "go for." The young ladies elected a popular high school student as president of the Gloversville James Dean Fan Club. For a week in advance, a registration booth was in the lobby of the theatre. A 40x60 with a photo of Dean in a large red heart was featured, along with copy, "Join the James Dean Fan Club. See, etc." A message on the 40x60 was signed by the fan club president. Each night during the week several of the girls were around the lobby asking other girls to join the club. Their raves over the star were great plugs for the film. A special mimeographed form was made up saying that all girls should see James Dean in "East Of Eden." At the bottom was a space for them to fill in name, age and address. The club will have a complete filing system, keeping the names in alphabetical order. These forms also acted as heralds and were distributed in the high school, YWCA, and sorority groups, etc., by members of the club. Corbett made arrangements with the local radio station for the president to appear on a popular afternoon disc jockey show. She asked for members and also read off the names of those who'd joined so far. Corbett is securing photos of Dean to give club members and at the conclusion of the membership drive, a letter to the young star will be drafted and signed by all the girls. All in all, a great publicity stunt at local level to introduce a new star.

Tom MeMahon, manager, Sutton, New York City, reeently greeted the first 100 patrons lined up for the premiere of UA's "Marty" with free reeordings of the title tune.

Hoosick Falls

Maryland

Baltimore

A bill was introduced in City Council here by Councilman William Bonnett who also is a member of the City Planning Commission, urging that in the future, paved and marked parking lots shall be provided on the same building lot or within 300 feet of 12 types of structures, including motion picture theatres. The bill calls for one space for each four seats.

The Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc., has gone on record as being opposed to parking meters which are being advocated by the City Council. Theatre owners and exhibitors contend that the one-hour parking permitted by meters will discourage moviegoing. . . . Baltimore exhibitors attending the Variety Club's annual convention in Los Angeles include Jack Whittle, chief barker, Baltimore Tent; Pete Prince, MGM; Milton Schwaber, owner, Schwaber Circuit; Howard Wagonheim, also Schwaber Circuit, and Mrs. Wagonheim; and Milton Caplon.

J. Stanley Baker, head, Hicks-Baker Circuit, and Mrs. Baker were among "first-nighters" to see "The Seven Year Itch" at Ford's. . . . Aaron Seidler, New Albert, was in New York on business for several days. . . . Dom DeLawney, owner, Carroll and State, Westminster, Md., was in town for a business conference.

Leon Back, general manager, Rome Theatres, flew to California for a visit with his mother. . . . C. Robert Moore has joined the projectionists' staff at the Stanley. Miss Caryl Hamburger, manager, Little, was in New York for both business and pleasure.

Rodney Collier, Stanley manager, is hard at work as chairman, Baltimore Variety Club's benefit baseball game between the Baltimore Orioles and Boston Red Sox on the night of May 24 at Memorial Stadium. . . . Both the Stanley and State have signed to take the Marciano vs. Cockell championship fight over closed TV circuit on the night of May 16. . . . Harry Goldstein, Allied Artists, was in town handling advance promotions for "The Annapolis Story," due at Keiths. Together with Harold Colley, Keiths regular press chief, he put on a TV campaign to select a "date" for film actor Kevin McCarthy while he's in town for personal appearances.

Legislative Error Taxes Film Rentals In Maryland

BALTIMORE—An apparent error in the state legislature will add two per cent to the cost of all film rentals in the state, it became apparent last week with the passage of a law placing a two per cent tax on all rentals in the state.

The move was aimed at taxi fleets, truckers, and bus operators, who were evading Maryland's two per cent sales tax by leasing tires instead of buying them, so the same toll was placed on rentals. Exhibitors thought that their interests were being protected, but the rentals measure was included in a $30,000,000 omnibus tax bill passed at the last minute, and Governor Theodore R. McKelden, forced to sign the bill or have no tax law, signed it.

Exhibitor interests now will appeal to the State Tax Commissioner for a special ruling to exempt film rentals from the tax, which they held was the intent of the legislature.

Lady And The Tramp

CARTOON
75M.

(Technicolor) (CinemaScope)

ESTIMATE: Highly entertaining Disney cartoon feature.

CREDITS: The voices of Peggy Lee, Barbara Luddy, Larry Roberts, Bill Thompson, Bill Baucon, Stan Freberg, Verna Felton, Alan Reed, George Givot, Dallas McKennon, Lee Millar, and the Mello Men. Songs by Peggy Lee and Sonny Burke; associate producer, Erdman Penner; directed by Hamilton Luske, Clyde Geronimi, Wilfred Jackson.

STORY: In 1910, a cute puppy is given to a married couple, Jim Dear and Darling, his wife. She is named Lady and makes friends with neighboring pets, a scotch terrier and an aging bloodhound. A change occurs and she is ignored as the couple expect a baby. Hurt, she listens to a mongrel named Tramp, who warns her to watch out for the arrival of the heir. But after the arrival of a son, she helps care for the infant. One day, the couple take a trip and turn over the house and infant to Aunt Sarah and her Siamese cats, who make all kinds of trouble for which Lady is blamed and muzzled. Terrified, she breaks away and meets Tramp who takes her out on the town after the muzzle comes off. The dog catcher picks her up and she meets all kinds of characters in the pound where she also learns that Tramp is a gay dog with the ladies. She is returned home and chained to an outside doghouse. She sees a rat pop into the baby's room. Her frantic barks bring Tramp, and he kills the rat as Lady breaks her chain and arrives there too. Aunt Sarah is angry at the overturned crib and doesn't see the dead rat. She locks Lady in the cellar and summons the dog catcher for Tramp. As they cart him off, the master and mistress return, see the rat Lady shows them, and understand, rushing off to save Tramp. Come Christmas time, the house is filled with cheer and dogs for now both Lady and Tramp belong in the house as do their litter of pups.

X-RAY: Delightful and charming entertainment is to be found here for both young and old, and the reception of viewers should be fine. Walt Disney and staff have done a fine job technically, with colorful and expert creations in both character and settings, while the story holds interest. Both color and CinemaScope are assets. The new characters are lovable and should find favor with Disney fans. The tunes heard include "Home, Sweet Home," "He's A Tramp," "La-la-lu," "Peace On Earth," "The Siamese Cat Song," and "Bella Notte." The story was written by Erdman Penner, Joe Rinaldi, Ralph Wright, and Don DaGradi, based on a work by Ward Greene.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "A New Feature Cartoon Hit From The Walt Disney Studios"; "Wonderful Entertainment By The Master Of The Cartoon Feature"; "She Had Some Ideas . . . He Had Some Ideas . . . Put Them All Together And You've Got Wonderful Disney Entertainment For Young And Old Alike."

COLUMBIA

Seminole Uprising (743)

MELODRAMA
74M.

(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Average lower half entry.

CAST: George Montgomery, Karin Booth, William Fawcett, Steve Ritch, Ed Hinton, John Pickard, Jim Moloney, Rory Mallinson, Howard Wright, Russ Conklin, Jonni Paris, Joanne Rio, Richard Cutting. Produced by Sam Katzman; directed by Earl Bellamy.

STORY: Indian chief Steve Ritch breaks out of his Florida reservation and takes his Seminoles to Texas where his forays and killing put pressure on the army. He takes the wife and child of rancher Rory Mallinson. Lieutenant George Montgomery, who knew Ritch and once lived with the tribe and who is suspected of being half Indian, is assigned the task of getting him and reports to Colonal Howard Wright. Montgomery once had a romance going with Wright's daughter, Karin Booth, until his Indian background forced her to break off. She is engaged to Captain Ed Hinton, but she is still attracted to Montgomery and he to her. Operations are planned so that Montgomery and his troop draw off Ritch whereupon Hinton can go into his hideout and retrieve Mallinson's wife and child. Ritch's wife and child are taken after it is learned that the Mallinson woman and child were killed. Mallinson and his men show, learn of the tragery, and offer to cancel Hinton's debt to him if he will turn the squaw and her child loose. He agrees, and they are killed. Ritch attacks the fort and carries off Booth. Mongomery and his men go after them with limited water and Hinton is ordered to meet them with water supplies on their return. Montgomery forces Ritch to surrender and agree to return to the reservation. Hinton, determined to kill Montgomery, drains off the extra water and decides to return to the fort, but a fight with one of his men results in the death of both. Montgomery and his men faced with death, are saved by Ritch, who realizes Montgomery is a friend. He also clears the way for the marriage to Booth by revealing that Montgomery is all-white but was found in a wagon when his parents died and he was brought up by the tribe.

X-RAY: There is a goodly amount of action and intrigue to be found in this entry, which should fit the lower half slot in okeh fashion, as well as some library footage which pads out the climactic action sequences. The story, acting, direction and production are average, and where this type of entry has been accepted, this too should satisfy. The screen play is by Robert E. Kent, based on the novel "Bugle's Wake" by Curt Brandon.

TIP ON BIDDING: Lower half rates.

AD LINE: "Half Indian . . . Half Devil . . . All Rebel . . . 'The Black Cat' Against The White Army"; "Thrills Throng The Screen In Blazing Fury"; "It Took The Army Two Years To Conquer This Chief And His Rebellious Seminoles."

DOCUMENTARY
85M.

(Color by Ferraniacolor)
(Filmed in South America)
(English narration)

ESTIMATE: Good documentary.

CREDITS: Produced by Leonardo Bonzi; directed by Gian Gaspare Napolitano; cameraman, Giovanni Raffaldi; edited by Mario Serandrei; commentary written by James Agee and narrated by Brett Morrison and Carlos Montalban.

STORY: The Bonzi Expedition in South America traveled 7,800 miles starting in Brazil crossing forests, swamplands, jungles, rivers, and the Andes Mountains, winding up in Peru. To be seen are the fishermen on the coast of Brazil, waterfalls, gay colored birds, diamond hunters in the Mato Grosso, Brazilian pioneers pressing into the interior to start life anew on freshly cleared lands, native dances, gauchos driving cattle across a river infested with cannibalistic piranha fish and sacrificing one of the herd so that the flesh-eaters would be distracted while the rest of the herd crossed safely. Rubber trees are tapped and the daily existence of one such rubber worker is shown until malaria catches up with him. A battle between two hostile snakes ends with one devouring the other completely. Atop the Andes, they witness Indian dances and a wedding ceremony. It's six months later when they board a plane for the homeward journey.

X-RAY: Packed with colorful settings and little seen objects of nature, this entry has a number of angles to sell. There is a compelling black magic dance ritual, a shocking attack by voracious piranha fish which strips a large heifer clean in a matter of minutes, a battle between snakes. The film, which is well done for its type although slight editing could have tightened it a bit, can play any type of house where audiences appreciate entries of this nature. The color gives an assist and interest is maintained pretty much throughout. It has won a number of awards abroad.

MGM

DRAMA 110M.

ESTIMATE: Good reissue for the art houses or regulation spots.

CAST: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Elizabeth Allan, Jessie Ralph, Henry Daniell, Lenore Ulric, Laura Hope Crews, Rex O'Malley, Russell Hardie, E. E. Clive, Douglas Walton, Marion Ballou, Joan Brodel, June Wilkins, Fritz Leiber, Jr., Elsie Esmonds. Directed by George Cukor.

STORY: Beautiful, extravagant, and gay Greta Garbo, in poor health, has arranged to meet wealthy Baron Henry Daniell. Not knowing what the Baron looks like, she mistakes Robert Taylor for him. The Baron falls in love with her and asks her to go with him to Russia, but she refuses for reasons of poor health. He leaves and Taylor confesses his love for her. He promises to return to her home, but before he arrives the Baron returns. Taylor now convinces Garbo to leave the Baron and live with him in a country cottage. She agrees and spends an idyllic summer with Taylor. Taylor's father, Lionel Barrymore, learns about Garbo, and going to see her he begs that she give him up for the boy's sake. Garbo, although deeply in love, knows Barrymore is right. She again resumes her relationship with the Baron, and Taylor, brokenhearted, leaves the country. He returns to find Garbo on her deathbed and creditors camping outside her door. A deathbed scene shows Garbo and Taylor reaffirming their love.

X-RAY: This reissue, first released in 1936, contains good selling angles, the principal one being the Garbo name. A fine story, abounding in drama, romance, and tragedy, is expertly acted and directed. Good production also adds merit to this entry. Screen play is by Zoe Akins, Frances Marion, and James Hilton, from the play and novel by Alexandre Dumas, Jr. It has possibilities in all types of houses.

TIP ON BIDDING: Reissue price.

AD LINES: "Garbo Is Back . . . The Great Greta Garbo"; "The Famous Tragedy Of The 'Lady Of The Camellias' Is Brought To Your Screen"; "She Loved Him With All Her Heart, But Was She Worthy Of His Love?"

I Cover The Underworld (5434)

MELODRAMA 70M.

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: Sean McClory, Joanne Jordan, Ray Middleton, Jaclynne Greene, Lee Van Cleef, James Griffith, Hugh Sanders, Roy Roberts, Peter Mamakos, Robert Crosson, Frank Gerstle, Willis Bouchey, Philip Van Zandt. Associate producer, William J. O'Sullivan; directed by R. G. Springsteen.

STORY: Mobster Sean McClory is up for parole, and his mob, led by Lee Van Cleef, serve notice on the rest of the underworld that McClory will be expecting his slice of the illegal pie. Police, worried over the new wave of violence sure to be kicked off by McClory's release, call in his twin brother, also McClory, a divinity student, who agrees to take the mobster's place and secure evidence needed to break up the gangs. The real mobster's mistress, Jaclynne Greene, and Van Cleef suspect that he is not who he claims, but at the same time, he wins the respect of gang member Robert Crosson and his sister, Joanne Jordan. The divinity student convinces other city mobs to merge with him, requiring written evidence of their operations, and a mass meeting is set. The real mobster McClory escapes and attends the meeting to reveal the masquerade, but Crosson calls the police. Van Cleef kills the mobster McClory by mistake and is himself shot as the mob is captured.

X-RAY: This has little to recommend it to any but the most undiscriminating moviegoers. The story is unoriginal and unbelievable, the acting spotty, and the writing and dialogue weak. Only the present lack of adequate lower-half filler is in its favor. Direction and production indicate the low budget nature of the venture. Screen play is by John K. Butler.

AD LINES: "Adventure Rips The Screen Like A Tommy-Gun Blast"; "No One Can Make Deals With Men Like These—Not Even The Police"; "The Shocking Gangland Plot That Almost Backfired On The Police."

Kiss Me Deadly

MYSTERY MELODRAMA 105M.

(Parklane)

ESTIMATE: Mickey Spillane entry has the angles.

CAST: Ralph Meeker, Albert Dekker, Paul Stewart, Juano Hernandez, Wesley Addy, Marian Carr, Maxine Cooper, Cloris Leachman, Gaby Rodgers, Nick Dennis, Jack Lambert, Jack Elam, Jerry Zinneman, Madi Comfort. Produced and directed by Robert Aldrich.

STORY: Private detective Ralph Meeker gives a lift to Cloris Leachman, obviously in trouble on a lonely road. They are waylaid by thugs who force them over a cliff. The girl dies, and Meeker winds up in the hospital and recovers. He is quizzed by police and FBI agents and released with a warning to keep his nose out of the affair. He comes across Gaby Rodgers, the dead girl's roommate, who fears for her life though she knows nothing. He avoids attempts on his life, continuing to wade through bodies and bits of information with the aid of secretary-girl friend Maxine Cooper. Gangster Paul Stewart warns him to mind his business or be killed. When his friend, garageman Nick Dennis, is killed, he redoubles his efforts and as the trail gets hot, Cooper is kidnapped. He is taken captive but kills his captors. He finds a key taken from the body of Leachman which opens a locker containing a mysterious insulated box which, when opened, slightly burns him. He leaves it and turns the key and information over to the authorities. He tracks down the trail of Cooper to the home of Albert Dekker, who is slain by Rodgers, who turns out to be working for Dekker. She also wounds him and opens the box, which burns her and the house and sets off an explosion that rocks the area after he gets Cooper out of a locked room. They take refuge in the nearby ocean.

X-RAY: This is really an off-beat entry with an excess of brutality, bodies, and plot involvements which is best suited for adult audiences. There is nothing pleasant about the film nor its characters, but there is a certain amount of appeal for dyed-in-the-wool Mickey Spillane fans, who are in a goodly majority according to his book sales. All kinds of camera angles are present, and low key lighting is used in abundance to set mood. The cast carries out its assignments in adequate fashion, and the direction and production is suitable to the work. It should do okeh as part of the program despite its excessive length. The screen play is by A. I. Bezzerides, based on the novel by Spillane. A song, "Rather Have The Blues," is sung by Nat King Cole and Kitty White.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rate.

AD LINES: "When He Kissed Them . . . They Stayed Kissed"; "Mike Hammer Had A Way With The Dames And Crooks—He Treated Them Both Rough"; "Kiss Me Or Kill Me Was His Password To Blondes, Brunettes, And Redheads."

Top Of The World

MELODRAMA 90M.

(Baird-Foster)

ESTIMATE: Fair programmer.

CAST: Dale Robertson, Evelyn Keyes, Frank Lovejoy, Nancy Gates, Paul Fix, Robert Arthur, Peter Hansen, Nick Dennis, Russell Conway, William Shallert, Peter Bourne, David McMahon, Marya Marco. Produced by Michael Baird and Lewis R. Foster; directed by Lewis R. Foster.

STORY: Major Dale Robertson, an ace jet pilot, is reassigned to an Alaskan weather observation unit because he is considered too old for the fast planes. He is also notified by his ex-wife Evelyn Keyes by mail that he needn't send her any more alimony checks since she is doing alright in an Alaskan night club she opened and is running. Over Alaska, he and a crew are forced to bail out when their plane catches fire, but they are rescued shortly by Major Frank Lovejoy. Among the greeters at the base is public relations officer Nancy Gates, in love with Lovejoy, but he has fallen for Keyes in nearby Fairbanks and she is attracted to him. Robertson thinks Lovejoy should be warned against Keyes if things become serious, and he advises Keyes he will try to break things up. Robertson and a crew are sent out for stationing aboard an ice cap to send back weather reports and are marooned when a storm destroys their plane and radio equipment. Lovejoy helps rescue the marooned men and convinces Robertson that he and Keyes are still in love.

X-RAY: A saleable title plus some good Arctic film sequences plus cast names that can be of assistance are to be found here, along with a fair but implausible yarn, average characterizations, and suitable direction and production. It can round out the program in okeh fashion. The screen play is written by John D. Klorer and N. Richard Nash. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "The Air Force's Air Weather Service In Action Near The North Pole"; "They Had A Big Job To Do And No One And Nothing Was To Stand In Their Way"; "'Operation Deep Freeze' Meant Action, Adventure, And Certain Death If Things Went Wrong."

Abbott And Costello Meet The Mummy (526)

FARCE 79M.

ESTIMATE: For the juveniles and A and C fans.

CAST: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Marie Windsor, Michael Ansara, Dan Seymour, Kurt Katch, Richard Karlan, Richard Deacon, Eddie Parker, Mel Welles, George Khoury, Peggy King, Mazzone-Abbott Dancers, Chandra-Kaly Dancers. Produced by Howard Christie; directed by Charles Lamont.

STORY: Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, stranded in Egypt with little funds, overhear that Dr. Kurt Katch is seeking two men to take a mummy back to the U.S. They find him dead and the mummy gone. The killers are a band of rabid followers of the mummy, who is kept alive by a secret potion, and they are led by Richard Deacon. Also interested in the mummy is Marie Windsor and her gang, who seek a medallion the mummy is wearing which reveals the hiding place of a fabulous treasure. Costello finds the medallion and swallows it. An x-ray reveals the hieroglyphics, and Deacon offers to read it as well as to guide them to the location where he plans to exterminate them. At the temple, plot and counterplot are tried in which the mummy, Abbott and Costello, Deacon, and Windsor try to outwit each other. The mummy winds up holding some lit dynamite which destroys him and reveals the hiding place of the treasure. Things wind up with the opening of a nightclub named after the mummy with Deacon as the manager.

X-RAY: There are all kinds of things to be found in this latest A and C entry, including mummies, daddies bent on mayhem, slapstick by the bushel, tried and true A and C routines, atmosphere, and even Peggy King singing "You Came A Long Way From St. Louis" in Egypt. The cast is about average for the series. as is the story, production, and direction, and juvenile audiences and dyed-in-the-wool A and C fans should best appreciate the results. John Grant is responsible for the screen play, based on a story by Lee Loeb.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "This Abbott And Costello Laugh-Fest Is Not Only For Mummies But For Daddies And The Kiddies, Too"; "When Abbott And Costello Tangle With The Mummy Everybody Heads For Cover"; "You Ain't Seen Nothin' Yet."

ESTIMATE: Better than average western.

CAST: John Lund, Dorothy Malone, Touch Connors, Bob Campbell, Jonothon Haze, Paul Birch, James Stone, Jack Ingram, Larry Thor. Produced and directed by Roger Corman.

STORY: Five convicted murderers are released from prison and enlisted in the Confederate army, with the understanding that they will overpower a stagecoach carrying a Union spy and a large amount of money. Headed by John Lund, the five make tracks through Indian country to the place where they will rendezvous with the stage. On the way they are plagued with fighting among themselves and double-crossing plans being made. The group arrives at the cabin of Dorothy Malone and her uncle. There they are to wait for the arrival of the stage. Malone's femininity intensifies hostility between the criminals. The stagecoach arrives with its escort of Union troops. It is ambushed by the criminals, with the troops being killed and the spy being taken prisoner. No money is found on the coach. After being forcefully questioned, the spy reveals that the money is being held in California. Lund favors returning the spy to the Confederacy, but the others want to go to California and seize the money. A fight ensues with Lund and the spy taking shelter in the cabin. Firing from the cabin, Lund manages to kill off other criminals. He is now free to turn the spy over to Confederate officers and then return and resume his romance with Malone.

X-RAY: This entry will appeal to action and western fans. Intermingled with the film's turbulent plot is a romantic note. Good characterizations add to the film's entertainment value and prevent it from being just another western. Performances, direction, and production are satisfactory. Screen play is by R. Wright Campbell. It should do okeh as a supporting feature.

AD LINES: "Joined In A Bond Of Violence, They Would Not Hesitate To Sever Relationships With A Bullet In The Back"; "Five Ruthless Killers, Joined Forces . . . Each With Double-Cross On His Mind."

The Short Parade

THREE REEL

Color Novelty

THE BARBER OF SEVILLE. Filmeco. Color. 26m. Rossini's comic opera is performed in a condensed version by the Marionettes of the Teatro Girolamo in Milan. Heard are the voices of Graziella Sciutti, Antonio Pirino, Walter Monachesi, and Bruno Scalchiero with the accompaniment of the orchestra of the Teatro dell Opera of Rome. An English narration is intermingled with the arias. GOOD.

CinemaScope Color Travel

SWITZERLAND. Buena Vista—People And Places. 32m. CinemaScope and Technicolor. Another entry in the series of featurette subjects turned out by Walt Disney and staff, this dwells on Switzerland, its peoples, customs, scenic settings in the mountains, and in the towns and cities. A plane ride over the Alps provides some breathtaking scenes enhanced by the use of CinemaScope. The people work, play, and find time to celebrate all types of holidays and occasions with colorful costumes and dances. Sports, too, are glimpsed. EXCELLENT.

TWO REEL

Comedy

BEDLAM IN PARADISE. Columbia—Three Stooges Comedies. 16m. Stooge Shemp dies and goes to heaven. At the Pearly Gates, the Devil appears and tries to entice Shemp to join him below. Shemp refuses but is told that to stay in heaven he must first go back to earth and reform Moe and Larry. Shemp finds the boys mixed up in a shady deal with the Devil and proceeds to save them from themselves. The episode turns out to be a dream, with Shemp waking up and finding his bed afire. FAIR. (7407).

READY, WILLING BUT UNABLE. Columbia—Comedy Favorite Re-releases. 16m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1941, it was said: "El Brendel believes he has killed a man (actually a dummy) in a motor accident, and sets out to bury him in a girl's seminary. The obvious complications follow. FAIR." (7435).

ONE REEL

Color Cartoon

BANQUET BUSTERS. Universal-International—Walter Lantz Cartune Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of February, 1948, it was said: "Andy Panda, Woody Woodpecker, and a small mouse are barely existing in their small flat with nary a morsel of food. They happen to read about a dinner being given by a society luminary, and rush to the scene of action. There follow a number of escapades in which the three hungry souls endeavor to get their hands on some food. The reel ends with a pie-throwing affair. GOOD." (1353).

GANDY GOOSE IN IT'S ALL IN THE STARS. 20th Century-Fox—Terrytoon Topper Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of May, 1946, it was said: "Gandy Goose and the cat dream about the heavenly bodies and the solar system, but when their dream shifts to earth, Gandy decides to forego the dream, and the cat goes on alone. He lets a canary out of its cage, and is accused by numerous members of the forest of eating the bird. They proceed to give him a good pummeling until he awakens. He blames all of his troubles on Gandy for deserting him in the dream. GOOD." (5506).

Novelty

HOLLYWOOD FATHERS. Columbia—Screen Snapshots. 10m. Glenn Ford emcees this close-up of some of screenland's famous fathers, including Bing Crosby, Doug Fairbanks, Sr., and Jr., Joe E. Brown, Hoagy Carmichael, George Burns, Jerry Colonna, Pat O'Brien, Alan Mowbray, Harold Lloyd, and Jack Haley. FAIR. (7857).

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

VOLUME 54 NUMBER 2

NOW, I'LL TELL YA WHAT I'M GONNA DO!

So CONFIDED the "pitch-men" and "eon-men" of a bygone era.

But as you peruse today's literature being broadeast over the name of E. F. McDonald, Jr., president, Zenith Radio Corporation, relative to that firm's particular proprietary interest in toll-TV, you can aetually smell the "snake oil."

The mailing we have before us is dated April 25 and is obviously directed to the hundreds of thousands of "little people" who at some time in the past have purchased Zenith Hearing Aids. No doubt other mailings are localized to other Zenith products. Patronizing each as a "Dear Zenith Friend and User," the MeDonald signed letter is replete with eliehes such as: "crnsade in behalf of the general public"; "in keeping with the American tradition"; "two powerful and well-organized commercial groups (movie theatre owners and the TV networks)"; "all America may have all the benefits," etc. It is a frank "pitch" for "just a letter or a post card" to both the Federal Communications Commission, "before May 9"; and to "yonr Senators and Congressmen," from the hearing aid users, and as many of their "relatives and friends" as possible, building the pressure for toll-TV.

Enelosed with this letter is a copy of an inflammatory editorial against "these selfish exhibitors"; "old antiquated and high-priced theatres";"a $100,000.00 lobbying fund" and "organized bamboozling"; as published in the April issue of some advertising trade paper called "Mart."

But you really smell the "snake oil," and identify the true "piteh man" teehnique, in a seeond four-page enclosure that is printed in two eolors and profusely illustrated with eartoons to show how toll-TV works, and what the public will get from it. While nowhere in the large or small print does this folder make any positive statement as to what toll-TV will make available, a cleverly drawn eartoon dominating the front eover shows gay throngs in top hats and tails before marquees that list such attractions as "PAJAMA GAME," "FANNY," "KISMET," "METROPOLITAN OPERA," "SPORTS," "BRIDGES OF TOKO-RI," "MARCIANO FIGHTS," "MOVIES."

Now, there is quite a niee paekage of entertainment, isn't it? But we're quite sure if you'll ask the man (Mr. McDonald) if he'll guarantee these attractions if you buy his toll gadget, you'll reeeive the usual "pitch man" reply: "Get away from me boy. You bother me!"

Then a new gadget will pop out of his bag and a new "piteh" will be launehed with, "Now! I'll tell ya what I'm gonna do!"

MAYBE YOU HAVE ONLY YOURSELF TO BLAME

IN A RECENT EDITORIAL, "A PLEA FOR ONE THEATRE OWNER ASSOCIATION" (Mareh 23), we, as one trade publisher, did our best to alert theatremen to the need for unity. In still other editorials, stretching over a period of months and years, we have attempted to put into words both our own reactions as a practical theatremen and those of friendly eontemporaries across the land with whom we are in almost daily contact. We know our views have been read and approved by theatremen, for our flow of mail has inereased tremendously, and continues to inerease, with each passing week.

Over a similar period of months and years we have read and reported the foreeful views of such exhibitor leaders as Ed Martin, Abe Myers, Nate Yamins, Sam Pinanski, Si Fabian, Trueman Rembuseh, Pat McGee, Leonard Goldenson, Sol Sehwartz, and others. No doubt, they also reeeived the letters of comment and appreciation, the delineated speeific complaints, and the exhortations to eontinue to "give 'em h - - l!"

Effort has been expended. Leaders have tried to rally backing. Words have shaken the rafters of exhibitor conventions. But have you, the theatreman reader of these lines, actually done anything to proteet your investment or to help those who have tried to help you?

A nice question, isn't it!

And, if you haven't, don't you think it is about time that you elimbed down out of the bleachers, contacted some exhibitor organization leader, and offered to aetively take your turn at bat?

We have heard it said about exhibition that there were "too many ehiefs and not enough Indians." If this is the case, and if as a result the chiefs can't command respeet, don't you think that the "Indians" have themselves to blame?

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

HUNDREDS OF INDUSTRY representatives in all branches gathered last week at the Waldorf-Astoria for the second annual Heart Award dinner of the Variety Club of New York to honor Richard F. Walsh, international president, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators of the U. S. and Canada, as he received the Heart Award. Not only was Walsh honored, personally, but the contributions to charitable and other community projects by the 1,000 locals of the Alliance were duly noted and appreciated.

KONECOFF

Bill German, chief barker, opined that the selection of Walsh was an ideal one and demonstrated that labor and management can and have joined together for the common good to fight a common scourge—epilepsy. This kind of cooperative effort can lick this condition.

Robert J. O'Donnell, toastmaster and prominent exhibitor, recalled his early days in the business when he and Walsh worked together in Brooklyn and he went over the Walsh career in entertaining detail.

Robert M. Weitman, UPT-ABC vice-president, recalled dealings with Walsh over the years when he managed the Paramount flagship houses in the city. On behalf of the TV and radio industry with which he is now associated, he opined that there was a need for more Walshes and fewer welchers.

The Honorable Charles Halloran, first deputy commissioner, New York State Department of Labor, paid tribute to Walsh for raising the standards of the industry, for furthering collective bargaining, and for being able to resolve all this without a strike in 20 years. He also extended congratulations on behalf of Governor Harriman.

Spyros P. Skouras came through with a surprise announcement that his company will produce a short on epilepsy for national theatrical distribution under the sponsorship of the Variety Club Foundation to Combat Epilepsy. This will further education of the public to the affliction, which is as important as medical research. The film will be in both CinemaScope and 2-D, as well as in 16mm. in time for clinical and professional use. It will be ready for release in the fall.

Howard Lindsay, on behalf of the legit theatres and the stage, praised Walsh and stagehands generally for their contribution to the theatre.

Russell Downing, president and managing director, Radio City Music Hall, and honorary dinner chairman, presented the plaque award with his best wishes on behalf of the membership of Tent 35.

Walsh, following a standing tribute, accepted the plaque on behalf of organized labor in the industry. As for epilepsy, he believed that the industry can do a job on the disease in the manner that it fought polio, cerebral palsy, and other afflictions. It has never turned down a worthwhile request for help. He thanked all for their support, help, and cooperation.

Scheduled for the dais were Major L. E. Thompson, Sam Dembow, Martin Quig-

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

New Product Shot In Arm For B'way

NEW YORK—The arrival of some new product and the staying power of "SAC," Paramount, upped the Broadway grosses considerably over the weekend. The holdovers, many reaching the end of long runs, did not fare as well.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount announced that the VistaVision attraction was heading toward a $70,000 third week.

"Daddy Long Legs" (20th-Fox). Roxy claimed $39,006 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, and said the opening week should tally $68,000.

"Interrupted Melody" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, reported $92,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the first week sure to hit $142,000.

"Run For Cover" (Paramount). Criterion dropped to $15,000 on the second week.

"The Wayward Wife" (IFE). Globe was down to $9,000 on the fifth week.

"Chief Crazy Horse" (U-I). Mayfair hoped for $10,000 on the second and last week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor did an ckeh $20,000 on the ninth week.

"The End Of The Affair" (Columbia). Victoria was heading toward $13,000 on the second week.

"The Purple Plain" (UA). Capitol expected $10,000 on the last four days of the fifth and last week.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State reported $20,000 for the eighth week.

Exhibitors To Choose New Poll Candidates

NEW YORK—A new and final date, Nov. 17 through 27, was fixed last week for the nation-wide balloting which is to be held under the auspices of COMPO to register the public's choice of the best picture, best performances, and most promising young players of the previous year.

Decision to change the date was made by Elmer Rhoden, national chairman, Audience Awards campaign. It was also decided that the awards shall be made at a function to be held in Hollywood on the night of Dec. 5, 6, or 7, whichever may later be decided upon as most convenient.

Nominations will be made by exhibitors, under a nominating procedure worked out by Rhoden. The nominations, according to present plans, will be made to cover three different periods, with all exhibitors eligible to participate. The first nominating ballot, as tentatively arranged, will be sent in to COMPO by exhibitors on or around June 1 and will permit exhibitors to make their nominations from pictures generally released between Oct. 1, 1954, and March 31, 1955. Distributors will determine which of their pictures have been widely enough exhibited to be eligible for nomination. Any picture or personality receiving 75 per cent of the nominating votes from exhibitors will go on the final ballot given to the public.

A similar nominating procedure will be followed by exhibitors on or about Aug. 1 in making their nominations from pictures and personalities included in the releases of April, May, and June. The final nominations will be made on or around Oct. 1 on pictures and personalities included in general releases of July, August, and September. In each of the three nomination ballotings any picture or personality receiving 75 per cent of the votes will go on the final ballot to be used by the public. Sept. 30 will be the cutoff date of pictures to be considered.

Meeting with Rhoden were Wilbur Snaper, one of the three members of the COMPO governing committee; Morey Goldstein, Allied Artists, chairman, general sales managers committee; Harry Mandel, RKO Theatres, chairman, COMPO press relations committee; Emil Bernstecker, Wilby-Kincey Theatres, Atlanta, and Ralph Russell, Palace, Canton, O., members of the Audience Poll committee; Robert W. Coyne, COMPO special counsel; and Charles E. McCarthy, COMPO information director. Distributors have promised full cooperation.

Film Dividends Soar

WASHINGTON—The Department of Commerce announced last fortnight that reported cash dividends paid by film industry companies amounted to $3,899,000 in March this year, an increase of $417,000 over the same month in 1954. This reflects a trend evident earlier in the year, the total for the first three months of 1955 being $7,143,000, compared with $5,529,000 for the same period last year.

TOA, Allied Units Mull Merger In Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY—The combined directors of Theatre Owners of Oklahoma and Allied of Oklahoma held a preliminary meeting last week, following separate monthly board meetings, to discuss the creation of a single exhibitor organization in the state. Another session will be held in about two weeks, following up recent informal talks among members of both organizations.

President Ed Thorne represented TOO, together with Ralph Drewry and C. B. Akers, Tulsa, and Ray Hughes, Heavener. For Allied the representatives were President Bernard McKenna, Norman, board chairman Earl Snyder, Jr., and Eddie Jones, Tulsa, and Dick Thompson, Glen Thompson, and Claude Motley, Oklahoma City.

CBS Adds To Word War In Toll-TV Debate

NEW YORK—On the 45-minute program carried by CBS Television Network last fortnight W. Theodore Pierson was the chief spokesman for the advocates of toll-TV. Pierson, Washington counsel, Zenith Radio Corporation, based his argument on the exceptional entertainment he contended such a system would make available to the public, such as Broadway plays and first-run films.

Victor A. Sholis, vice-president, WHAS, Inc., Louisville, Ky., took strong exception to Pierson, arguing that toll-TV offers the public nothing more than it already has without charge and that the new system would shift the burden of cost from the advertiser to the consumer.

Two opposing panels took up the question following the debate. Favoring the new medium were Ralph Bellamy, president, Actor's Equity; Dean James M. Landis, general counsel, Skiatron, Inc.; and Elfred Beck, president, KCEB, Tulsa, Okla.

On the other side of the important question, Trueman Rembusch, co-chairman, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV; Leon B. German, Jr., general manager, WABI and WABI-TV, Bangor, Me.; and Sherwood Dodge, vice-president and general manager, Foote, Cone, and Belding ad agency, gave their views.

Lichtman Proposes Arbitration Of Rentals For Small Accounts; Balaban and Schenck Suggest Individual Company Parleys

HOLLYWOOD—At a press conference last week Al Lichtman, vice-president, 20th-Fox, indicated that the joint invitation by Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association to the heads of film companies for an industry-wide roundtable conference on May 24 had been vetoed. The Allied-TOA bid to discuss film rental terms and other trade practices was rejected by Paramount and MGM.

As a means of terminating exhibitor-distributor disputes, Lichtman proposed arbitration of film rentals of $50 or less per picture and other subjects of controversy involved in such small accounts. He emphasized that distribution has the welfare of the industry just as much at heart as exhibition and added that he did not include the big exhibitor in his proposal because the latter is in a position currently to gross more with big pictures in big situations than ever before, and therefore does not need the same treatment as his smaller competitor.

Lichtman also stressed he was speaking for himself alone, and commended the big exhibitors for fighting onerous distribution terms on behalf of the small exhibitor. He added, "I, too, want to take up the cudgel for the little fellow." Pointing out that in approximately 4500 theatres and big drive-ins it is now possible to earn over 85 per cent of total film rental on a first-class picture, with the balance coming from double that many theatres, Lichtman said it was in the interest of all distributors to have a most flexible policy to keep the little fellow in business. The executive declined to elaborate on any other statements about the conference.

In New York, Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's president, speaking for MGM, and president Barney Balaban, Paramount, individually turned down the exhibitors' proposal on the grounds that the matters brought up for discussion were not suited to industry-wide talks but a matter of individual company policy. Both men emphasized that their companies' doors are always, as in the past, open for discussion with any exhibitor, and that customer relations are of primary importance to the studios.

Balaban Sees Toll-TV Lag

NEW YORK—President Barney Balaban, Paramount, said last week in his annual report to the company's stockholders, now in distribution, that "major problems" must be solved before commercial pay-as-you-see TV approaches its vast potentialities.

Balaban's report shows that Paramount already holds more than 80 per cent interest in International Telemeter Corporation, which sponsors one of the subscription methods. International Telemeter will file a statement with the Federal Communications Commission before June 9, according to the report, and will take part in further developments.

Sir Winston Churchill Receives Variety Club Humanitarian Award

HOLLYWOOD—At the final dinner of the Variety Clubs International annual convention in the Hotel Ambassador, Sir Winston Churchill was honored with the VCI Humanitarian Award for 1954. The tribute was made before an assemblage of more than 1,000 amusement industry notables and civic leaders by George Eby, Pittsburgh, chairman of the award committee, who cited Sir Winston's life-long devotion to liberty, the safe-guarding of democracy, dedication to the safe-guarding of peace. Formal presentation will be made in London by Col. James Carreras, chief barker, Tent 36.

The former British Prime Minister was nominated by a world-wide committee of over 100 newspaper editors and publishers "for the most outstanding service to humanity" in 1954. Unanimous approval was voted by delegates to the convention. Past recipients of the award, presented annually since 1939, have been Father Edward J. Flanagan, Miss Martha Berry, Dr. Alexander Fleming, Miss Evangeline Booth, James F. Byrnes, Dr. George Washington Carver, Sister Elizabeth Kenny, Cordell Hull, Gen. George C. Marshall, Herbert Hoover, Bernard M. Baruch, Paul G. Hoffman, Miss Helen Keller, Dr. Selman A. Waksman, and Dr. Karl F. Meyer.

George C. Hoover, Miami, Fla., international chief barker, was presented a citation from National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis by Nicholas Bernard, assistant to Basil O'Connor, Foundation director.

Heart-of-Variety award was made to Pittsburgh Tent 1 for its outstanding achievements during 1954. Recommended for honorable mention were Las Vegas and Minneapolis. It was disclosed in the annual heart report written by Dr. Nathan D. Golden, Washington, that in 89 years of existence, the Heart program of Variety Clubs has spent $33,000,000 in charity endeavors, and over $3,000,000 in 1954 to aid over 400,000 under-privileged, abandoned, or afflicted children.

In the course of the four-day convention, Hoover announced that a new orphanage will be built in Mexico City by the Tent there. Other projects mentioned in the Heart report were a hospital in Minneapolis specializing in children's heart surgery; a children's cancer hospital in Boston; a new wing on Pittsburgh's Roselia foundling home; a Chicago rheumatic heart hospital; Variety Village in Toronto, Canada, for retarded or crippled boys; Omaha's Home for Convalescing children; and the home in Dallas for abandoned boys.

At a business session, a resolution was adopted making it optional for local tents to conduct their annual election by mail ballot.

In the opening session delegates voted that all tents will support the "Christmas Salute" individually to raise money for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, New York. Hoover announced that the annual $100 bond award for the best story and best picture concerning Variety Club charities went to Luther Yapp, a photographer on the West Mail, Cardiff, Wales.

Mrs. Lloyd Ownbey, left, and Mrs. Ben Peskay, co-chairmen of decorating committee, are seen preparing for the 19th annual Variety Clubs International convention just held at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles. A highlight of the Ladies' Auxiliary activities was a Saks Fifth Avenue fashion show and luncheon in Cocoanut Grove.

Martin Stresses Unity At Arkansas Conclave

LITTLE ROCK — James Carbery was elected president, Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas, at their 36th annual convention here last week. Fred Brown, Fort Smith, becomes secretary-treasurer, and Nona White, Little Rock, assistant secretary-treasurer. Retiring president K. K. King, Searcy, moves up to chairman of the board. Six district vice-presidents were named together with the board of directors of eight. Carbery was named representative to the national TOA board. B. F. Busby is legislative director.

E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, was the keynote speaker. Glenn Hall, Cassville, Mo., later spoke on small town operation, pointing out that the small town exhibitor could, using the methods of the larger operators, soon go out of business. TOA, Martin said, is working on all the problems of exhibitors, and there must be a unity among them in planning and thinking for the future. He reported that in the Chicago meeting with officers of National Allied, it was discovered all faced similar problems, but in his opinion the exhibitors lost strength by not being united in one national organization.

Judge Knight's Illness Perils Schine Decision

BUFFALO—It was reported last fortnight that 83-year-old Judge Knight, who has presided at the long contempt trial of Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., will resign soon because of illness which may prevent him from handing down a decision, which is still pending.

Consequently, the government may face a situation in which it must either call a new trial of one of the longest cases in Buffalo's history, or dismiss the charges altogether.

Presidents, Johnston Discuss Film Affairs

NEW YORK—At a meeting last week of film company presidents, called by Eric Johnston, president, Motion Picture Association of America, topics ranging from the proposed industry round-table conference to the foreign situation were discussed.

Company representatives, after expressing opinions pro and con, indicated that they would reply individually to the joint bid for a May 24 round-table conference by the Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association.

The representatives assured Johnston of their strong support for any measures necessary to protect the distribution of American films abroad. Increasing pressures to limit foreign distribution through trade restrictions and censorship necessitate the strengthening of Johnston's hand and consideration, particularly in the case of British censorship, by the Production Code Administration.

The company presidents also expressed sentiments on the pre-release issue, which remains to be settled at a later date. President E. D. Martin, Theatre Owners of America, opposes two pre-release pictures from each company per year sought by distribution.

Cinerama Income Bared

NEW YORK—John Hartley, treasurer, Cinerama, Inc., predicted at the company's annual stockholders meeting last week that foreign income for the company will reach $125,000 this year.

An unaudited report presented at the meeting showed that the company had made a profit of around $40,000 for the first quarter of this year, with working capital rising to $1,000,000. It was also revealed that the company realized $15,600 in royalties from the showing of "This Is Cinerama" in London, and $17,305 for showings in Japan.

The meeting was told that Stanley Warner owns 700,100 shares of stock, and options for 300,000, while Reeves Soundcraft and associates of Hazard E. Reeves, president, Cinerama, Inc., control 750,000 shares. Reelected as directors were Reeves, Wentworth Fling, Harry M. Kalmine, Edward V. Otis, and Sidney K. Wolf.

Bankers Okeh TESMA Plan

COLUMBUS, O.—Bob Wile, executive secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, last week announced that the Ohio Bankers Association would approve the TESMA Three Per Cent Plan advanced by Merlin Lewis, executive secretary of the equipment and supply manufacturers association, provided escrow agreements covered the percentage.

Wile has assured Lewis that exhibitors are sincere enough to make such escrow arrangements, and a sample agreement will be available from the bankers in the near future, who will also be able to lend additional money for equipment and refurbishing.

Lewis' proposal required a reserve of three per cent of gross from all film contracts covered by percentage licensing agreements, the money to be set aside for theatre improvements.

Schary Cites Studio Advantage To Indies

NEW YORK—Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production for MGM, declared recently in an address to a luncheon of the Sales Executives Club at the Hotel Roosevelt, "Sometimes I think that an executive must have the talents of a good clergyman, a good politician, a good banker, a good psychiatrist and a good fight manager."

Schary's subject was "The Executive in the Movies." He said, "There are going to be some bitter lessons learned in the independent field, and the resources and production facilities of big studios are vital to the independent. When independent producers go into the making of large-scale pictures, they find their production operation more costly than it would be at large studios—this despite the much-talked-of high overhead. Too often we forget that the high overhead provides invaluable material and resources and manpower for pictures.

"At MGM two years ago we made a film called 'Executive Suite,' which co-starred William Holden, June Allyson, Fredric March, Louis Calhern, Walter Pidgeon, Barbara Stanwyck, and Nina Foch. The entire cost of the picture, including overhead and cast, was $1,200,000. I don't think an independent could have corralled that cast and produced that picture at a cost anywhere near that figure.

"In connection with a musical we made last year, 'Seven Brides For Seven Brothers,' I am certain that this picture, done exactly as we did it at a cost of $2,200,000, would cost an independent almost $3,000,000.

"That extra cost for an independent is perfectly all right if the picture turns out to be a smash hit, but if it doesn't, there are very few who can survive a big beating. A large studio can overcome one or two big disasters a year. An independent can be murdered by one. It is possibly true that in the future all studios will maintain a policy of percentage participation, but the independent who finds himself allied with a big studio operation will find that he is still able to function more efficiently than if he were operating all by his lonesome in the world outside," Schary concluded.

Company Readies 55

HOLLYWOOD—MGM will reach a peak of production and employment in June, with studio head Dore Schary's announcement last fortnight of 55 story properties in various stages of preparation for the company's 1955-56 schedule. Variety is being stressed.

Within the next six weeks, four major pictures will go into production. They are "Dianne," starring Lana Turner, Pedro Armendariz, Marisa Pavan, directed by David Miller, produced by Edwin H. Knopf; "Kismet," starring Howard Keel, Ann Blyth, Dolores Gray, and Vic Damone, directed by Vincente Minnelli, produced by Arthur Freed; "I'll Cry Tomorrow," starring Susan Hayward, directed by Daniel Mann, produced by Lawrence Weingarten; and "Jeremy Rodock," starring Spencer Tracy, directed by Robert Wise, produced by Sam Zimbalist.

Also scheduled for production in June is "Forever Darling," starring Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz.

Currently in production are "Bhowani Junction," starring Ava Gardner, Stewart Granger, produced by Pandro S. Berman, directed by George Cukor; "Quentin Durward," starring Robert Taylor, Kay Kendall, produced by Pandro S. Berman, directed by Richard Thorpe; "Trial," starring Glenn Ford, Dorothy McGuire, Arthur Kennedy, John Hodiak, and Katy Jurado, produced by Charles Schnee, directed by Mark Robson; and "Forbidden Planet," starring Walter Pidgeon, Anne Francis, Leslie Nielsen, produced by Nicholas Nayfack, directed by Fred Wilcox.

Massachusetts Sunday "Blue Law" Challenged As Unconstitutional

BOSTON—Attorney Felix J. Bilgrey, New York, last week presented oral arguments challenging the constitutionality of the Sunday "blue law" before the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts on behalf of Times Film Corporation, largest independent distributors of foreign films in the United States. This is the first time that the highest state tribunal has heard arguments concerning the validity of the statute, enacted in 1908, which requires approval of any form of "public entertainment" on Sunday by the State Commission of Public Safety before a Sunday license can be granted by a city, town, or village.

The unprecedented court action is based on a petition of certiorari brought by Times to correct "substantial errors of law" in the Commissioner's refusal to approve two prize-winning foreign films, "One Summer Of Happiness" and "The Game Of Love," for Sunday exhibition.

Bilgrey contended that the "Sunday law" is in contravention of the first and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution because by imposing prior restraint on the exhibition of motion pictures, it interferes with the freedom of the press guaranteed by the first amendment and specifically extended to motion pictures by the Supreme Court, thus making the statute void on its face; although the due process of law requirement of the 14th amendment means that law must be sufficiently definite and must contain ascertainable standards, the description of that which may be licensed for Sunday showing as "in keeping with the character of the Lord's day and not inconsistent with its due observance" is as vague and indefinite as the terms "sacrilegious" and "immoral" which the Supreme Court has already held cannot be used as a basis for prior restraint.

Bilgrey further argued that even under the existing statute, the action of the censors in the Department of Public Safety in demanding deletions in "One Summer Of Happiness" and disapproving in its entirety "The Game Of Love" are unwarranted and arbitrary since no explanation was given for either action. He pointed out that "One Summer Of Happiness" won the Grand Prize at the Berlin and Punta de l'Este festivals and that "Game Of Love," which has been universally acclaimed as a faithful screenplay of a Colette novel, was the recipient of the 1954 Grand Prix du Cinema Francais as well as a special award at the Edinburgh Film Festival.

In his conclusion, Bilgrey declared that the statute "should be struck down as it permits the Commissioner in his sole judgment to prescribe orthodoxies. Censorship in any form under any name or guise, offends our highest law, and it does equal injustice to the highest moral concepts of free men."

Pioneer Committees Named

NEW YORK—Following last week's meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Pioneers and the Foundation of the Motion Picture Pioneers, Jack Cohn, president, appointed three committees.

The 1955 dinner committee will select the date and place of the annual Pioneer affair, choose a dinner chairman and name the man who will be honored as Pioneer of the Year. It will consist of Cohn, Barney Balaban, Herman Robbins, Ned Depinet, and Sam Dembow, Jr.

The Foundation's relief and assistance committee for the ensuing year will be composed of Marvin Kirsch, John J. O'Connor and William Brandt. The contributions group includes William J. German, Sam Rosen, and George Dembow.

New Allied Unit Mapped

LOUISVILLE, KY.—A new exhibitor's association was being formed in Kentucky last week, to be affiliated with National Allied. An organization meeting will be held in Louisville the afternoon of May 17 in the Falls City Theatre Equipment Company's auditorium to which all Kentucky exhibitors have been invited.

Representatives of National Allied expected to attend are Rube Shor, president; A. F. Myers, general counsel; Trueman Rembusch and Bill Carroll, Indiana Allied; and Bob Wile, Ohio Allied.

The Kentucky committee sponsoring the new organization includes: J. M. Reiss, Louis Arru, and E. L. Ornstein, all of Louisville, and Robert Enoch, Elizabethtown.

Decca Earnings Soar

NEW YORK—Consolidated net earnings of Decca Records, Inc., for the three months ended March 31, including the company's share of undistributed earnings of its subsidiary, U-I, amounted to $816,339, equal to 50 cents per share on 1,602,501 outstanding shares of capital stock. Decca owned 718,585 shares of U-I common, representing approximately 71 per cent of the motion picture company's outstanding common stock.

The 1955 first quarter net is 28 per cent higher than net earnings of $635,238 reported by Decca for the corresponding period of 1954, equal to 42 cents per share on 1,500,000 shares of capital stock outstanding.

Co-op Transit Setup Used By Fitzgibbons

TORONTO—A co-op arrangement with a transit company to bring patrons to theatres was outlined at the annual meeting of the shareholders of Famous Players Canadian Corporation by John J. Fitzgibbons, president and managing director.

Theatregoers are able to travel to the theatres under the scheme via the transit system and return home for the price of a one-way fare. Famous Players Canadian Corporation is experimenting with the plan in Vancouver, said Fitzgibbons, whereby the theatres give adult patrons a transportation ticket on presentation of a transfer.

The B.C. Electric Railway Company, the transit company in Vancouver, will supply theatre information through its telephone facilities, and in return, the theatre will advertise the conveniences of travelling by public transit.

"If the system works, we will try to do the same thing here with the TTC," said Fitzgibbons, referring to the Toronto operation.

The advantages of such a system are many, it was pointed out by company officials. Parking facilities are becoming increasingly difficult with the ordinary theatre parking lot unable to cope with the number of patrons' cars. The street parking is also becoming more difficult as more municipalities ban street parking to allow for the easier flow of traffic.

Dealing with TV, Mr. Fitzgibbons indicated its competition to the theatres is not as severe as it could be, adding that the novelty appeal is no longer as great as when it first started in the U. S. He said the company's own interests in Quebec City and Kitchener were "going very well." The firm has a half interest in a station in each city.

Optimism for the coming year was expressed by Fitzgibbons, with earnings expected to be as good as last year.

Some 45 persons attended a special luncheon at Toronto's Variety Clubrooms for Frank LeGrande, authority on Paramount's new horizontal VistaVision, to be unveiled at the Imperial, Toronto. Those attending the luncheon represented press, trade press, magazines, radio and television, with the invitations being looked after by Win Barron, Canadian ad pub chief for Paramount. . . . An amalgamation of York Confections, Ltd., Toronto, and George Thompson, Ltd., into a company known as Thompson Confections, Ltd., was announced in Toronto. The Thompson Company of St. Mary's, Ont., will take over all the operations and services of York Confections, Ltd., with which Bert Wilkes and Marvin Fremes were associated. Both Fremes and Wilkes will continue their active interest in the confections business through their new association. The new company headed by George Thompson, with W. Thompson as vice-president and general manager, will continue to have headquarters at St. Mary's, Ont., but will have warehousing facilities at Toronto. York Confections originated in 1948, operating candy concessions in drive-ins and theatres, while Thompson began in 1950.

Johnathan Dunham, formerly with the Walt Disney Studios, Hollywood, recently was appointed general manager of production for Associated Screen News of Canada.

NCA Stresses Need For Industry Confab

MINNEAPOLIS—At the North Central Allied convention last week. Rube Shor, National Allied president, expressed hope that the forthcoming May 24 conference called by Allied and the Theatre Owners of America would be successful in reaching an amicable solution to the present differences between exhibition and distribution. NCA officers pledged themselves, however, to implement the National Allied resolve to seek Federal legislation regulating film rentals should the company heads refuse to meet in the industry-wide conference.

NCA will emphasize to the company presidents the desirability of participating in the conference so that motion picture entertainment will be available to theatres and public at a reasonable price. Stanley D. Kane, NCA counsel, reported that the organization's efforts defeated a daylight-saving time bill which would have permitted a ticket tax to be levied indirectly by Minnesota communities.

Another resolution expressed gratitude to Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) for the courteous reception and assistance accorded NCA president Ben Berger on a visit to Washington in behalf of exhibition's stand.

Berger was reelected president, and Stanley D. Kane was reappointed executive counsel. Other officers named were Earnest Peaslee, vice-president; Burt Parsons, secretary; and Henry Greene, treasurer.

E-K Sets Earnings Record

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Eastman Kodak Company recently reported the highest first quarter earnings in its history. During the 12 week period ending March 20, announced Thomas K. Hargrave, chairman, and Albert K. Chapman, president, consolidated sales were $149,174,688. an increase of 13 per cent over the $131,898,664 for the same period in 1954.

Consolidated net profits for the first quarter were $14,763,628, increasing by 20 per cent over 1954's first quarter earnings of $12,297,275. Earnings before taxes were $33,246,604, compared with $26,880,-520 in 1954. The quarterly earnings amount to 84 cents a share on 17,401,210 shares of common stock outstanding on March 20, compared with 70 cents a share in 1954.

Dividends declared in the first quarter were $1.50 on the preferred stock and 50 cents on the common stock.

Skiatron In The Black

NEW YORK—The annual report of Skiatron Electronics and Television Corporation last week revealed that the company. which has made large expenditures for Subscriber-Vision development, moved into the black last year.

Arthur Levey, president, disclosed that an increase of 100 per cent over the preceding year in deliveries of classified devices to the armed forces is a contributing factor.

The Subscriber-Vision decoder has been improved to permit at least 30 programs to be received with the use of a single electronic decoding card, it was revealed.

Jack L. Warner, executive producer, Warners, recently accepted the Marine Corps Reserve citation for the studio from Lieutenant Colonel Agostino T. Castagana, assistant director, Marine Corps Reserve District, San Francisco.

Local Interest Spurs New Orleans Premiere

NEW ORLEANS—The recent world premiere of "Kentucky Rifle," a Howco production, held at the Panorama, was boosted by the local press for three weeks in advance. Stories about the stars and other members of the cast appeared with a detailed account of the plot about Kentucky rifles and the band of west-bound pioneers. New Orleans' own Joy N. Houck, co-producer, was traced in his career from exhibitor and exchange owner to Hollywood.

The crowded premiere started with an open-car parade of stars, Lance Fuller, Chill Wills, and Waydine Nesbitt, "Miss Arkansas Maid," to the front of the theatre, with city officials and dignitaries as well as associates and friends of Houck, covered by television and news cameras. Scott Muni, local disc jockey, conducted preliminary stage ceremonies, and later gave way to the ingratiating Wills who showered compliments of his associates.

The film was warmly received by the capacity audience, and the following day, the entire troup left with Houck in his private plane for a tour to the principal cities of Louisiana and Mississippi. Later they appeared for the Kentucky state premiere in Owensboro, and Memphis.

AMPP, IATSE Ask Senate For Wage-Hour Status Quo

HOLLYWOOD—The Senate Labor Relations Committee, currently holding hearings on a pending bill by Senator Lehman (D., N.Y.), last fortnight was urged jointly by the Association of Motion Picture Producers and the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes to reject any amendment to the Federal minimum wage and hour law upsetting the so-called Belo contracts, which form the basis of the contract pattern between IATSE and the film studios.

In the Belo contracts, the employer guarantees the worker a specified weekly wage for a specified number of hours, and overtime is not paid until total weekly hours exceed the number set forth by contract. This type of contract is widely used in industries where working hours are irregular and has been very useful for the special problems of the studios.

Republic Announces 20 Films In 20 Weeks

NEW YORK—Consistent delivery of Republic product during the next five months was underscored last week by Richard W. Altschuler, director of worldwide sales, with the announcement of a definite release schedule covering 20 pictures to be made available during the period from May through September. All productions listed are either shooting or completed.

On the May schedule are "The Eternal Sea," co-starring Sterling Hayden, Alexis Smith and Dean Jagger; "Santa Fe Passage," co-starring John Payne, Faith Domergue, and Rod Cameron; "I Cover The Underworld," starring Sean McClory, Joanne Jordan, Ray Middleton, and Jaclynne Greene; and "Don Juan's Night Of Love," starring Raf Vallone and Silvana Pampanini.

The June program includes "Road To Denver," co-starring John Payne, Mona Freeman and Lee J. Cobb; "Flame Of The Island," starring Yvonne DeCarlo; "The Green Buddha," starring Wayne Morris and Mary Germaine; "City Of Shadows," starring Victor McLaglen; and "Double Jeopardy," starring Rod Cameron, Gale Robbins, and Allison Hayes.

July will bring one of the company's most important pictures of the year, "Magic Fire," a William Dieterle production starring Yvonne DeCarlo, Carlos Thompson, Rita Gam, Valentina Cortese, and Alan Badel as Richard Wagner; "Mystery Of The Black Jungle," starring Lex Barker; "Deadline Alley," starring Rod Cameron, Julie Bishop, and Ben Cooper; and "Jaguar," starring Sabu, Chiquita, and Barton MacLane.

The August schedule is "The Last Command," starring Sterling Hayden, Anna Maria Alberghetti, and Richard Carlson; "The Divided Heart," starring Cornell Borchers, Yvonne Mitchell, and Alexander Knox; "Lay That Rifle Down," starring Judy Canova; and "Circus Girl."

September will bring the Ray Milland picture, "The Hostage," which this star is also directing; "The Vanishing American," starring Scott Brady, Audrey Totter, and Forrest Tucker; and "Come Next Spring," starring Steve Cochran, Ann Sheridan. and Sonny Tufts.

RKO Circuit Income Steady

NEW YORK—Dudley G. Layman, vice-president, last week reported consolidated net income of $535,236 for RKO Theatres in the first quarter of 1955. For the same period in 1954 it was $531,451 before the deduction for special items, after which it was $485,358. For this year there were no such deductions, reflecting a loss last year on the sale of theatres as special items.

Income from operations for a 13-week period ending April 2 was $1,515,723; for the 13 weeks ending April 3, 1954 it was $1,543,876. Provision was listed at $475,000 and $460,000, respectively.

Shares of common stock outstanding on April 2, 1955, were 3,242,536, exclusive of 672,377 held by the corporation, the report stated. Outstanding on April 3, 1954, were 3,764,913 shares, excluding 150,000 shares held by the corporation.

Successful Drive Ends With A Record Week As UA Salutes Its Chairman Of The Board

Billings For Bob

WITH the king-sized cooperation of circuit heads and independent showmen operating in 32 exchange areas in the United States and Canada, United Artists' recently completed Bob Benjamin Drive has rolled up the greatest grosses in the 36-year history of the company.

The salute to UA's chairman of the board, expertly co-captained by distribution vice-president Bill Heineman and general sales manager Bernie Kranze, delivered some powerful evidence of what can happen when alert theatremen and a go-getting distribution organization pull together in a mutually profitable operation.

In the final week of the drive, billings soared to $1,900,000, by far the biggest seven-day total since UA unveiled its first release in 1919. The second best week for the Arthur Krim company, a solid $1,104,000, was also chalked up during the six-month Benjamin sales push in another convincing demonstration of how exhibitor-distributor teamwork pays off at the ticket window.

For the leaders among UA's 32 branches competing in three groups of equal grossing potential, rewards came in still another form: distribution of a cool $50,000 in cash prizes. The front-running branches bringing down the top awards in each division were Joe Sugar and his New York exchange; the Cleveland group, headed by David Rosenthal; and Irving Mendelson's New Haven branch.

Awards also went to runners-up in the final standings, as well as leaders in each of three preliminary six-month stages.

As notable as the results were in the Benjamin campaign, sales topper Bill Heineman sees even bigger things ahead. The recent series of production deals swung by United Artists have added an impressive concentration of top product to the company's future book. And with the type of exhibitor cooperation that put the '55 drive way over the top, UA is set to make some exciting new boxoffice history.

Seen on these pages are scenes at the various branches, not all of whom could be winners, but all of whom did their part in chalking up some of UA's most pleasurable moments since the Arthur Krim management took over. Note the international flavor provided by the participating Canadian branches.

Sales Policy Change Seen Arbitration Need

PEORIA, ILL.—E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, last fortnight told the state-wide rally of United Theatre Owners of Illinois that national sales policies must be altered before an effective arbitration system can be built.

"An inflexible sales policy cannot apply to every situation," declared Martin. "The distributors should give their local representatives the right to work out problems in relation to local conditions."

Arbitration has been delayed because distribution has demanded that two pre-release pictures a year should be permitted without arbitration. This would be about 14 pictures a year, or one quarter of the playing time for a theatre with a weekly change, said Martin. "Since distributors will not arbitrate film rentals, we should have an inexpensive system of conciliation of our own. However, we still believe in arbitration, and should have half a leaf rather than none at all. TOA will continue working toward that end."

Other speakers at the convention were Alfred Starr, co-chairman, Committee against Pay-As-You-See TV; George Kerasotes, president, UTOI, who discussed film shortages and the Exhibitor Film Financial Group program; Ralph Lawler, Norman Pyle, William Bennis, Hank Rhyan, August Marchesi, James Fenoglio, Duncan Kennedy, and Tom Gilliam, 20th-Fox.

Paramount Honors Schwalberg

NEW YORK—A. W. Schwalberg, retiring president, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation, was presented with a scroll wishing him luck in his future endeavors at a farewell party given in his honor by Paramount executives last fortnight.

Barney Balaban, making the key address before presenting the scroll, lauded Schwalberg for "outstanding service to Paramount and for the tremendous part which he had played in the development and public acceptance of VistaVision."

Schwalberg said that in his new association with Ilya Lopert and Paul Gregory Productions he would handle distribution of a limited number of films, many of which will be filmed in the VistaVision process.

Schwalberg was also presented with a special arm chair, a duplicate of the one he had used at his desk throughout his term as president of Paramount Film Distributing Corporation.

Engel Heads SPG

HOLLYWOOD—Last week Samuel G. Engel succeeded retiring president Arthur Freed as head of the Screen Producers Guild, which represents 98 per cent of the film producers in the United States.

Seven new members elected to the board for three years were William H. Wright, Buddy Adler, William Thomas, William Goetz, Jerry Bresler, Frank P. Rosenberg, and Robert Bassler.

Also elected were Adler, first vice-president; Walter M. Mirisch, second vice-president; Louis P. Edelman, third vice-president. Julian Blaustein assumes the post of secretary; and Bresler and Robert Arthur become treasurer and assistant treasurer, respectively.

"NOT AS A STRANGER"

Stanley Kramer has done it again! Without a doubt, United Artists has a sure fire hit in this filmization of a most publicized book, which was a best seller. It has a great cast, including Olivia de Havilland, Robert Mitchum (who does his best in this), Frank Sinatra, and Brod Crawford, all of whom do outstanding jobs, as do Charles Bickford and Gloria Grahame.

With a big ad campaign announced, there is certainly a ready audience for this outstanding boxoffice bet. Grab it if you can. It's money in the bank!

Legion Scores Pay-TV

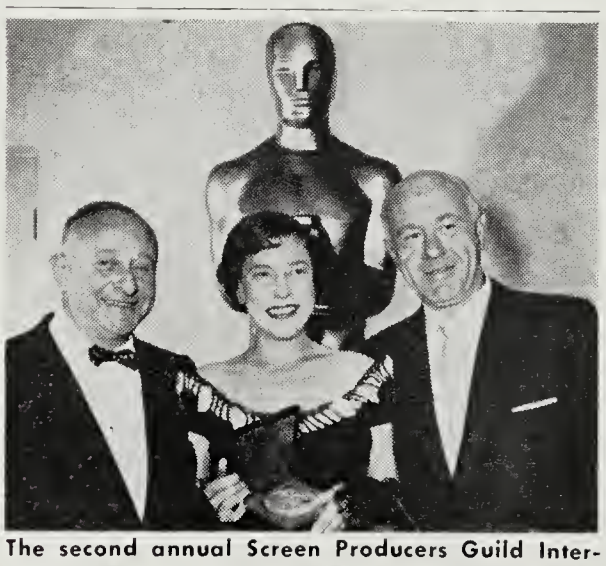
NEW YORK—The New York State American Legion Organization takes a dim view of Pay-To-See television and is especially concerned over its effect on thousands of veterans in hospitals throughout the United States, it was revealed last week.

The Legion's National Executive Board will consider the problems of Pay-To-See TV as they affect the American economy, and veterans in particular, at Indianapolis, and the New York department has urged them to oppose it on grounds it will take free TV programs off the air, including sports presentations which are tops on most hospitalized veterans' preference lists. These views have been made known to Congress and the FCC.

"We see no reason why all these donated TV sets should be converted to 'bedside slot-machines' requiring wounded, sick and disabled heroes to pay for programs they now enjoy without charge. The donors are responsible for the maintenance and repair of these sets and, obviously, installation of decoders and other gadgets presents a confusing and expensive problem."

Peiser Joins Magna

NEW YORK—The appointment of Seymour Peiser as west coast advertising publicity, and exploitation representative for Magna Theatre Corporation, world-wide distributors of "Oklahoma!" produced in Todd-AO, was announced last week by Nicholas John Matsoukas, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation.



The second annual Screen Producers Guild Inter-Collegiate Awards for best student produced films made on U. S. campuses were made recently at Hollywood's Academy Award Theatre. Taking part in the festivities were SPG president Arthur Freed, left; Judy Canova; and Sol Siegel.

Disney Sets Lineup Of '55-'56 Features

NEW YORK—Five new productions from Walt Disney and a rerelease will constitute the coming year's program of feature pictures from the Walt Disney Studios, it was announced last week by Leo F. Samuels, general sales manager, Buena Vista Film Distribution Company, the Disney releasing subsidiary. In addition, during the period from June, 1955, through June, 1956, Buena Vista will release at least six shorter Disney pictures.

The first of the features will be June's "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier." Through June and July, the feature release will be "Lady And The Tramp," the first full-length cartoon in CinemaScope and stereophonic sound.

The feature during August and September will be "The Littlest Outlaw," a live-action story. Walt Disney's Christmas-New Year release will be his third full feature-length True-Life Adventure, "The African Lion." The rerelease of "Song Of The South" will be Disney's Easter film of 1956. In June and July of 1956, Disney will present "Perri," the first of what the producer will call his True-Life Fantasy features. "Perri" will tell the story of a just-born she-squirrel.

The shorter films will include "Arizona Sheepdog," a 20-minute Technicolor picture, released in conjunction with "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier." "Switzerland," the first of Disney's new "People And Places" series, will be released with "Lady And The Tramp." It runs 32 minutes. Two shorter films will be released with "The Littlest Outlaw." They are "Johnny Appleseed," a 20-minute Technicolor excerpt from "Melody Time," and "The Emperor Penguins," a new eight-minute black-and-white documentary. The "Peter And The Wolf" sequence from "Make Mine Music" will be reshaped into a complete 20-minute film, and will be released in conjunction with "The African Lion." With "Song Of The South," a new half-hour "People And Places" Technicolor production, "The Blue Men Of Morocco" will be seen.

UJA Committees Named

NEW YORK—Avraham Harman, consul general of Israel in New York, will be the guest speaker at the annual luncheon of the Motion Picture and Amusement Division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York, it was announced last week by Adolph Schimel, vice-president and general counsel, U-I, chairman of the division. The event, which will honor Major Albert Warner, is scheduled for May 24 at the Hotel Pierre. Schimel also announced that the industry has completed its mobilization of the various committees to guide the division's 1955 UJA campaign.

Schimel Succeeds Keough

NEW YORK—Eric Johnston, president, announced at a meeting last week of the board of Motion Picture Association that he had appointed Adolph Schimel as chairman, MPAA Law Committee. Schimel, who succeeds the late Austin C. Keough, is vice-president, general counsel, and secretary, U-I.

Survey Forecasts Rise In Theatre Audiences

NEW YORK—An industry analysis made by Standard and Poor last week predicted that 1955 may see a weekly attendance average of 50,000,000 which could approach 55,000,00, which should be compared with averages of 49,000,000 in 1954 and 46,000,000 in 1953.

The report predicts theatre revenues of $1,300,000,000 for 1955, against $1,200,000,000 in 1954, attributing the increase to new theatres in operation. Profits of theatre operators, it is forecast, "will continue to be restricted by higher film rentals and other operating costs."

The analysis continues, "Earnings of leading producers may moderately extend the gains registered in 1954, partly reflecting increased remittances from abroad."

The survey lists the number of theatres operating at "around 19,000," including 4,100 drive-ins, and predicts that 4,500 drive-ins will be open in August. Admission prices are expected to climb slightly during the present year.

Film companies current and new television film activities are expected to produce relatively unimportant immediate benefits, which could become important in a few years.

Film stocks are called attractive short term investments, although color television and toll-TV make the future unclear. The survey notes that many companies could increase their dividends.

U-I Ups Ad Budget

NEW YORK—Climaxing more than a week of meetings of Universal-International's west coast and east coast advertising and publicity executives on promotion plans on the line up of top pictures scheduled for release during the summer and the fall, David A. Lipton, vice-president, last week announced an increase of $1,000,000 in the advertising and publicity budget for the current fiscal year ending Oct. 31 to give the company the largest promotional budget in its history.

The $1,000,000 additional allocation, Lipton explained, will be reflected in increased appropriations for all advertising media including daily newspapers, television and radio, in addition to the increase in national magazine advertising and Sunday supplements.

Scheduled to receive important national magazine advertising campaigns during the period between now and the end of the fiscal year are "This Island Earth," "Foxfire," "The Shrike," "The Private War Of Major Benson," "One Desire," "Female On The Beach," and "To Hell And Back."

Continental Appoints Thomas

NEW YORK—President Frank Kassler, Continental Distributing, Inc., recently announced that former exhibitor Harry H. Thomas has been named western sales manager for the firm with headquarters in Los Angeles.

Thomas, formerly eastern district sales manager of Monogram, president of PRC, president of Equity Pictures, and sales vice-president of Souvaine Pictures, has been in distribution since the days of the General Film Company.

Paramount Buffalo Branch Wins "Salute to Future" Contest

NEW YORK—Paramount's Buffalo branch, headed by Edmund C. DeBerry, has won top position in the company's "A Salute To The Future" sales contest held last year in conjunction with celebration of Paramount's 40th Anniversary, it was announced last fortnight.

Top salesman in the final standings was Peter R. DeFazio, Indianapolis, with Eugene E. Beuerman, Los Angeles, in runner-up spot, and Charles A. Caliguiri, Des Moines, in third place.

New Haven branch, managed by Henry Germaine, took second spot in the race among the branches, and Chicago, managed by J. H. Stevens, emerged in third position.

Gordon To Europe For Allied

WASHINGTON—Allied States Association last week announced the naming of Julius M. Gordon, Allied secretary, as the associations official representative at the Cannes Film Festival, the regular meeting of the Union Internationale de l'Exploitation Cinematographique in Paris, and for conferences with officials of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association in London.

Gordon will report to the Allied board on his return. The announcement noted that correspondence has been going on for some time between Abram F. Myers and foreign exhibitor leaders, with Allied often invited to send a representative to Europe.

IATSE, TNT Sign Pact

NEW YORK—Executives of Theatre Network Television and IATSE last week announced that the two organizations have concluded the first industry agreement covering employes in closed-circuit television. The contract will run for one year and cover all operations of the 41-city domestic-Canadian network over which TNT broadcasts the closed circuit program.

Robert J. O'Donnell, executive vice-president, Interstate Theatre Circuit, Dallas, recently presented to Doris Day in New York City, Interstate's first annual Golden Script Award "for her consistent outstanding screen portrayals and her subsequent boxoffice achievement."

HOLLYWOOD—With 3,518 theatres, including "154 of the finest and biggest circuits in America," contracted for the Makelim Plan, Hal R. Makelim, originator of the plan for exhibitor participation in production and head, Makelim Pictures, Inc., announced last fortnight that "no contracts, requests for contracts or corrected contracts" will be accepted after May 25. Correspondence postmarked up to midnight of that date will be considered.

"Patience is a virtue and I am thankful and grateful to the many thousands who have expressed it to me so abundantly," Makelim said at his offices at the RKO Pathe Studios. The producer said that he would announce soon his first group of pictures. Under the Makelim plan, participating exhibitors will receive 12 features annually at the rate of one a month.

"Close to 25 per cent of all the exhibitors in the country have joined and pledged in one body to exploit and promote Makelim Pictures," Makelim explained. These pictures, according to the producer, will be "clean, powerful, and entertaining stories. . . . There will be no smut and no epics—just good, clean pictures."

Makelim expressed his thanks and appreciation for the "patience, support, and confidence" of the 154 circuits and the "thousands of reliable and trustworthy independent exhibitors from coast to coast who have signed to the Makelim Plan, and to the exhibitor organizations whose verbal support helped so much."

In his personal efforts to bring the details of his plan to the country's exhibitors in need of product, Makelim has traveled more than 120,000 miles, and been to almost every section in which there is a motion picture audience, since last April, when the Makelim Plan was first announced.

Exhibitors who contract under the Makelim Plan are not required to invest money; they sign to pay for pictures on delivery at rental terms specified in "play or pay" contracts for the entire schedule of 12 feature productions. Rentals from contracted dates will cover the production costs, with profits from non-participating theatres and the foreign markets being divided between Makelim and the participating theatre owners.

Loew Sees Story Shortage

NEW YORK—Arthur M. Loew, president, Loew's International, recently called shortages of important story material, fine writers, and other creative talent serious obstacles to producers wishing to bring important pictures to the screen, as he concluded his six-week study of the MGM studio.

Commenting on MGM's past reluctance to make participation deals with independent producers and the recent arrangements with Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Desilu Productions, and Sol Siegel, Loew said that the company's policies have always been tempered by conservatism when considering new methods and techniques.

Krim, Picker, Launch First UA Foreign Meet

LONDON—Forty per cent of United Artists' global revenue now comes from the foreign market, it was disclosed here last week by Arnold M. Picker, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, as he addressed 150 executives and representatives assembled at the Savoy Hotel for the second session of UA's international convention.

Picker described the expansion of the company's overseas operations since the Arthur Krim management group took over control early in 1951. During that period, foreign department personnel increased from 755 to 1,092. New branches raised the number of overseas offices from 55 to 67. Picker also reported that the number of prints manufactured to service foreign exhibitors had risen from 1,806 in 1951 to 3,836 in 1954.

The UA overseas distribution chief predicted that, with the tremendous concentration of blue-chip product brought to the United Artists release roster through the recent series of production deals, gains in foreign grosses during the coming year could well outstrip the progress made in the previous four years.

In the opening-day keynote address, President Arthur B. Krim declared that independent production is today a supreme factor in film-making throughout the world. Citing the world-wide character of United Artists production activities, Krim detailed the important films now before the cameras or scheduled to start work overseas.

The London convention, a seven-day session bringing together United Artists representatives from 20 countries in Europe, the Middle East, and Africa, launches the first world-wide series of foreign sales conclaves in the company's 36-year history.

NT Income Up

LOS ANGELES—National Theatres' consolidated income for the 13 weeks ended March 26 was $734,133 or 27 cents per share compared to $651,468 or 24 cents per share in the corresponding quarter for 1954, Elmer C. Rhoden, president, told stockholders last week.

The consolidated net income for the 26 weeks ended March 26 was $1,280,549, or 46 cents per share on the 2,769,486 shares of stock outstanding compared with $1,307,050, or 47 cents per share in 1954, Rhoden stated. Gross income for the same period was up four per cent but attendance was down eight per cent.

Striking an optimistic note, Rhoden said the company looks forward to a more satisfactory third quarter period "with the release of stronger attractions and the diminishing television audience in the summer."

Loew's Names Friedman

NEW YORK—It was announced last fortnight that Leopold Friedman, financial vice-president and treasurer of Loew's Theatres, will become the secretary of the circuit on the resignation of Eliot Rosenthal, who has held the post since last September. Harold J. Cleary, vice-president and comptroller, has been elected treasurer by the board.

MGM star Ann Miller is seen arriving for the recent world premiere of "Interrupted Melody," Metro, Melbourne, Australia.

Italy

In Rome, Carlo Ponti, leading Italian producer, member of the team Ponti-De-Laurentiis, expressed confidence that the restrictive measures proposed for the new basic film law for Italy will be overcome by the industry. Ponti announced that the Italian film producers have filed a protest with Undersecretary Scalfaro, who is expected to withdraw the regulations following a hearing, inasmuch as the Italian film industry already operates under a self-imposed code not unlike the Production Code observed in the United States, which the producers feel adequate to prevent the abuse of moral principles. Although the producers are not opposed to the Scalfaro principles, Ponti and his associates feel that the government edict is unnecessary.

U-I Foreign Billings Set Record In Daff Push

NEW YORK—A new all-time record high for foreign billings was set in the final week of the 1955 Daff Drive, 17 week sales drive conducted overseas by Universal-International, it was announced last week by Americo Aboaf, vice-president and general foreign manager.

Thirty-nine branches and distributors throughout the world participated in the drive honoring Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president.

PERSONAL NOTE: Hello, Monty Salmon, wherever you are.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: Last Thursday night was "Daddy Night" 'round these here parts and the midtown area surrounding the Roxy was indeed conscious of the premiere of "Daddy Long Legs" at that house as an Army band played, flashlight bulbs of covering photographers popped to record the arrival of numerous personalities, radio and TV covered everything, etc. What we especially liked about the whole deal was that Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox president, turned over the entire proceeds to the March of Dimes to help pay for the needed Salk vaccine. . . . Sorry to hear about Bill Pine passing on. He seemed, to us at least, to be a straight-forward guy who was on the level in all his conversations with us, which puts him pretty high in this league. . . . The Roxy and Bill Moclair are honoring Mothers on their Day with perfume and orchids. . . . June 19 will see Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" salute for the full hour Leland Hayward's "Mister Roberts," with both the stage and filmed versions getting proper play.

Lipton Heads Meetings Of U-I Ad Pub-Ex Men

NEW YORK—David A. Lipton, U-I vice-president, last week held a series of advertising, publicity, and promotion meetings in New York attended by eastern and west coast executives to map the company's promotional plans on its high rated summer releases.

Also to be charted are the record promotional campaigns on "The Shrike," which will be released in September after a series of important key city openings during July and August, and "To Hell And Back," which is being set for one of the greatest promotional campaigns in the history of U-I.

Highlighting U-I's summer releases will be "This Island Earth," "The Private War Of Major Benson," "Foxfire," "Ain't Misbehavin'," "One Desire," "The Purple Mask," and "Francis In The Navy."

Attending the meetings were Charles Simonelli, eastern advertising and publicity department manager; Clark Ramsay, executive assistant to Lipton; Philip Gerard, eastern publicity manager; Jeff Livingston, eastern advertising manager; Herman Kass, eastern exploitation manager; Henry A. Linet, sales promotion manager; Bob Rains, who supervises the company's television and radio promotion activities at the U-I Studios; Bob Faber, who supervises the production of U-I trailers; John Horton, U-I's Washington representative; and Robert Gillham, vice-president, Cunningham and Walsh, U-I advertising agency.

U-I Wins Suit

NEW YORK—Federal Judge Edmund L. Palmieri handed down a decision last fortnight in favor of U-I in the suit brought against the company by Thomas T. Cooke, an attorney, for services rendered from 1946 to 1951 in the appeal taken by Universal in the case United States vs. Paramount. Cooke sought judgment for $115,000 on the basis that benefits resulting to the defendants from his services extended into 1951, although the testimony established that the services were rendered only until February, 1949.

In ruling for the defendants, Judge Palmieri stated that he regarded the suit as an imposition on the defendant and on the court.

Warners Buy Stock

WASHINGTON—It was reported by the Securities and Exchange Commission last fortnight that Harry M. Warner, president, Warners, bought 1,700 shares of common stock in the corporation during March, which increased to 13,700 shares his beneficiary trust holdings, and to 105,850 shares his direct holdings. Albert Warner, vice-president, who also bought 1,700 common shares, now holds 32,700 shares in beneficiary trust and 160,000 shares directly. Jack L. Warner, vice-president, increased his direct holdings to 295,399 shares with his acquisition of another 1,700 common shares.

Trading in other film shares was also heavy during this period.

20th-Fox Boosts Adler

NEW YORK—In addition to his activities as a 20th-Fox producer, Buddy Adler henceforth also will function as an executive on the staff of Darryl F. Zanuck, it was announced by Zanuck last week.

During the year that Adler has been under contract to the studio he has produced five pictures, "Soldier of Fortune," "Violent Saturday," "House of Bamboo," "Left Hand Of God," and "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing."

Zanuck emphasized that this appointment does not alter the status of any other studio executive.

Empire Announces Financial Expansion

ORLANDO, FLA.—An expanded financial program to meet increased production was announced recently by officers of Empire Studios, Inc., motion picture producers of this city.

Empire's plans to broaden its financial structure became known simultaneously with the appearance of newspaper advertising announcing an issue of 60,000 shares of the company's common stock.

According to R. John Hugh, president, a resolution authorizing the issue was approved by Empire stockholders at their annual meeting. Outstanding stock in the company will be recalled, he said, and reissued on a 25-for 1 basis.

The action represents what Hugh termed "merely the beginning of a long-range program" that eventually will enable the independent company to turn out a minimum of six feature length films a year.

Company officials say they expect to spend upwards of a quarter million dollars during the next six months. This will include some of the basic costs in the preparation of two new films, which under the terms of Empire's multiple picture releasing contract with Republic must be ready for national distribution this winter.

The first of these pictures, which will go into production within the next 30 days, is the original story concerning the life of the legendary Seminole leader, Osceola, written for Empire by Frank G. Slaughter, noted novelist. The second film, scheduled to go before the cameras in the fall, is a modern murder mystery.

Empire's new financial program was planned and directed by Gerard R. Jobin, Investments, Ltd., national brokers and underwriters, with main offices in St. Petersburg, Fla., who have been retained as financial advisers and fiscal agents by the film company.

Empire officers, elected at the annual meeting are Hugh, president; Jack A. Nants, Dean G. Downs, and H. R. Hathaway, Jr., vice-presidents; John E. Thomas, secretary-treasurer; and Robert T. Threadgill, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Members of the board include Hugh, Nants, Downs, Hathaway, and Thomas in addition to Harry H. Hearn, W. H. Urban, William A. Slade, and Robert James.

Hennock Asks FCC Probe

WASHINGTON—With application for pay-as-you-go TV still pending, Federal Communications Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock last fortnight urged the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to make an intensive study whether television networks should be permitted to produce and distribute films. Miss Hennock sharply criticized earlier reports by the committee and two FCC members dealing with television networks and UHF stations and insists the film question should be part of a Congressional probe.

The Commissioner, without mentioning toll-TV directly, pointed out that network monoply of stations, affiliates, talent, and penetration into production and syndication phases of the film industry adversely affects competition and strangles the development of TV.

MM Signs PR Firm

NEW YORK—Marilyn Monroe Productions, Inc., last week announced that it has retained the services of the Arthur P. Jacobs Company as national public relations counsel

"O thou of little faith wherefore didst thou have any doubt?"

After midnight of May 25, 1955, no contract or request for contract will be considered in THE MAKELIM PLAN.

Contracts, requests for contracts, or those returned for correction, under THE MAKELIM PLAN, mailed before midnight of May 25, 1955, will be considered.

3529 EXHIBITORS (close to 25% of all the exhibitors in the country) have joined and pledged in one body, to play and pay for, to exploit and promote MAKELIM PICTURES, one a month. Clean—powerful—entertaining stories that will bring a tear, a smile, or a thrill. No filth—no smut—no epics—just good, clean pictures. Good for the 10-year-old, the teenager, the parents, and the grandparents.

I humbly bow my head in thankful prayer for the patience, support, and confidence of 154 of the finest and biggest circuits of theatres in America who have signed for THE MAKELIM PLAN.

To the thousands of reliable and trustworthy independent exhibitors from coast to coast who have all signed for THE MAKELIM PLAN—and to those exhibitor organizations whose verbal support helped so much—my sincere thanks. I am truly grateful.

So that all who join THE MAKELIM PLAN will have done so on an equal basis—stories, casts, and starting dates, will be announced after the closing date.

Patience is a great virtue, and I am thankful and grateful to the many thousands who have expressed it to me so abundantly.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Interstate Takes Steps To Draw Teen-Agers

DALLAS—A plan to increase movie patronage of youths in the 12-through-17 years of age bracket by means of a revolutionary intermediate price scale will be put into effect this month by Interstate Theatres.

The action was inspired by the urging of Leonard Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, to encourage attendance of young moviegoers. Some years ago Interstate adopted a Junior Ticket plan, but because of a federal excise tax burden, plus some other problems including abuse of the plan by over-age patrons, it was dropped.

Goldenson felt, and Interstate has long been in agreement, that children and young people are among the movies' most faithful customers. However, regularity of attendance tends to lessen when the age of 12 is reached because of the big admission price increase. Interstate believes that its new plan, nearing completion, will eliminate the "bugs" which plagued earlier ventures into the intermediate age price field.

Interstate's plan, briefly, is to recruit young moviegoers by issuing "Movie Discount" cards, which will entitle holders to reduced admission privileges. The laminated plastic cards will be sold for one dollar and will be good for one year from the date of issuance. The plan is a continuous one, with holders of cards allowed to purchase new cards at the end of each 12-month period until they reach their eighteenth birthday. And there will be a continual flow of potential new customers attaining the age of 12.

The card is expected to be especially desirable because it will provide reductions up to 50 per cent of adult admissions which the teen-age group has been paying. Aware of tens of thousands of "Movie Discount" cards might be sold throughout the circuit, a 12-months per year bookkeeping system is being set up to handle applications and renewals.

Advertising will point up the fact that the card will make it possible for the 12-through-17 year age group to see almost twice as many movies at Interstate theatres for the same amount of money previously paid for adult priced tickets. Parents who give allowances to their children will be made cognizant of the savings they will derive as a result of the new plan, too.

A special publicity and advertising campaign manual will be supplied each theatre in the circuit, giving managers the tools with which to dramatically and vigorously sell the unique plan. The campaign will not only introduce the plan but also will sustain it. Following a one-week teaser campaign on theatre screens, in lobbies, through newspaper stories and radio spots, approximately three weeks before the end of school the entire state will be bombarded by a barrage of advertising, publicity, and exploitation stunts, hitting simultaneously in all 21 towns of the circuit.

In preparation now are advance and current newspaper ads carrying application blanks, which will guarantee fast and complete distribution. Additional application blanks will be available on thousands of heralds to be handed out in theatres and at schools. A novelty form of newspaper ad will be a four-column cartoon by a celebrated Texas newspaper cartoonist. It will be published in school papers and dailies.

Unusual radio spot announcements will utilize the voices of well-known motion picture stars; and vocals, telops and announcements will be made on television. Outdoor posting will include three-sheets, 24-sheets and public bus cards; and announcements will be made at scores of weekly Saturday morning kid shows.

R. J. O'Donnell, vice-president and general manager, Interstate, said he believes the plan will work to the mutual advantage of youths and theatres.

Interns, a pretty model, and a hospital bed were the ingredients of this recent novel street display arranged by Maury Schwarz, Walter Reade's Bridge, San Francisco, for street bally on Republic's "Doctor In The House." The "internes" handed out bandages for use by patrons in event they split their sides laughing at the film.

Travel Contest To Aid "Summertime" Dates

NEW YORK—A national contest that will award eight expenses-paid vacations in Venice and $5,000 worth of prizes has been set in behalf of United Artists' "Summertime," it was announced last week by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for UA.

Pegged on the Italian location filming of the United Artists release, the contest requires entrants to complete the sentence, "I would like to fly to Venice, where 'Summertime' was filmed, because . . ." Four national winners and their companions will be flown to the colorful city of canals by LAI (Italian Airlines). After a free, week-long stay at the famous Hotel Royal Danieli Excelsior, LAI will fly the finalist home.

Eighty-five Lau portable window fans, valued at $5,000, will be distributed to runners-up in the jumbo promotion spotlighting key dates and subsequent runs of "Summertime" throughout the United States.

Special exhibitor aids for the attention-building competition include a free one-sheet poster listing the roster of awards, contest blanks, and heralds.

Wide-spread support for the "Summertime" vacation-in-Venice promotion will come from counter and window displays at travel agencies, bus depots, and air and rail terminals in every exchange area throughout the country. Displays backing local playdates will combine posters and scene stills with prominent "Summertime" credits. The contest is also being ballyhooed in a half-page ad appearing in the May issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

Merchant Co-ops Stressed

GUELPH, ONTARIO—Herb Chappel, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd.'s, Palace, recently set several nice tieups with the Royalty Food Plan. One was a give-away of a Ureka vacuum cleaner. This had a small booth with contest ballots and ballot box in the lobby on "Green Fire" with signs reading: "Enjoy Green Fire—and stay out of the red in your Food Budget, etc." The other was in the nature of a co-op ad in the Daily Mercury, 14 inches by two columns on "Untamed," which read, "Don't let your food costs run wild! Tame Them the Royalty Food Plan way. See 'Untamed,' Palace, etc."

NEWS OF THE Territory

BRANCHES

Atlanta

Atlanta's largest drive-in is now under construction and will be ready to open in approximately 45 days. The theatre is being constructed by Georgia Theatres. John H. Stembler, president, said the theatre will accommodate more than 1,000 cars and will incorporate into the building all modern facilities that have been engineered during the past three years. It will have CinemaScope screen 120 feet wide and 70 feet high, with a lake in front of the super structure. The drive-in will be named the South Expressway Drive-In.

Sam George, manager, Paramount, has resigned. Curtis Mays, manager, Roxy, moves to manager, Paramount. . . . Harold Spears, Variety Club chief barker, is really getting up a head of steam for Old Newsboys' Day on May 13, for the benefit of the Cerebral Palsy School. John Fulton, the radio and TV exec, suggested a grand slogan for the day, "Let's make Friday 13 a lucky day for a CP child." Fred Coleman, theatre owner, "Papa" of the Old Newsboys' day idea in Atlanta, was beaming with confidence as muscles are flexed to better the $66,000 of last year.

Louis Rosenbaum, partner, Muscle Shoals Theatres in Alabama, was cited for his work in the March of Dimes campaign by the local newspaper in connection with the announcement of the success of the Salk anti-polio vaccine. Rosenbaum was credited with having worked steadily over the year as chairman to raise funds for the cause in the Muscle-Shoals district. He also was cited for his work for crippled children.

E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, has appointed Horace Denning, Jacksonville, as co-chairman of the drive-in theatre committee of the national exhibitor group. Denning is president, Motion Picture Exhibitor Association of Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Lawrence, Lawrence Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., has returned there after a visit with friends. . . . At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Curley Burns, he's booker, Columbia, the old stork left a baby boy. . . . Walter Griswald, office manager, Howco Films, has resigned. . . . Paul S. Wood, theatre owner, Century, Fla., has taken over the Coosa, Gadsden, Ala. . . . Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, biller, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, checked in after a vacation spent in Florida.

An Alabama woman filed a suit in Federal Court asking $100,020 in damages from the Theatre Service Company in the death of her 18-year-old boy. The petition of Mrs. Ella Estelle Harrell asserts that H. L. Titshaw, driver for the film company, was driving negligently at about 70 miles per hour when a sand truck in which James Earl Harrell was riding as a passenger was struck.

Columbia starlets Evelyn Bunn, Laura Brook, and June Edwards, top to bottom, recently arrived in Memphis and were presented with initialed handbags by disc jockey Dick Covington; Watson Davis, Malco Theatre manager; and Norman Colquhoun, Columbia's Memphis branch manager, who rounded out a welcoming committee. The three lovelies, who appear in "Three For The Show," are on a personal appearance tour in key cities on behalf of the film.

Mrs. H. G. Fuller, owner, Star, Phil Campbell, Ala., has closed the house. . . . The Kissimmee Drive-In, Kissimmee, Fla., owned by Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Ventry, Ponce de Leon, Fla., has opened. They also own the drive-in at Ponce de Leon. . . . The Robertsdale, Robertsdale, Ala., and Lex, Eleberta, Ala., in cooperation with local merchants, are offering free tickets on each Wednesday until May 28.

The Lucas, Savannah, Ga., received an unexpected publicity break before the opening of "A Man Called Peter" in the form of a full column of praise for the picture in The Savannah Evening Press. The column was a reprint of an article in The Atlanta Constitution by the Reverend Charles L. Allen. . . . A 10 per cent gross receipts tax on theatres and other places of amusement in Russellville, Alabama, has been proposed in a bill there.

Lorraine Jackson, manager, Victoria, New Smyrna, Fla., has been appointed Florida State Theatres relief manager during the summer vacation. . . . The Circle, Hialeah, Fla., gave a free Saturday afternoon matinee for the kiddies under the sponsorship of the Citizens Federal Saving and Loan Association. . . . The E. M. Loew Theatres, Inc., Boston, has started construction of a new 598-car drive-in at Hallendale, Fla., to cost $170,00. The screen will be 72-feet high. . . . The third anniversary celebration was held at the Lake Haines Drive-In, Haines City, Fla.

The Atlanta-Fulton County joint planning board approved establishment of Atlanta's first Negro drive-in. Bailey Theatres was the petitioner. Work will start at once. . . . The Southeastern Movie Festival, a 30-day program, will get under way in over 300 theatres in Tennessee, Florida, and Georgia on May 16, with Warners' "The Sea Chase" as the picture selected to start the festival going. Luncheons to celebrate the occasion are headed by one to be held here on May 17, with Governor Marvin Griffin of Georgia attending. The Warner film should be a good starter for the big program.

Lamar Reddick, Hi-Way Drive-In, De-Funiak Springs, Fla., has installed CinemaScope, as has the 31 Drive-In, Cullman, Ala. . . . A 500-car drive-in, Tavernier, Fla., is being built by Major and Mrs. Robert L. Dancan. . . . The Lake, Lakeland, Fla., is now equipped with CinemaScope.

The Lake, Lake Butler, Fla., is installing a CinemaScope screen. The stage and the old cooling system had to be removed and the stage lowered. . . . Johnny Russell, manager, Gay, Hartsville, Tenn., is installing CinemaScope by Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Company.

Ed Nolan, ground keeper and night watchman, Park-Vue Drive-In, Muscle Shoals, Ala., says that flood waters may have saved his life. A windstorm blew down the theatre screen, demolished a small house nearby, and leveled part of the fence. Nolan has been sleeping in the small house near the screen, but just before the storm, had been chased out by high water. The flood was a lucky break indeed!

CinemaScope has been installed at the Magnolia, Titusville, Fla., owned by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cutter. . . . The Regent, Crystal River, Fla., has been equipped with CinemaScope screen and new projection machines. . . . Cletus Benton and Hoyt Fair are new owners, Cleveland Drive-In, Cleveland, Tenn., from Walter Morris. . . . The Cherokee Amusement Company has closed their Capital, Oneida, Tenn. . . . The Gay, Jellico, Tenn., will run only three days each week until business gets better. . . . E. H. Brauer, branch manager, Republic, was back from New York. . . . Herb Greenblatt, general sales manager, RKO, was in for a visit with Dave Prince. . . . Sid Reams, formerly with Republic, made his first visit on Film Row since a heart attack several months ago. . . . Columbia's George Roscoe's daughter has left for a trip to Europe to study dramatics. . . . Johnny Harrell, Martin Theatres' buyer, checked in after a trip to Jacksonville. . . . It was a happy birthday to Ben Jordan, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges.

Martin Theatres, Columbus, Ga., has closed their Ritz, Sylacauga, Ala. . . . The regular meeting of the Atlanta Variety Club was held in the club rooms with Jack Tarver as guest speaker. . . . The first copy of the 1955 edition of "Old Newspapers Day Cerebral Palsy" newspapers was auctioned off for a substantial sum.

A misdemeanor charge filed against William Schultz, manager, State, Tampa, Fla., in connection with showing "Garden of Eden," has been dropped by municipal court. Schultz was at first charged with showing an obscene motion picture, and later the charges were showing a film which hadn't been cleared with either the National Board of Review or New York State censorship authorities.

The Koblegard Theatre interests in Fort Pierce, Stuart, Vero Beach, Cocoa, Eau Gallie, and Melbourne, all in Florida, were sold to the First Southern Corporation, thus ending a long show business history that began here in 1923.

James L. Cartwright, Florida State Theatres district manager, was elected for the 19th consecutive year to the board of directors of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce. . . . The Riviera, Chattanooga, Tenn., was recently remodeled at a cost of $20,000 for the showing of art films. With the reopening of the Riviera, the Park is being reverted to neighborhood status. . . . Work will start on the rebuilding of the screen tower, boxoffice, and concession stand at the Victory Drive-In, Savannah, Ga., recently destroyed by a freak tornado. . . . Clifford Still, Chipley, Fla., is new manager, Gem, Cuthbert, Ga. He replaces C. L. Funderburke, who died recently.

A. L. King, owner, King Drive-In, Russellville, Ala., has been plagued by an outbreak of vandalism. King offered a $50 reward for the name of the person who took a speaker from a back ramp and the same amount for the name of the individual who appropriated a no parking sign. . . . The Bacon, Alma, Ga., has installed stereophonic sound by Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Company.

Thomas P. Titwell, 20th-Fox branch manager, and Marvin Skinner, booker, Jacksonville, returned there after a visit here. . . . E. H. Geissler, Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Company was back after a trip to Florida.

The new Sheryl Drive-In, Commerce, Ga., owned by Bill Wilson, has opened with bookings by Marguerite Stith. . . . The New, Hurtsboro, Ala., has reopened after being closed for a year. C. B. McManus is owner. . . . The Kent, Immokalee, Fla., has installed CinemaScope.

Charlotte

W. Frank Harris, Harris Theatre Sales, Inc., came out in one of the 10 places for election to City Councilman in the primary. The run-off will be in May. . . . Roy Smart, Wilby-Kincey office, and Mrs. Smart, accompanied by their daughter and her children, Mrs. Joseph W. Grier, Jr., Joseph III, Cathie, and Susan, went to Garden City, S. C.

WOMPI held their first meeting in the form of a dinner luncheon at Thacker's Restaurant. The president, Mrs. Myrtle Parker, Paramount, presided. The invocation was given by Mrs. Hazel Miller, U-I, and she was appointed chaplain of the WOMPI group for the year. The project for the group is the County Home. Gifts will be taken up each Wednesday and distributed to the guests of the Home by the members. A basket will be placed in one of the exchanges for receiving the gifts. MGM had the basket for the week. Each week a different exchange will have charge of receiving the gifts. The committee for planning the installation banquet is composed of Mrs. Pauline Griffith, N. C. Theatres Association; Mrs. Marjorie Baker, Wil-Kin Supply Company; and Mrs. Gladys Hawkins, Wilby-Kincey. The officers for the year and the committees will be installed at this dinner and invited guests will be the heads of each exchange and group.

Joe Moore Laekey, manager, Acme Theatres' Empire, Birmingham, Ala., was recently awarded the Third Army Certificate of Appreciation by Colonel R. C. Theiring, Chief, Alabama Military District. The certificate was awarded Laekey in recognition of his services in support and promotion of the Army Reserve Program, National Guard, and National Defense. It is believed that the award is only the second to be made in the Third Army District to anyone in the motion pieture business.

Helen Brunson, secretary, Wilby-Kincey, is in New York on her vacation. . . . Charlie Freeman, head, booking department, Wilby-Kincey, is the proud papa of a new baby girl. . . . Miss Catherine LeGrand has resigned her position with Kay exchange to go with the Charlotte City Coach Lines. She was with Kay 11 years. . . . Mrs. H. F. Kincey, wife of H. F. Kincey, Wilby-Kincey Theatres, and Mrs. John Schenck were spending 10 days in New York on a pleasure trip.

Mrs. Thelma Culp, cashier, Warners, has been on the sick list. . . . From RKO comes the word that Cupid is on the alert. Booker James Burton is going to tie the knot with Mary Sue Little, Hughes, Ark., on May 27. Burton came to RKO from Memphis, Tenn., in March. . . . Roby Branon, branch manager, RKO, and Dean Lynch, student salesman, made a trip up to High Point, N. C., to call on exhibitors in that territory.

Jacksonville

A day prior to the MGM Workshop at the Coliseum in Orlando, Fla., the officers and directors of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Florida approved a resolution honoring Mike Simons, MGM director of customer relations, for his untiring efforts on behalf of the workshop program. It was signed by Jerry Gold, president; Horace Denning, chairman, board of directors; and William L. Beck, secretary.

E. D. Martin, TOA president, has appointed local exhibitor Horace Denning as co-chairman of the group's national drive-in committee. . . . Alex Harrison, New York, western sales manager, 20th-Fox, and Paul Wilson, Atlanta, assistant southern sales manager, were here to confer with Thomas P. Tidwell, local 20th-Fox branch manager. They later left for New Orleans. . . . More than 40 local persons attended the MGM Workshop at the Coliseum in Orlando. . . . In town were Leonard Allen, Paramount's southern press representative, and Phil Conway, Buena Vista. . . . Atlantans calling on local booking offices were Roy Nicaud, Howco, and Byron Adams, United Artists.

One of the ablest and most popular of local exhibitors, Mrs. Lillian Parker, manager, suburban Brentwood, has announced her retirement from the industry. Her career began in 1917 when she became employed at the downtown Imperial as a cashier. Trained in the traditions of the former Paramount Publix Circuits, Mrs. Parker was always a person of outstanding courtesy and diplomacy in dealing with the public. She was also well-known here for the cleanliness of her theatre operations, as well as for her showmanship, business ability, and merchandising policies. Her former post has been taken by Bob Greenleaf, who was promoted from an assistant's job at the Florida.

Bud Chalman, executive, ABC Theatrical Enterprises, said that the boxoffice of the Gulf-To-Bay Drive-In, Clearwater, Fla., owned by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shingler, was recently robbed of several hundred dollars in a night holdup by two armed bandits. . . . Louis J. Finske, Florida State Theatres vice-president, accompanied by French B. Harvey, FST advertising chief, returned from a tour of central Florida and the west coast.

R. John Hugh, president, Empire Studios of Orlando, producers of "Yellowneck," revealed that his Florida motion picture production company has scheduled the shooting of a new picture in Florida locations which is based on the life of Osceola, famed Seminole warrior who opposed the Army in the costliest Indian war in American history. The picture will be taken from an original story written by Dr. Frank G. Slaughter, local physician, whose novels are almost constantly on best-selling lists. . . . Returning from west Florida was Carroll Ogburn, Warners branch manager, who said that I. F. Dolid, formerly of New York, is his new south Florida salesman.

Memphis

Billy Ruffin, Ruffin, Covington, Tenn., was mighty proud of 200 of his customers recently when a fire broke out next door, and they filed out in orderly fashion. The grocery was gutted by flames, and the theatre was smoke damaged. . . . Memphis is to be one of 100 cities to get the closed television circuit showing of the Rocky Marciano-Don Cockell fight, which will play the Warner. The fight will be projected on a 15- by 25-foot screen. . . . Sunset Carson recently played the Sunset Drive-In, West Memphis, Ark., in person.

Amelia Ellis has opened her new Ellis Drive-In, Millington, Tenn., equipped for 400 cars. She has a 90-foot screen for VistaVision and CinemaScope. . . . J. A. Prichard, southern division manager, Allied Artists, was in town.

New Orleans

Joe Silver, head booker, 20th-Fox, has been advanced to salesman in the territory replacing Lloyd Edwards, whom the company is placing on their Atlanta staff to fill the post previously held by Henry Harrell, who has been made manager of the newly created Houston branch. Silver's area includes Mississippi, southwest Alabama, and western Florida. Anita Gibson, assistant booker, will take over the head booker's post.

Branch manager William Holliday and his staff presented "The Seven Little Foys" at a special preview at the Saenger. Invitations were extended to heads of circuits, independent theatre owners, press and radio representatives, officers of civic and social clubs, and their guests.

Joan Patti is scheduled to be in town soon to help boost "The Prodigal," slated for an early showing at Loew's State. . . . Joy N. Houck and J. Francis White, coproducers of "Kentucky Rifle," entertained executives of circuits, independent theatre owners, film buyers and bookers, representatives of radio, press and television at a cocktail party in the club rooms at the Panorama on the night of the world premiere of their new movie. Also present were Harold "Babe" Cohen, Lippert; Herman Beiersdorf, independent exchange operator, Dallas; Jack Pope, Joy's Theatres field representative; and William Cobb, president, Exhibitors Poster Exchange.

Jean Davis, Miss Bacon's secretary, UA, is confined to her home because of illness. . . . George Pabst, UA district manager, is on an extended trek visiting the Jacksonville and Charlotte exchanges and business calling in Birmingham, Ala. . . . Jo-Ann Silver, a student at Jefferson, Metairie High School and a member of the 4-H Club, is up in the clouds. She won first prize for handicraft at the Jefferson Parish clubs recent exhibit. She will compete in the statewide 4-H Clubs exhibits. Her pop is Joe Silver, 20th-Fox, who has recently been promoted from head booker to salesman. Everything's right for the Silver family.

Mrs. W. A. Porter reopened the Vicksburg Drive-In, Vicksburg, Miss., for the new season. . . . Adelaide DeLatte, manager Alex Maillho's secretary, UA, is off on a two weeks vacation jaunt to the Rigolets in pursuit of the finny tribe. Here's wishing her luck.

Ted Toddy, independent distributor, was here from headquarters in Atlanta. . . . The 80,000 square yard area of the Twin Do Drive-In, Metairie, La., is being resurfaced with a three layer treatment of black top, said Mike Ripps, one of the owners. . . . The Fox, Shuqualak, Miss., shuttered.

Russ Bovin, Loew's division manager, was in from St. Louis chiefly for the opening of MGM's "Blackboard Jungle" drawing crowds to the State. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gournares, Mobile, Ala., reassumed ownership of the Roosevelt, which has been closed for a month or so after Harry T. Browne relinquished it. They reopened it under the new name of Oakdale and will operate it as a double feature house with four changes weekly.

Paul Shallcross, salesman, American Desk Manufacturing Company, Temple, Tex., stopped over a few days enroute to Mississippi. . . . Al Morgan, booker, Fred T. McLendon's theatre, Union Springs, Ala., was here on a three day buying and booking trek. . . . Mrs. Mary Martin reopened the Pines Drive-In, Homer, La., which was closed for the winter months.

Darrell George and associates acquired ownership of the Frontier Drive-In, Sulphur, La., from Percy Duplissey and associates. The new management renamed it the T.O.R. George was general manager of his brother Don's theatres in Shreveport, Alexandria, and Bossier City, La.; for several years and up to the time the latter disposed of all of his theatre holdings to Thomas McElroy and O. D. Harrison, Shreveport, La.

Ohio Senate Kills Minor Work Law

COLUMBUS, O. — Amendment to Senate Bill 208, which would have permitted boys and girls over 16 to work in theatres as ushers and cashiers until 10:30 p.m., was eliminated from the bill which has been approved by the Senate Commerce and Labor committee.

The sub-committee considering the amendment decided that it opened the way to other exceptions. Members also were concerned with the hazards to girls working in exposed drive-in box-offices. It was pointed out that girls are not permitted to work in stores after 9 p.m. Representatives of several other industries, dissatisfied with the 9 p.m. restriction, said that if theatres were permitted to employ minors until 10:30 p.m., they would also demand the same right.

If the bill passes both houses of the Legislature, as seems likely, the law will be the same as at present. Boys over 16 may work until 9 p.m. Girls over 18 may work until 9 p.m. but girls under 18 may not work after 6 p.m.

"There have been a couple of cases of injury to employees under these limits which came before the Industrial Commission under the Workmen's Compensation law," said Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. "This makes the employer liable to a fine in these cases. You are therefore cautioned to observe the hours for employees to conform with the law."

Boston

An anti-trust action claiming two million dollars in trebled damages has been filed in Federal District Court of New Hampshire by Miriam Z. LeWitt, owner, Strand, Plainville, Conn., against the eight majors. The suit claims an illegal structure of runs, clearances, availabilities, and admission prices and charges the majors and theatres in Bristol, New Britain, and Hartford, Conn., with conspiracy, monopoly, and restraint of trade. There are no exhibitor defendants, however, since they do not do business in New Hampshire and are therefore outside the jurisdiction of that state. The suit was filed from the Boston office of attorneys George S. Ryan and W. Bradley Ryan.

The Rocky Marciano - Don Cockell world's heavyweight championship fight will be put on the closed circuit television screens of five theatres in New England. In Boston, it will be televised for two theatres, the 3500-seat Loew's State and the 2000-seat Pilgrim, the latter operated by American Theatres Corporation. Prices at the State will be $3.50 for the entire house with no reserved seats. The management is emptying the house at 9:30 p.m. and reopening an hour later for the fight fans. At the Pilgrim, the management is roping off the entire orchestra for reserved seats at $4.40 and $3.30 each, and leaving the balcony for rush seats at $2.80. Here, the management is emptying the theatre at 7 p.m., reopening an hour later at the upped prices, allowing the fight fans to first see the entire film program of two pictures before the fight is flashed on the television screen at 11. Loew's Theatres have also booked the fight at the State, Providence, with the entire house priced at $3.50. At two other theatres of American Theatres Corporation, the North Reading Drive-In and the State, Portland, Maine, mobile theatre TV equipment has been ordered for the one night show. The Reading Drive-In marks the first ozoner in New England to install theatre TV equipment, if only temporary. Officials at ATC have planned to charge $3.30 per person, with a minimum of four persons to a car. The gates will open at 7 and the fight fans may see a full film program before the fight starts. At the State, Portland, a 2000-seat house, the fixed prices are $3.30 and $2.20 per seat, with all seats reserved.

A summer season of Shakespeare will start July 5 at the Brattle, Cambridge,

N. E. Fetes Oldest Active Salesman

BOSTON—The Roof Garden of the Hotel Bradford was filled with industryites who gathered to pay honor to New England's oldest active film salesman, Nathan Ross, who has been in the business for 45 years. The occasion was sparked by Benn Rosenwald, MGM resident manager, who made a genial and humorous toastmaster. At the head table were the crew members of the Variety Club of New England, sponsors of the affair, with the luncheon committee members, Joe Cohen, Maynard Sickles, and James Marshall, as well as the speakers. Phil Smith is acting chief barker in the absence of Walter Brown, and other crew members were James Mahoney, James Stoneman, Kenneth Douglass, Herman Rifkin, George Roberts, E. M. Loew, Michael Redstone, Louis Richmond, Harry Segal, E. Myer Feltman, Ted Fleisher, Arnold Van Leer, and Harry Worden.

Congratulatory telegrams from out of towners were read by Rosenwald, including those from Rebecca and Tom Duane, Detroit; Doris and Nathan Levin, Detroit; Bill Madden, Philadelphia; John Dervin, New York; Tim O'Toole, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; James Winn; and Arthur Lockwood and Louis Gordon, who were unable to be present.

Ted Fleisher neatly summed up the attitude of the occasion when he said, "Our industry has a great many testimonials for those who have been promoted, for those who are leaving this sector for other positions, and for those who are retiring. Today we are honoring a man for none of these qualifications, but this large gathering is here to recognize publicly a man who has been a film salesman for 45 years, who has made his reputation through fair play and friendship for exhibitors. My friends outside the industry are sometimes amazed at the number of testimonials we have, but I believe that this makes for a feeling of comradeship and unity that could well be adopted by other big industries."

Other speakers were E. M. Loew; E. Myer Feltman, U-I branch manager; Harry Segal, UA branch manager; Harry Worden, another veteran film salesman; Harry Ross, a shoe manufacturer and a brother of Nathan Ross.

In telling of the background of the honored guest, Rosenwald gave a brief synopsis of his career over the past 45 years. In the early days he worked for the first independent film distributor in New England, was the first man to sell film to the Navy, and the first to put films on a battleship. He has been with General Film Company, First National Films under the late Tom Spry, and with United Artists. Today he is selling film for himself. Smith made three presentations to Ross. The first was a letter from Brown enclosing an honorary paid-up life membership in the Variety Club of New England. The second was a scroll, signed by the 170 persons present, which read, "Nathan Ross, seasoned veteran of the motion picture industry—his integrity stands unchallenged—a loyal friend, he has brought the technique of friendship to its highest point." The third was a check for $500 from the Variety Club and his industry friends in attendance. In his acceptance speech, Ross was brief and sincere, obviously touched by the flavor of the occasion.

Many out of town friends came in for the affair including Norman Zalkind, Harry Zeitz, Spero Latchis, Bill Canning, Joe Stanzler, Ned Eisner, Morris and Melvin Safner, and others. Larry Gardiner, retired sales manager, RKO, who was honored at a similar affair over a year ago, was greeted enthusiastically by his many friends, as was Louis Stern, who left the industry several years ago. Richard Bloomberg, the 11-year-old son of Phil Bloomberg, came up from Salem, Mass., with his daddy for the luncheon. Another infrequent visitor to the area was Irving Green, who now operates only one theatre, the Park, Everett, Mass.

Mass., it has been announced by Bryant Haliday and Cyrus Harvey, Jr .This successful foreign film house will produce several Shakespearean plays under the direction of Michael Wager and Haliday. This is the group that successfully presented stage presentations before the theatre was turned into a film theatre. Season subscriptions for the series will shortly go on sale. Three years ago when Haliday and Harvey purchased the property of the Brattle, they converted it into a motion picture theatre by putting in rear projection equipment. They also remodeled it and installed air conditioning. The rear projection equipment was installed with the idea in mind of leaving plenty of room should the management ever desire to revert to stage presentations. It has adequate space back stage for work rooms and dressing rooms. Following the summer of Shakespeare, the theatre will return to films in the early fall.

Jack Benny was honored at the 18th annual goodwill dinner of the Massachusetts Committee of Catholics, Protestants, and Jews at the Hotel Statler. Preview Group Honors Three Pioneer Theatremen

PHILADELPHIA—At its annual luncheon last week in the Warwick Hotel, the Philadelphia Motion Picture Preview Group, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Arthur Goldsmith, offered a tribute to Alexander R. Boyd, Frank W. Buhler, and Louis N. Goldsmith, Boyd Enterprises, in the form of a citation and individual statuettes symbolic of the theatre.

In the presentation Samuel Diamond, Philadelphia 20th-Fox branch manager, substituting for 20th-Fox executive assistant general sales manager William C. Gehring, cited the long and outstanding service of Boyd and his associates to the community and to the theatre and remarked that the honors were conferred because they had been earned by three great gentlemen of the industry, held in high esteem by all who knew them.

Following the awards, a fashion show was presented by Gimbel Brothers Saks Fifth Avenue Salon, the theme of which was "A Philadelphia Story."

The affair drew one of the largest crowds in the group's history.

Allied Artists and SW Theatres held a cocktail party in honor of Kevin McCarthy, star, "An Annapolis Story," SW Mastbaum. The affair was held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

patrons are barred. They failed, however, to gain admittance. A rotating line about seven store-fronts long persisted peacefully on their plea for recognition but John Wyatt, theatre manager, was equally persistent in his answers to the Negros in the group: "No Admittance." There were about 300 demonstrators — approximately 250 of them from the colored college. The theatre now displays a sign stating: "Until the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, of which this theatre is a member, and the courts of Maryland advise otherwise, this theatre reserves the right to restrict patronage."

C. Morton Goldstein, new chairman, Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors, has taken over his post, replacing the former chairman, Sydney R. Traub who failed to receive a reappointment from Governor Theodore McKeldin. Goldstein's entrance into office was without any ceremony or official reception.

Jack Fruchtman who operates Keiths and the New, and his general manager, Natt W. Hodgdon, were hosts to the press, radio, and TV at a cocktail party in honor of Kevin McCarthy who plays a leading role in "The Annapolis Story." Harry Goldstein, Allied Artists, was also one of the hosts for the affair, which was held at the Sheraton Belvedere. Fruchtman then took-off for the Variety Club convention in California, accompanied by Morton Gerber, District Theatres.

Hal Colley, publicist, New and Keiths, was confined to his home with an attack of virus. . . . Ted Kirwan, manager, New, went to New York to see the "Cinerama Holiday." . . . Bob Gruver, owner, New Glen, Glenburnie, Md., was in for a meeting of the Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland. . . . The Parkway is being readied for a reopening the first week in June.

Charles Grimes, Stanley Warner district manager, spent the weekend in New York. . . . Gilbert Kanour, The Evening Sun's movie critic, is away on a month's vacation. . . . Leon Back, general manager, Rome Theatres, has returned from the west coast.

the quonset hut type theatre was approved. Only two changes were made in the original plans. These call for the heating plant to be placed in the store's basement and the elimination of a wing which was to have extended in a rear yard. . . . Diana Lynn and Kevin McCarthy appeared in person at the Park, Lexington Park, Md., at the southern Maryland premiere of "An Annapolis Story" held in connection with the big Navy charity bazaar. The theatre was manned for the occasion by Naval personnel from the Patuxent River Naval Air Base, and general manager T. L. Harrison reports that there was a big turnout for the affair. . . . The 235 Drive-In, California, Md., in cooperation with a local food market is giving away 20 turkeys on "Lucky Night." Winners are derived from lucky automobile license numbers. . . . Ray Trumbule, promotion manager, Southern Maryland Theatres, is recovering from an attack of malaria, which bedded him for almost a week at his Sandy Bottom home.

Thus far no church organization in this city has backed up the Reformed Church Reading Synod, meeting in Tremont, Schuylkill County, which passed resolutions denouncing bingo and legalized horse race betting moves as gambling. The Synod covers Reading and all Berks County, as well as portions of adjoining counties. It is believed other church groups, among them the Lutheran, may take similar anti-bingo and anti-horse race betting moves.

Birk Binnard, for about 10 years manager, Warner here, was guest of honor at a farewell dinner at the Mountain Springs Home, Mount Penn, given by other theatremen, prior to his taking up his new duties in Philadelphia as Stanley Warner Theatres advertising and public relations manager. The Binnards will take up their residence in the Quaker City as soon as the local schools close. An old English type pipe and a pen and pencil set were presented to Binnard. At the dinner were Eugene Plank, Reading and Mount Penn Drive-Ins; Emanuel S. Rosenberg, Park; Robert Diem, Loew's Colonial; J. Lester Stallman, Astor and Strand; Paul E. MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

IN APPRECIATION OF A VALUED CO-WORKER, PARTNER, AND FRIEND

FOR OVER 25 YEARS, Herbert M. Miller gave generously of his talents as writer, critic, and journalist to the growth and development of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR. Much of its present prominence and the confidence placed in it by nearly 10,000 showmen weekly stems from the principles of truth, accuracy, and fearless independence which he established. And in the meantime, he was always a cheerful, good natured, and understanding companion.

During his lingering illness of the past year, it was Herb's constant worry that he was in some way letting us down. His desire to be part of the team, and to carry his share of the load, was very much a part of the man.

On Wednesday, May 11, Herb slept peacefully away. Devoted husband, kind father, and sincere friend, he was appreciated in life just as he will be remembered in death.

And as press dates roll around in the years to come, we know that, wherever Herb is, he'll be working away —and trying to help the staff make the right decisions and read the error-free proofs that were his pride.

That is the way he would want it!

THE MAN IN THE BOOTH

WHILE MANY CHANGES have been absorbed by this industry of ours down through the past 50 years or so, there is one segment of industryites that has probably been the least fortunate because of its constant resistance to all changes.

From World War I days, and right up to the boom payrolls of World War II, the projectionists in the booths of the nation's theatres were the complete hierarchy of organized labor. Highly skilled artisans, adept at split-second accuracy, and at jockeying expensive high-speed precision equipment through hours, weeks, and years, of continuous trouble-free operation, good projectionists were important cogs in any successful theatre operation. So important, in fact, that they not only commanded the top salaries on the theatre payroll, but were able to protect the jobs of pit musicians and stage hands for years after their theatre use had been discontinued. And the list of theatres that are still carrying such useless "featherbedding" jobs on their weekly payroll is guaranteed to shock a seasoned dock worker.

As a class, the mistakes that have led to the projectionist's current relatively low pay status have all stemmed from his efforts to maintain the status quo. To resist or to fail to recognize changes.

With the advent of sound, it was pretty obvious that stage shows, organs, and pit bands would be permanently eliminated. To protect for six months or a year the men of his same union, or of a sister union, who were thrown out of work by such a change, was a commendable effort. But it never should have been decided to force the perpetuation of such "featherbed" jobs right up 'til today.

And with the advent of safety film, when it became obvious that two men in a booth, except in deluxe operation, was an unnecessary and unwarranted expense, it never should have been necessary to force the "featherbed" second man onto the theatreman's back.

From personal experience, and from talking to others, we know that most theatre executives, in this day and age of high employe salaries, are just a little embarrassed to be paying two highly skilled and respected projectionists from $50 to $70 per week each. Working evening, Saturday, Sunday, and holiday hours when other people relax, they deserve to make more. With families to support we know that some of them are even working the swing day, or their day off, at some other theatre; and while the hours aren't long, no man should work seven days a week. Even though current theatre grosses can't permit gross salary increases, there are few theatremen who wouldn't prefer to go to a one-man booth and to pay that one man $90 to $125 weekly.

You can't be happy with underpaid helpers around you. Not even when it is their own fault. And the lack of apprentices should offset the fewer jobs.

And you can't be happy with a condition that makes you carry unnecessary "featherbedding" employes when you are fighting for your economic life against unreasonable high film prices within the industry, and tough competition outside of the industry.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

A WEEK AGO we lost a friend. He was more than a friend for he was also our boss, but this relationship never interfered with our friendship.

KONECOFF

He always stood ready to offer counsel and advice and his experience in the business and with human beings made it worthwhile to listen. In all his dealings, he never lost sight of the human being concerned and that in itself was something rare.

His sense of humor was quick and witty. He had an outstanding sense of fairness, never hurting if he could help and always helping when things hurt.

He was a fine man, this Herb Miller, and we shall sincerely and deeply miss him.

HONOR AND REWARD DEPARTMENT: Theatremen had a chance to do an outstanding job for their community and to be rewarded for it in the 1955 Brotherhood campaign.

At a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria last week, 35 managers of New York theatres were cited by the Motion Picture Division, National Conference, for their work in the campaign and were presented with Savings Bonds as a more concrete token of the event and their work.

Presiding in the absence of J. Robert Rubin, permanent chairman, as well as that of John Harris, 1955 chairman, was last year's drive head, Emanuel Frisch, who hailed the campaign and the results as the best to date.

Frisch revealed that the industry as a whole raised $115,000 nationally, of which exhibition contributed $52,000, with $27,400 being raised in the New York Area alone and records broken all the way down the line. Frisch had words of praise for the work of Harris on a national level, for William Heineman as distributor chairman, and for Spyros S. Skouras on a local level.

Skouras paid tribute to the fine work accomplished by other exhibitors, including Sol Schwartz, Harry Mandel, Frisch, Gene Picker, and Charles Smakwitz, who oversaw participation by their circuits. As for his own circuit, he issued unique instructions to his managers which said that if their collections were not up to quota then they would have to make up the difference out of their own pockets which is why so many of them won Savings Bonds.

Aboard the dais were Gerald Shea, Smakwitz, Sam Rinzler, Skouras, John O'Connor, Adolph Schimmel, Russell Downing, and Gene Picker. Two managers received the top awards of $150 savings bond, Irving Gold, Proctor's 86th Street, and John Boxer, Academy.

Eleven received $100 bonds, Herb Bonis, Palace; Jules Daniels, Stanley Warner; Leon Kelmer, Albee; Arthur Koch, New Rochelle; Alexander Pluchos, Keith's White Plains; Clayton Pruitt, Coliseum; Jack Reis, Royal; Morris Rochelie, Strand; Anthony Rosato, Playhouse; Montague Salmon, Rivoli; and Louis G. Santeramo, State.

Twenty-two received $50 bonds, Al Arnstein, Proctor's 58th Street; James Coumatis, David Marcus; Harry Davey,

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

"Prodigal" Opens Strong

NEW YORK—The late spring doldrums hit Broadway houses over the weekend, with only the Paramount, Capitol, Roxy, and Music Hall turning in acceptable grosses.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount dropped to $50,000 for the fourth week.

"Daddy Long Legs" (20th-Fox). Roxy reported $28,036 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the second week down to an expected $50,000.

"Interrupted Melody" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, announced $85,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the second session anticipated at $127,000.

"Run For Cover" (Paramount). Criterion expected the third week to hit $13,000.

"Revenge Of The Creature" (U-I). Globe hoped for a $10,000 opening week.

"Violent Saturday" (20th-Fox). Mayfair opened to a $21,000 week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor did $18,000 on the 10th week.

"The End Of The Affair" (Columbia). Victoria was heading toward $11,000 on the third week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol anticipated the opening week to tally $50,000.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State dropped to $15,000 on the ninth week.

TOA, Allied Strive To Save May 24 Confab

Shor, Berger, Blame Distress On Rentals

DENVER—At the one-day convention last week of the Allied Rocky Mountain Independent Theatres Rube Shor, National Allied president, and Benjamin Berger, North Central Allied head, urged members to take an active part in Allied affairs and to work to bring other exhibitors in. RMIT president Neil Beezley called attention to the problem of toll-TV, and stressed the urgency to dispatch letters to Congress and the Federal Communications Commission opposing the acceptance of the subscription plan.

Shor and Berger enumerated some of the problems of independent exhibitors in the industry, and Berger blamed most of them on high film rentals. The convention supported the call for an industry round table with distributor presidents and a joint committee from Allied and the Theatre Owners of America to discuss rentals as well as other trade practices. It also went on record as opposed to pay-as-you-see television.

Directors named included, for Colorado: Beezley, Fred Hall, Gus Ibold, Joe Ashby, Fred Anderson, Lloyd Greve, C. L. McLaughlin, Don Monson, James Peterson, J. K. Powell, W. A. Wimon, and Tom Smiley; for Nebraska: Marie Goodhand, Robert Kehr, F. E. Rider, and Dorrance Schmidt; Burl Lingle and John Wood for New Mexico; and Richard Bennett and Lloyd Kerby for Wyoming.

AA Stock Plan Mulled

NEW YORK—George D. Burrows, executive vice-president and treasurer, Allied Artists, revealed last fortnight that the company's directors will seek stockholders' approval to give AA executives and key employes the right of stock purchase at current market rates. He said that the board plans to advance its proposal at the annual meeting in November, or possibly, at a special stockholder meeting which might be called earlier.

The AA releasing schedule for 1955 of 35 pictures may be augmented by films from other independent and foreign producers, Burrows stated, adding that Harold J. Mirisch, executive producer, recently left for Europe to consider such arrangements.

Some of the $25,000,000 Allied Artists plans to invest in production of 37 or 38 pictures during a 12 to 18 month period is currently tied up in the William Wyler and John Huston productions which AA will distribute, Burrows commented.

J. Don Alexander Dies

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—President J. Don Alexander, 70, Alexander Film Company, died last week of a heart ailment. Alexander, who started in screen advertising in Keokuk, Iowa, came to Colorado Springs in 1928 after living in Spokane and Englewood, Colo. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Don, Jr. and John, both officials of the film company.

MPE Mourns Death Of H. M. Miller, Editor

PHILADELPHIA—Herbert M. Miller, 48, editor, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, and other Jay Emanuel publications for the past 25 years, died on May 11 in Einstein Medical Center, Southern Division, after a lingering illness.

Miller, born in Norwalk, Conn., July 24, 1906, graduated from Syracuse University in 1926. He was a member of Variety Club, Tent 13, and Motion Picture Associates, as well as the Motion Picture Pioneers.

He is survived by his wife, Mildred; one son, Bruce; and his brother, Leo, who has an advertising agency in Bridgeport, Conn., and for many years had been associated with The Bridgeport Herald.

The funeral was held on May 13 at Joseph Levine and Sons Funeral Parlors, 1512 N. Broad Street, Philadelphia, at 11 a.m., with interment in Mt. Sinai Cemetery.

Legion Condemns "Sinbad"

NEW YORK—The National Legion of Decency announced last week that it had placed the Howard Hughes-RKO picture, "Son Of Sinbad," in its "C" or Condemned classification for the following reason, "This film, in its character and treatment, is a serious affront to Christian and traditional standards of morality and decency because of its blatant and continuing violation of the virtue of purity. Throughout, it contains grossly salacious dances and indecent costuming. This picture is a challenge to decent standards of theatrical entertainment."

Deny Plans To Discuss Individual Sales Policies; Starr Now "Open Minded" About Government Regulation

NEW YORK—Alfred Starr, executive committee chairman, Theatre Owners of America, said at an industry press conference last week that TOA's joint bid with National Allied to film company heads for a round-table conference did not contemplate discussion of individual company sales policy, and that apprehension was unwarranted on the part of film executives that vituperation would be directed at them. The conference to discuss film rentals and other trade practices, scheduled for May 24 in New York, would, Starr said, be conducted in a high legal tone, and take place whether the major distributors attended or not.

The TOA-National Allied spokesman emphasized that the exhibitors have "no alternative to the round-table," and that it is essential the entire industry, exhibitors and distributors alike, "face up squarely" to the decline in film attendance, which he claimed has been especially noticeable since March 1, and to explore methods of reversing the trend.

Subsequently, Rube Shor, National Allied head, and E. D. Martin, TOA president, co-signed telegrams to Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's MGM; Barney Balaban, Paramount; Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox; James R. Grainger, RKO; and Milton Rackmil, U-I, urging them as heads of their respective companies to reconsider their negative decisions about the proposed meeting, and echoing Starr's assertions about the agenda for the conference, adding that an intelligent, free, and sincere discussion of producer-distributor-customer relations was the accepted procedure in American business when the customer was in need. The telegrams requested reply by wire, and the company presidents were reported studying the situation. It was evident, however, that the odds were not in favor of the majors changing their stand.

Starr announced that he is now "open-minded" about government regulation of the industry and hinted that TOA members might be forced to drastic action because of the "swelling chorus of complaints about bad business." Despite the delay in completing a system of arbitration, Starr's confidence in that method has not been shaken. But it was pointed out by TOA counsel Herman M. Levy that the next move in arbitration negotiations is up to the distributors. Starr announced the next arbitration discussion would consider the recent proposal by Al Lichtman, vice-president, 20th-Fox, to arbitrate film rentals up to $50, which the TOA executive called "a step in the right direction."

Commenting on the fight against toll-TV, Starr said the fund raised for the campaign to date is "infinitestimal, but adequate . . . we have revised our needs downward." Less than the $150,000 sought originally has been raised.

Canada

Premiums Are Popular As Attendance Getters

TORONTO—Theatres in this country have taken on what may be described, ironically enough during a prosperity period, as a hard times look. Some 25 to 30 per cent of the 35mm. theatres are giving away premiums to promote business in the face of competition from TV.

And, peculiarly enough, while TV does everything possible to give the best in entertainment to merchandise its goods, theatres do their best to find better goods. One observer opines, "Might be wiser to sell entertainment."

It is estimated that there are more theatres giving away premiums these days than there were during the depression days of the early thirties.

Theatres are giving away premiums, while others are combining both premiums and contests. Some 300 situations are tied to Foto-Nite, the only cash-prize idea that has legal status in Canada.

Inquiry reveals that premiums have crept into types of situations in which they were unknown even during the depression. Top circuit suburban situations, whose operators used to sniff at giveaways and contests, are now offering them.

In some areas of the country, premiums have never been eliminated. This is particularly true in areas of Quebec, Ontario, and Manitoba.

The giveaway idea was copied by many merchants and dealers, who got into the business because of the theatre market, and now get most of their volume from non-movie accounts. Several new supply houses came into existence in the past few years, once again through the movie market.

With theatre admission prices up, the premiums are not the draw they used to be, for patrons will not pay the high prices. Some theatres don't use dinnerware, stemware, or silverware but give away such articles are ballpoint pens, key cases, and plastic wallets. Other gimmicks used to promote attendance include "Buck a Truck," "Dollar a Car," "Children Free," and other drive-in ideas.

Canadian Comment

Canada will be without Telemeter until the Federal Communications Commission of the U.S. acts. This was recently pointed out in the 35th annual report of Famous Players Canadian Corporation by J. J. Fitzgibbons, its president. The company has Telemeter in Canada under a 25-year franchise. The final outcome of Telemeter in Canada goes further than the FCC. It depends on the Department of Transport in this country which has the final say on how it should be employed. Already Famous Players is into TV, with a half-interest in CFCM-TV, Quebec City, and CKCO-TV, Kitchener, Ont. It also controls the Canadian sale of the glass single-gun color tubes developed by the Chromatic Television Laboratories, Inc., of the U.S., which can be produced at an economic price.

John J. Glynn, vice-president, Warners International, poses with the recent "Miss Star" contest winners in Tokyo, Japan, beauty contest, held in connection with showing of Warners' "A Star Is Born" at the Takarazuka Theatre and sponsored by Warner Brothers-Toho Motion Pictures and Nippon fruit juices companies. The winner, Mitsuyo Kubo, seated, wins free trip to the Warners Burbank, Cal., studios.

Representing a replacement value of well over $500,000 is the equipment of Crawley Films, Ltd., Ottawa, which has quadrupled in size recently. The company, which for the most part produces non-theatrical films, has 100 employes, and in that number are members of four crews in various parts of the continent. There is one crew in Jamaica, two in the Arctic, and one in the Canadian west. About 40 films are in production.

CINE CHATTER: Congratulations are being extended to Dan Krendel on the occasion of his daughter Janet giving birth to a baby. Dan is Ontario District B supervisor. . . . It's official now, the Tivoli, Toronto, a Famous Players unit, is to undergo renovations beginning May 28. This has long been in the rumor stage, but it came out when the staff was recently given notice. . . . Stew McQuay is new branch manager, J. Arthur Rank Film Distributors (Canada), Ltd., replacing Phil Geller. McQuay joined JARO nine years ago in Calgary and has had wide experience as a salesman handling both 16 and 35mm. films. . . . I. Shapero was appointed Toronto branch manager of Allied Artists Pictures of Canada. Orville Fruitman, previously a salesman for Empire-Universal Films, takes Shapero's place on the road. . . . The 618-seat North, North Bay, was opened by P. Adduono and O. Hill, while the 250-seat Community, Kelliher, Sask., was opened by G. Grayba and F. Paluschuk, and eight drive-ins are now in the planning stage. . . . Net profits of Eastern Theatres, Ltd., which operates the Imperial, Toronto, increased slightly to $105,557 or $3.60 a share in 1954, as compared with $103,485 or $3.23 a share in 1953. Working capital was down to $184,575 from $186,806 the year previous. . . . Well-known exhibitor Francis (Frank) Audas, 60, owner, Gem, Parrsboro, N.S., died in the hospital in Amherst, following a heart attack. After 25 years with the F. G. Spencer Company, Audas bought the Parrsboro house in 1947. . . . Ronnie Taylor, formerly of Twentieth Century Theatres, has joined Audio Pictures. . . . Peter Lawrason is now managing the Mohawk, and Al Sandlos, the Stoney Creek, for the Skyways Drive-In Company, both operations near Hamilton.

UA Appoints Two; Steps Up Production

LONDON—United Artists' international sales convention that set sales and promotion plans for the company's record product lineup ended last week with Arnold M. Picker, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, announcing the appointments of Mo Rothman as continental sales manager, and Dave Bickler as sales manager in Great Britain.

Rothman, who will make his headquarters in Paris, joined United Artists in October, 1952, as assistant to Charles Smadja, vice-president in charge of European production, when the latter was continental manager.

Bickler, whose headquarters will be in London, started with United Artists 14 years ago as a salesman in the Liverpool branch and became, successively, branch manager, branch supervisor, and sales supervisor.

Max E. Youngstein, vice-president, announced UA will step up its independent film production for the next three years from 90 to 98 pictures.

The company plans to make pictures in every major European country during this period, reported Smadja. In some cases it is planned to produce films in both English and foreign language versions, and some of them will be coproduced under projected agreements with foreign organizations.

Discussing UA's policy of investing or guaranteeing from 90 to 100 per cent of production cost, Youngstein also said that most of UA film rental revenues for the coming year will be used to finance new productions. Investment in film production, he added, was decided upon two years ago in order to compete with the top organizations in the industry, and that the company's ability to continue the noteworthy expansion of the past years is in direct ratio to the success of its current product in the world market.

Australia

The engagement is announced of Virginia Fuller, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fuller, Elizabeth Bay, Australia, to Dale Turnbull, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Turnbull, Darling Point, Australia. Ernest Turnbull is supervisor of 20th-Fox's interests in Australia and managing director, Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., Australia.

Cuba

Antonio Garcia has been appointed Allied Artists' representative in Cuba, succeeding A. J. Pedrinan, resigned. Garcia will serve as liaison with Cinematografica Pelimex, S.A., formerly known as Continental Films, S.A.

Iowa-Nebraska Allied Okeh Federal Control

DES MOINES — Iowa-Nebraska Allied members adopted a federal control resolution at the annual convention after hearing two national Allied officers report that virtually all other avenues of seeking relief had been exhausted.

Abram F. Myers and Rube Shor, National Allied, both pointed out that federal control seemed to be the only relief for the small independent exhibitors. Myers in particular reported that a large number of film company presidents had sent telegrams declining the May 24 meeting in New York with Allied and TOA and this left no alternative but Congressional action for federal control.

The Iowa-Nebraska operators in adopting their resolution appealed to the film company presidents to reconsider their decision on the May 24 meeting and added that if they refuse to attend they pledged their support to the National Allied officers to take whatever measures they may see fit to take, including support of a bill in Congress to regulate film rentals.

The members attending the convention expressed their feeling that they were opposed to federal control but to "relieve the present intolerable conditions" no other way presented itself.

Myers pointed out that only nine feature pictures would be released during May and that out of the nine, one was of doubtful value and another would not be made available for general release due to the peculiar manner in which it was being handled.

Myers referred to the film companies as "drunk with power" and "waxing in the fat" and having taken the attitude they do not need the small exhibitor.

The exhibitors also adopted a resolution urging the national distributors to release more boxoffice attractions during the spring and summer months since this period now constitutes the peak period for theatre attendance.

Shor in his address charged that the exhibitor had lost the tax dollar when the admission tax was cut and that the film companies had taken it away from them. Shor declared that the only way the exhibitors could get it back would be through federal regulations.

Myers spoke out against pay-as-you-see television and urged the exhibitors to send in letters to the FCC and pointed out that he felt public hearings would be held on the matter.

Al Myrick, Lake Park, was reelected as president of the association, and Leo Wolcott, Eldora, was renamed as chairman of the board.

Suit Dismissal Sought

CHICAGO—A request has been filed in Judge William Steckler's court in Indianapolis by attorneys Seymour Simon and Sheldon Collen for Alliance Theatre Circuit to dismiss the Government action against the pooling agreement between Fourth Avenue Amusement Corporation and Alliance Amusement Company, in Terre Haute, Indiana, territory. The pooling arrangement, according to S. J. Gregory, vice-president of Alliance, was terminated on March 26, 1955.

SIMPP Asks Voice In Making Code Policy; Declares War On Violence

Goldwyn Leaves SIMPP; Helped Found Organization

HOLLYWOOD—In a prepared statement last week, producer Samuel Goldwyn revealed that he resigned last Feb. 8 from the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, of which he was one of the founders.

In his surprise move, Goldwyn explained that he felt there was no longer a useful purpose to be served belonging to the Society, since many of the independent producers who formed the backbone of SIMPP originally were now being financed by major companies, resulting in a limited scope for the group's activities. He emphasized, however, that SIMPP served an excellent cause well for many years.

Agnew Report Rejected

WASHINGTON—It was learned last week that the report submitted by film executive Neil Agnew and 10 other motion picture and photography experts directed by Eric Johnston, MPAA president, at the request of the secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, suggesting ways the three services could reduce their film expenses, has been rejected.

The civilian committee pointed out methods to save $17,000,000 annually after a five-month study of the problem at 75 installations across the country. The details of the Agnew report have not been made public, but it is understood that the experts advised a considerable saving could be made by using industry facilities for a percentage of motion picture production, and that it recommended the establishment of an inter-service photographic board with authority over plans and programs of the separate departments.

After studying the report for nearly a year, and compiling individual reports and analyses, the three branches of the Defense Department reported that they were in complete disagreement with the Agnew findings and can find no place where they can cut their motion picture and photographic program to save any money at all. In effect, "the services are challenging the report," a spokesman said.

Dodgers TV Plans Rapped

NEW YORK—Co-chairmen Trueman T. Rembusch and Alfred Starr of Organizations for Free-TV last fortnight issued a statement charging that President Walter O'Malley, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, had "torn the mask" off "the pious claims" of toll-TV adherents in his declared intention of charging 50 cents per game for TV viewing, in the event the Federal Communications Commission approves the pay-as-you-see plan. The chairmen said that it is now clear that TV programs delivering a satisfactory audience will become "the unwilling prey of the coin-box brigade," referring at the same time to the already announced toll plans of Madison Square Garden.

NEW YORK—Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers' president Ellis G. Arnall, former governor of Georgia, stated last fortnight that it is imperative SIMPP members have a say in the determining of Production Code Administration policies, in light of the current situation which finds many major distributors "stables for independent producers."

The Code, established as an arm of the MPAA, Arnall said, must be kept up to date, but he stressed that at the same time obscenity, immorality, and wrongdoing, where offensive to public morality, must be restricted as before. Violence in films, for example, is a general industry trend not restricted to production; it is an acute problem which would be more easily eliminated if the producer had a place in the PCA machinery and operation. The job would be made much easier if the industry would be more careful and discerning in the selection and treatment of material.

The SIMPP head continued that if the industry is to go on paying its share of the PCA administrative budget, it is unfair for it to be deprived a voice in the promulgation of the Code and at the same time accused of creating problems for it. He stressed that there must not be a dictator ruling what is to be produced, particularly when television is allowed free access to the homes of millions with little or no restriction on what is shown.

After conferring with Dr. Renato Gualino, managing director of Italian Films Export, representing ANICA, Arnall said that SIMPP members were pressing the Italian industry and Government for the same advantages granted the majors in a two-year deal signed by MPEA with ANICA. Gualino returned to Rome last week with these proposals drafted at the SIMPP parley: free importation of American films, a provision of the MPEA agreement but not practiced inasmuch as the majors voluntarily limit the number of pictures sent into Italy, which is not contemplated by SIMPP; right to use blocked lire funds in the same way enjoyed by the MPEA in their new agreement; right to remit the same percentage of producer earnings at the official rate of exchange as the majors. Arnall revealed that no Italian earnings have been remitted other than those from pictures distributed by major companies since September of last year. When the films are not released by majors the producers make independent deals with Italian distributors and deposit earnings in separate bank accounts, which SIMPP now seeks to tap by making an Italian agreement. He estimated that about 75 per cent of product was distributed by MPEA member companies.

Screenings Highlight Paramount Sales Meet

NEW YORK—Eight completed major productions and portions of five others, representing the greatest amount of film footage ever seen during a top-level Paramount meeting is being screened in Hollywood this week for assembled distribution and production executives at a special sales-merchandising conference. George Weltner, head of worldwide sales, presides at the meeting.

Attending from the home office are Jerry Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising-publicity; E. K. (Ted) O'Shea, vice-president in charge of eastern U.S. distribution; Hugh Owen, vice-president in charge of western U.S. distribution; and Robert J. Rubin, administrative executive. Also attending are division managers Gordon Bradley, southern; H. Neal East, western; A. M. Kane, south central; Howard G. Minsky, mideast; John G. Moore, eastern; Bryan D. Stoner, central; and Gordon Lightstone, Canada. Sidney Deneau, assistant to O'Shea, and Al Fitter, assistant to Owen, will be among the enthusiastic home office contingent.

Pickman will preside at sessions devoted to discussions of advertising, publicity, and exploitation, with Sid Blumenstock assistant national director, assisting. Pictures on which sales and merchandising plans will be set include "The Seven Little Foys," "We're No Angels," "Ulysses," Alfred Hitchcock's "To Catch A Thief," Frederick Brisson's "The Girl Rush," and "You're Never Too Young."

Other completed films and footage are also set for screening.

Republic Net Rises

NEW YORK—For the 13 weeks ended Jan. 29, 1955, Republic and its subsidiaries reported a net profit of $833,207 before Federal tax provision, estimated Federal and normal surtax of $450,000, or a net after taxes of $383,207. This compares with a net profit of $560,937 before Federal tax provision, estimated Federal and normal surtax of $300,000, or a net after taxes of $260,937 in the previous year.

VCI Reelects Hoover; N. Y. Gets '56 Conclave

LOS ANGELES—At the concluding session last week of the annual convention of Variety Clubs International, George C. Hoover, Miami, was reelected International Chief Barker. Other officers reinstated were John H. Rowley, Dallas, first assistant chief barker; George Eby, Pittsburgh, second assistant chief barker; Edward Emanuel, Philadelphia, property master; Jack Dumestre, Atlanta, dough guy; and Judge William McGraw, Dallas, executive director. Robert Adleman, Philadelphia, was appointed international press guy.

The international group selected New York as the site of next year's convention, and London was named for the 1957 meeting. The only previous conclave outside the United States was the one in Mexico City several years ago. The barkers also passed a resolution extending sympathy to the family of the late Charles P. Skouras, one of the founders of Tent 25, Los Angeles.

Audience Poll Films Must Have PCA Seal

NEW YORK—To be eligible for the national audience poll conducted by COMPO later this year, all films entered must have received the Production Code administration seal, including independently produced and released films, and those made abroad, it was learned last fortnight.

The MPAA general sales managers committee, chairmaned by Morey Goldstein, Allied Artists sales head, met at association offices with Robert W. Coyne, COMPO counsel, and Charles McCarthy, information director for the Council, and was given an outline of the poll plans. Ten major companies have submitted lists of all their releases for the first nomination period, Oct. 1, 1954, through March, 1955, with each title identified with its male and female leads. The distributors will supply also the names of five male and five female leads considered by the studios to show great promise. To augment these lists, COMPO will circularize all industry distributing companies, including those handling foreign films.

COMPO plans to forward ballots to some 16,000 exhibitors by June 1. Two later nomination periods will cover April, May, and June, and July, August, and September, respectively.

Ende Moves Up

NEW YORK—Joseph Ende has been appointed controller of United Artists Corporation, the company announced last week. Formerly assistant controller, Ende has been associated with the motion picture industry since 1939.

Anti-Toll TV Forces Plan Making Trailer

WASHINGTON—At a joint meeting last week of exhibitors from Maryland and Washington presided over by A. Julian Brylawski, it was revealed by Marcus Cohn, the attorney for the exhibitors' committee against toll-TV, that the motion picture industry currently is producing a film trailer presenting its side of the pay-as-you-see argument. Zenith, he observed, already has filmed its affirmative side of the campaign. The exhibitors received the news warmly and approved of Faye Emerson to appear in the film, since she attained her popularity in the television medium.

Cohn and Brylawski urged the exhibitors, together with their acquaintances in and out of the industry, to start a mass letter-writing campaign to the Federal Communications Commission, which must approve the subscription plan, to help counteract the heavy volume of mail stirred up by the Zenith campaign. Cohn asserted that Zenith was relying on the massing of public opinion and that the film industry must do likewise. To date, very little has been done in this direction. He added that the FCC, while it need not be swayed by a mass of letters, cannot ignore public opinion, and he suggested letters to local newspapers as an excellent means to present the exhibitors' views. Cohn told the group that the industry's strongest ally, the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, was probably stronger than either Zenith or the exhibitors.

Of some 7,000 letters received to date by the FCC, those in support of toll-TV outnumber those against its approval by 25 to 1. Rep. Bolton (R., O.) last week wrote the Commission urging early authorization for several "pilot demonstrations" of toll-TV. Mrs. Bolton went on to say that information received from her constituents and other sources leads her to believe that authorization of subscription TV is in the public interest, and that the only way to reach a final decision in the case is to carry out practical demonstration at an early date.

Talent And Labor Join In Opposing Coin-Box TV

NEW YORK—In a resolution adopted last week after a month's study by a fact-finding committee representing more than 25 AFL unions, talent and labor in the theatrical industry joined hands in opposition to pay-as-you-see television.

The committee representing unions affiliated with the Central Trades and Labor Council was chairmaned by Solly Pernick, who signed the report with Milton Weintraub, secretary. The survey spotlighted the impact of the proposed subscription plan on show business and the basic American economy. The final statement, among other objections, opposed the toll programs because they would impose a financial burden on millions of workers in the lower income brackets who now enjoy free educational, informative, and entertainment programs, which would disappear from the airwaves. The resolution urged the Federal Communications Commission to reject all petitions for approval of toll-TV.

that extra "something"

A certain indefinable quality sets people, pursuits, products apart.
In the automotive world, Cadillac is in this exclusive "quality" category.
In the field of stage, screen and sports, a select few have that certain "something" that sets them aside from their fellow performers.

Thus it is with ALTEC service. Over and above its superb technical skill, its special instruments, tools and devices, its extensive research and development laboratories, ALTEC service offers that extra "something" which adds a "plus" value to every ALTEC service contract.

U-I Executives Go To Movies

SEVERAL weeks ago, Charles J. Feldman, U-I vice-president and general sales manager, made one of his regular visits to the studios in California to see the pictures nearing completion and being "sneaked." So enthusiastic was he with what he saw that he decided to bring his entire home office sales cabinet, the company's division and district managers to the U-I studios for a three-day series of meetings so that they could see these pictures for themselves.

He felt that the sales cabinet and the sales executives should see these pictures for themselves at the earliest possible moment so that they could go back to their territories and start telling their exhibitor customers about the pictures while the company's advertising, publicity, and promotional executives set to work to reach the vast potential audiences for these pictures.

David A. Lipton, vice-president who directs advertising, publicity, and promotional forces, meanwhile came to New York with his executive assistant Clark Ramsay for a two-week series of promotional planning meetings with the company's eastern advertising, publicity, and promotion executives, including Charles Simonelli, eastern advertising and publicity department manager; Philip Gerard, eastern publicity manager; Jeff Livingston, eastern advertising manager; Herman Kass, eastern exploitation manager; Henry A. Linet, sales promotion manager; and Robert Gillham, vice-president of Cunningham and Walsh, on the promotion plans on the pictures which the sales executives were to see.

The sales executives were joined at their conference at the U-I studios by the company's top executives from New York and California, including Milton R. Rackmil, president; N. J. Blumberg, chairman of the board; Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president; Edward Muhl, vice-president in charge of production; and vice-president Lipton.

The eight pictures seen by sales executives include "To Hell And Back" in CinemaScope and Technicolor and based on the experiences of Audie Murphy, America's most decorated hero of World War II, a picture already being hailed as one of the finest and most stirring pictures ever produced by U-I; "The Private War Of Major Benson," in Technicolor starring Charlton Heston and Julie Adams; "All That Heaven Allows," in Technicolor, starring Jane Wyman and Rock Hudson; "The Second Greatest Sex," a large scale musical in CinemaScope and Technicolor, starring Jeanne Crain, George Nader, Kitty Kallen, Bert Lahr, Mamie Van Doren, Keith Andes, Kathleen Case, and Paul Gilbert; "Female On The Beach," in Technicolor, starring Joan Crawford, Jeff Chandler, and Jan Sterling; "One Desire," in Technicolor, starring Anne Baxter, Rock Hudson, and Julie Adams; "There's Always Tomorrow," a drama starring Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett, Pat Crowley, William Reynolds, and Gigi Perreau; and "The Spoilers," based on Rex Beach's classical novel in Technicolor and starring Anne Baxter, Jeff Chandler, Rory Calhoun, Ray Danton, Barbara Britton, and John McIntire.

U-I Ups Diamond

NEW YORK—Jack Diamond, who served as assistant to the late Sam Israel, was named last week to succeed him as studio publicity director, Universal-International. The appointment was announced by David A. Lipton, vice-president, in keeping with the studio's policy of promotion from within the ranks.

Diamond joined U-I in 1949 after a long career in journalism and film and entertainment publicity. He was a reporter and feature writer from The Chicago Daily News and the United Press prior to his entrance in public relations. Diamond came to Hollywood from New York in 1943 and worked for six years in Warners' publicity department.

This Was The Week When.....

Paramount announced "The Far Horizons" for New York's Criterion on May 20. . . . Columbia revealed "The Man From Laramie" gets a four-city, four-day world premiere in Texas in mid-July. . . . Britain's young star, Michael Ray, of King Brothers' "The Boy And The Bull," was due in New York for personal appearances. . . . 20th-Fox's "Soldier Of Fortune" was set for 78 first domestic playdates in the last week of May. . . . United Artists disclosed average weekly billings of $687,500 and an aggregate of $17,876,000, during the Benjamin Drive. . . . DCA said it would send "I Am A Camera" on pre-release engagements in key cities where it showed big boxoffice as a play. . . . Mary Murphy started an eastern tour for advance bally on Paramount's "Hell's Island" and "The Desperate Hours." . . . Loew's International Corporation announced MGM will distribute Wolfe Brothers' "Not For The Money," starring Bob Hope and Katharine Hepburn. . . . Fine Arts set up dual U.S. premieres at New York's Beekman and Art of "No Way Back" and "Midnight Episode."

United Artists acquired world distribution rights to films of the heavyweight title bout between Marciano and Cockell. . . . Arne Sucksdorff's "The Great Adventure," Cannes Festival prize winner last year, was to bow in New York's Paris. . . . Allied Artists' directors declared a dividend of 13¾ cents on cumulative convertible preferred stock, payable June 15 to holders of record June 3. . . . 20th-Fox's "The Adventures Of Sadie" was headed for its American premiere at New York's Trans-Lux Normandie. . . . HAPPY BIRTHDAY NOTE: Independent Theatre Service, a mutually-owned buying and booking service of a group of New Jersey exhibitors, celebrated its 10th anniversary with a luncheon held last week at Toots Shor's, and it was a nice informal gathering. We maintain that anything that survives 10 years in this business deserves recognition which we are pleased to provide. We wish the members the best for the next 10 years.

Irving Dollinger, vice-president and general manager, acted as toastmaster, presenting a history of the organization, which he maintained was formed for protection against the distributors. There is a real spirit of trust and friendship among the members, with all deals, adjustments, etc., being available for all to see. He paid tribute to the leadership of president Lew Newbury over the years and presented him with a club bag as a token of the occasion after Newbury blew out the usual candles on the usual cake.

Prexy Newbury recalled some of the highlights of the decade and thanked all concerned for having made it possible.

THRILLER, CHILLER: RKO screened a short for newspaper and other press representatives called "Devil Take Us" last week at the Johnny Victor. This is a shocker and expose on the driver of today. After seeing it, you want to tear up your driver's license and turn over the car to your mother-in-law.

Following the screening, RKO sales topper Herbert Greenblatt and Sid Kramer, shorts sales manager, received an award from the Liberty Mutual Insurance Company for the fine job it does on traffic safety. It was produced, written, and directed by Herb Morgan, an expert on this type of thing, if memory serves us correctly.

See it; then, as a public service to your community, you'll play it. It'll help make your streets safer and even save lives.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: Customers at the Paramount are visibly impressed with the highly effective presentation on the huge screen of the short "VistaVision Visits Mexico." Travel has gone deluxe on the vast screen. . . . The Little Carnegie has an exposition of South American arts, crafts, and wildlife in conjunction with the premiere showing of IFE's prize-winning color adventure-documentary film, "Green Magic." . . . 100,000 window streamers plugging "Daddy Long Legs" have been printed by Capitol Records as part of the film-keyed promotion. . . . Okeh pressbooks are out on "Violent Saturday," "5 Against The House," "Green Magic," and "Mambo." . . . Members of the St. Louis Cards had a chance to see "Strategic Air Command" when they were in town recently in which they are prominently in the background. Did they play any baseball while in town? Quien Sabe? . . . A record number of screenings for school editors was held by 20th-Fox on "Daddy Long Legs" and we'll bet the joint was rockin' when the "Sluefoot" came on the screen. . . . Jack Glenn, president, Jack Glenn, Inc., which is as it should be, who recently saw his three-reel color drama, "Farm Family America," bow under the sponsorship of General Electric, left for Spain on a production venture. He's due back in June.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Variety Of Good-Will Ideas Boost Business

BAYONNE, N. J.—Resourceful Nyman Kessler, manager, Stanley Warner DeWitt, is one exhibitor who has come up with useful ideas to increase community goodwill and attendance in his theatre.

Analyzing his neighbors' habits and predilections, and believing the theatre should be an important part of community life, Kessler appeals to organization-minded Bayonne citizens by awarding passes for public-spirited activities. For the police-supervised school safety patrol, he issues passes to children who assist at busy traffic intersections; for the Police Athletic League, he awards free admission to the young people who patrol the PAL building. Further cooperating with the police department, he makes a point of showing a safety trailer at the regular kiddy matinees. He stressed safety during his showing of "Johnny Dark" with a large display at a super-market reminding the public to avoid accidents. The U-I home office supplied the stills.

Service clubs, such as the Kiwanis and Lions, sponsoring children's and other activities, receive Kessler's attention too. These organizations sponsor pet shows, soap-box derbies, kite-flying contests, and the like, and the manager invariably invites the young folk involved to be his guests, adding to his goodwill with parents and usually earning good publicity.

In short, awarding passes is the key to Kessler's success. "With 2800 seats," he says, "we always have a few empties to take care of these goodwill customers." Although he lives in the Bronx and commutes to Bayonne, Kessler reads the local papers avidly, and follows up birthday, anniversary, graduation, etc., with a few passes. A file full of letters of appreciation attests to Kessler's important role in community life.

Recently, cooperating with the Merchants Board of Trade, the DeWitt got many pages of free newspaper publicity during a give-away of $5000 worth of merchandise to the holders of lucky coupons. Kessler, in turn, offered free coupons to anyone donating money to the Community Chest; in various industries contests were held for the most popular girl, to have the honor of drawing the winning coupons on a particular night of the five-week campaign. The theatre had a lobby display of all merchandise offered in the giveaway promotion.

Salute The Press

CHICAGO—Filmack has issued a special trailer which it would not hurt theatres to run in an effort to create good will for good breaks with local newspapers. It's a reciprocal gesture. Just send Filmack a masthead of your paper, along with a short pitch about what a wonderful job it does in your community and Filmack will make up the trailer at small cost.

As part of the national promotion campaign for "The Prodigal," MGM recently tied up with Armour and Company on a "Name The Star" contest for Taina Elg. Here a group of 10 local lovelies supplement three starlets from the film in a special parade which included 27 Dodge cars, also in on the national tie-up, pass through the principal streets of Milwaukee.

Fragrant Tieup

NEW YORK—Columbia is joining with Sortilege perfumes to tie up in an extensive and far-reaching promotion for "The End of the Affair." Sortilege will pull out all stops in getting behind the film with saturation window displays and co-op advertising.

Seventy thousand 11 by 14 displays of Miss Kerr endorsing Sortilege perfumes will be distributed throughout the United States to top department stores, cosmetic salons, and other Sortilege outlets. Bloomingdale's in New York will carry display material and Gimbels, also in New York, will run an advertisement in The New York Times in addition to featuring the display material.

Sortilege is sending a promotion letter to all its sales representatives directing them to cooperate in every respect. Beauty editors on all key city newspapers have been advised of the promotion and have received all the display material included in the campaign.

The Burrows Twins, Barbara and Jackie, and Frankie Paglieri, Fred Astaire Dance Studios instructors, recently taught an eager group of ushers and usherettes at the Roxy, New York City, how to do "The Sluefoot," new dance introduced in 20th-Fox's "Daddy Long Legs," which had its eastern premiere at that theatre.

Look-Alikes Sought In "Pharaohs" Contest

NEW YORK—A long list of prizes will be awarded to the New York girl who most resembles Joan Collins, the lovely Egyptian Queen in Warners' "Land Of The Pharaohs," the Astor announced last week.

Contestants should send a full-length photograph of themselves to the "Land Of The Pharaohs" Contest Editor, Astor. The photo should be accompanied by measurements, age, color of hair and eyes, address, and telephone number. For comparison, Miss Collins' measurements are as follows, bust, 37; waist, 23; hips, 36; age, 20. She has green eyes and chestnut hair.

First prizes in the contest include a two-week vacation at the Chalet in Canada and a Benrus wristwatch. Second prize is a one-week vacation at Chesters', Woodbourne, N. Y.; third prize, a week-end at the Peekskill Dude Ranch. In addition, each of the three prize-winners will receive a Winkies resort wear bathing suit, a handbag by Coblentz, a Rose Laird Beauty Kit, jewelry by Coro, and a Ronson Princess cigarette lighter.

A panel of judges, including the managing director of the Astor, a representative of Warners, and Rozee, noted vacation authority, will select the first, second, and third prize-winners. The contest closes May 25.

Book Builds "Robbers' Roost"

NEW YORK—A national book promotion backing United Artists' "Robbers' Roost" in thousands of book stores, department stores, and drug stores throughout the country has been set with Grosset and Dunlap, Inc., it was announced last week by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for UA.

The campaign for "Robbers' Roost" was launched with distribution of Grosset and Dunlap's special movie edition of the western thriller. The UA release will be hypoed in every exchange area via window, counter, and rack displays featuring book builds, scene stills, and prominent picture credits.

To provide additional penetration, the publishers have prepared 10,000 slot cards, carrying stills from the picture and credits, which will be affixed to the books on display. The card and books will also key advance lobby displays.

Co-ops Boom "Business"

CHATHAM, CANADA—Harry Wilson, Capitol, recently promoted a full-page co-op ad in the Chatham Daily News on 20th-Fox's "There's No Business Like Show Business," which was accomplished without cost to the theatre. The theatre garnered a nice ad in the center of the page, as well as a reader on the film. Tenor of the ads were "There's No Business Like Show Business—and no values like those at . . . "

STUDIO SURVEY

The Editor Speaks

JOE PASTERNAK, MGM producer, is back in Hollywood after visiting with top showmen and the local press of such key cities as Chicago, New York, Houston, Miami, and New Orleans.

PAUL MANNING

PASTERNAK RATES among the very best in the business, and these frequent trips out into the field have always been serious fact-finding surveys which influence his future production plans. Talking shop with leading exhibitors and motion picture editors of important daily papers, Pasternak came to the following conclusions:

TODAY'S MOVIE patrons are real hep. They want realism in stories, and this goes for musicals as well. The impact of big screen processes, multiple sound tracks, distant locations has vanished.

THEY WANT new stars. On this score, Pasternak has a word for exhibitors. Says he, "Studios have always been ready to search for and develop new stars. They're the lifeblood of our industry. But this program takes time, money, and patient tolerance. If exhibitors, to whom these news stars could mean money in the bank, would get behind the studio in this building-up procedure by selling hard the pictures in which new faces are launched, then producers would be encouraged to intensify the search for new talent."

PASTERNAK VISITED all types of movie houses. He was shocked at the poor projection and sound equipment in many theatres. He said, "Paul, you wouldn't believe the pictures were made in Hollywood. We make our pictures with the very best in photography and with absolute fidelity in sound. It's like taking a brand new high-fidelity recording of a magnificent symphony and playing it on your grandfather's creaky gramophone! A lot of exhibitors had better realize it's high time they changed their needle!!"

Filmakers, A Top Hollywood Independent

Keefe Brasselle uses the girl friend of a teen-age wolf pack, Karen Sharpe, to get to the gang leaders in Filmakers "Mad At The World," a timely story of juvenile delinquency and the latest from the fast growing company.

Six fugitives in Filmakers current release, "Crashout," the story of convicts, their escapes and escapades, are enacted by William Bendix, Arthur Kennedy, Luther Adler, William Talman, Gene Evans, and Marshall Thompson.

FILMAKERS Releasing Organization, one of the industry's most unique and successful independent enterprises with 11 money-making features to its credit over six years of operation, will face its busiest period during the next six months.

TWO FRO PICTURES are in release, "Crashout" and "Mad At The World," both launched with 100-theatre saturation premieres in the Boston-New England area. The former was subsequently booked by all major circuits; "Mad At The World," just going into release, is regarded as a likely bet for the chains because of high public interest in its timely and provocative theme, juvenile delinquency.

IRVING H. LEVIN, Filmakers president, has announced that the company will start shooting four features in the next 90 days and, in view of newly-available playing time in many territories, the schedule may be stepped up even further.

IN MAY, Hal E. Chester and Lewis R. Foster, producer and director, respectively, of "Crashout," will team up again to start "Battle Hell," infantry story based on an original by Robert C. Lewin, for which Chester has secured full Army cooperation from Washington.

IN JUNE, producer-writer Collier Young will roll "The Firebug," drama of a woman arsonist which will be treated with the daring and uncompromising manner reminiscent of Young's earlier Filmakers efforts, "Not Wanted," "The Young Lovers," and "The Hitchhiker."

ALSO IN JUNE, Chester will launch "The Smoldering Sea," a merchant marine story based on the best-seller novel by U. S. Anderson. The same producer plans an August start for "The Weapon," his most ambitious production to date, to be filmed both here and abroad.

THE ENTIRE FRO program will be filmed in SuperScope, with top names heading the cast of each feature. Departing from early Filmakers policy of "unknowns" in leading roles (Keefe Brasselle, Mala Powers, Sally Forrest, Hugh O'Brian, William Talman), the company now makes name power a prerequisite. "The Bigamist" starred Joan Fontaine, Edmond O'Brien, and Ida Lupino; "Private Hell 36," Miss Lupino, Steve Cochrane and Howard Duff; "Crashout" top-lines William Bendix, Arthur Kennedy, Luther Adler, William Talman, Gene Evans, Marshall Thompson, and Beverly Michaels; "Mad At The World" co-stars Frank Lovejoy, Keefe Brasselle, Cathy O'Donnell, and Karen Sharpe.

IT IS EXHIBITOR participation that has done most, however, to make Filmakers a going concern. The company originated the "exhibitor guarantee" plan, allowing theatres to bid for a picture during its production. More than 1,000 exhibitors are signed up under the plan on latest FRO productions, according to Harry Mandell, vice-president and general sales manager. Among the salutary results are recent figures showing 8,264 playdates for "The Bigamist" over its first 12 months in release, and 5,426 dates for "Private Hell 36" after six months in release.

Filmakers has come a long way from the infant company of 1949, when it was formed by Young and Miss Lupino with an avowed shortage of financing but a willingness to gamble with off-beat subjects in the competitive production field. The risks were compounded when in 1953, Levin came in and FRO was formed, while the previous partnership between Filmakers and RKO was dissolved. Thus the company became completely independent in both production and distribution fields, and today, looking over increased activity in the Filmakers camp, it can fairly be said that the dual gamble has paid off.—P.M.

A tense moment in "Crashout" takes place when the farm of Beverly Michaels is invaded by fugitives including Bendix and Talman.

About The Hal Makelim Plan

HAL MAKELIM

AS OF THIS MOMENT there are 3,534 exhibitors who not only know all about the Makelim Plan but have all gone a step further and have become associated with his plan, which is designed to mutually benefit his production organization and its exhibitor partners.

HAL MAKELIM first announced his plan to the industry about a year ago. Since that time he has been constantly on the go, covering almost 200,000 air miles in criss-cross transcontinental flights, meeting and enrolling exhibitors. In general, he has been pretty consistent in getting this first phase of the plan solidly set before proceeding to phase two, which is the production of his 12 features.

ANNOUNCEMENTS, per se, are no strangers to this business. There are several types of announcers in our business: First, there is the perpetual announcer who will announce anything, even his latest belly-ache, just to get his name in print. Then there is a more serious type of announcement maker, one who makes an intelligent statement and has the patience to wait until every condition is favorable to the success of his announced venture. Someone once said, "Hold your fire! Don't shoot until you can see the whites of their eyes!"

I MENTION THIS because Hal Makelim has been slowly and carefully going about the business of making his plan as foolproof as possible, and also for the dubious benefit of a few chronic skeptics who have been peppering him with a little jibe here and there along the way. Heckling doodlers have no more effect on Hal than would a baby's rattle. A man who has been able to convince 3,534 alert exhibitors that they should hop on his wagon certainly isn't going to be bothered by a few snide remarks from somewhat irresponsible sources.

I'VE SEEN too many "epics" planned on Sunday, shot on Tuesday and a half day Wednesday, and tossed into the ash can on Thursday! Let's take a square look at the way in which another planning outfit works, our Atomic Energy Commission. Their precise planning for their atomic blasts in the Nevada desert waits, waits, and still waits for that absolute and right set of conditions. No visiting fireman, whether he be the President himself, could make these scientists "let 'er go just for kicks!" Not on your life, and it easily could be your life!

AT THE RIGHT TIME, and not one split second sooner, they will trigger the blast. Thus their intelligently planned operation will protect people, and the greatest amount of useful information can be learned from the operation. And there are many who will agree with me that intelligent, clear headed, and painstakingly patient planning is as important in our business.

HAL MAKELIM isn't dealing with nuclear weapons, but he has been entrusted with a major responsibility of a different nature and therefore must reserve for himself the privilege of doing the job when and how he thinks best.

ONE FACT is evident: The Makelim Plan has a lot of rooters who think it can work. Makelim told me that the creed he lives by is to plan his work, and then work his plan!

TIME WILL TELL as always, and a lot of us will be around to see what the tote board says after the Makelim race is run!

GOOD THINGS TO COME FROM HOLLYWOOD . . .

Buena Vista's "The Lady And The Tramp" And "Switzerland"

Walt Disney has done it again. The master of the animated cartoon, who has won more honors than he can count in both cartoon and live-action feature and short work and whose nature films are invariably internationally honored, has put together a package as his latest effort that is certain to please young and old.

Included is "The Lady And The Tramp," first feature length CinemaScope cartoon, in which Disney and his staff add still more unforgettable cartoon characters to that seemingly endless library of Americana, Mickey Mouse style.

This is real entertainment for the young in heart, regardless of their age, and the fellow who coined the phrase, "Dog is man's best friend," must have been thinking of the fun loving Tramp and Lady, the lovely spaniel who captures his heart.

Peggy Lee, one of America's favorite singing stars and composer of many top song hits, delivers a set of tunes for this film that seem sure to climb on the hit parade, providing additional exploitation pegs.

The other part of this latest Buena Vista package is "Switzerland," a CinemaScope entry in Disney's People and Places series. Seen are breathtaking views of all facets of life in the beautiful little country, with the accent on the glorious Alps. The people work and play, dress up and loaf, and the skiing shots are sensational.

Southeastern Festival Launched With Glamour

ATLANTA — Theatre owners from three states who sell glamour on their screens daily saw glamour personified when they came to the opening of the Southeastern Movie Festival.

Mary Murphy, honey-brunette star of Paramount's forthcoming "Desperate Hours" and "Hell's Island," was here for the kick-off of the Festival, which will mark the beginning of a new era in the motion picture business.

In the glamour department also were two lovely starlets featured in the United Artists' latest Mickey Spillane thriller, "Kiss Me Deadly." Miss Murphy made a series of appearances on TV and radio.

The festival brought together showmen from Georgia, Alabama, and Florida, in a tri-cities convention at the Biltmore Hotel. At the same time, theatre owners heard about the exciting new pictures coming from the major studios in Hollywood. The convention opened with a workshop, staged by MGM, and closed with a president's banquet in the garden terrace.

Alabama

Huntsville

The Whitesburg Drive-In has been repaved and resurfaced, new concession equipment installed, and the spot repainted and refurbished preparatory to reopening for the season, manager Robert Ross stated. . . . The first section of a proposed 660-car drive-in to be known as the Parkway opened just west of the present 231 Drive-In, north of Huntsville. When its "twin" is completed, more than 1,100 cars will be accommodated, and films will be shown simultaneously on its twin screens. Russell L. Parham, managing director, and his partner, Jack Hefferman, have undertaken a two-and-a-half year program with the "twins." Marvin Husky is manager. A feature will be a three-story concession building in the center of the tract. Only the first floor is now open, but plans call for construction to continue. On the first floor will be an air conditioned cafeteria. Rest rooms are also on this floor. On the second floor, one side will be a glassed in, lounge-type area, where there will be dancing and food service, as well as stage acts for entertainment. On the opposite, or south side, will be another glassed-in area where seats will be installed for walk-ins. Projection booths will be moved to the third floor when the project is completed. The screens are 55 feet by 110 feet. It is planned to demolish the 231 Drive-In after this season to make way for the Parkway's "twin."

Affected companies are the Exhibitors Service Company, Central Shipping Bureau, and Cinema Service, all of Detroit.

How to determine dues of Michigan Allied members, long a problem, was discussed at length at a recent board meeting. The new plan would assess dues according to the classification of theatres by size of town and runs for houses buying in groups. Indie exhibitors would continue direct payment of dues. The present levy of 10 cents a seat has been deemed unsatisfactory. . . . The Federation of Motion Picture Councils meeting here was attended by representatives of 130 local federations and interested groups. Mrs. Max Williams, Royal Oak, is national president. Highly criticized was motion picture advertising, which was marked as "frequently not representative of the picture actually shown," and of lower moral tone than the product advertised. Local councils pledged to support better pictures.

Recently here the Ford Motor Company commercial film showings were counted. Now comes the figures for competitor General Motors. GM documentary films reached 77,000,000 Americans during 1954. There were 96,211 requests for 60 films, including seven new ones. Most popular was "ABC Of Hand Tools."

Tom Williams, manager, Schine's Margie Grand, used a very simple, but effective gimmick recently on "Conquest Of Space." He bought 50 paper picnic plates and had gummed stickers made up with the following copy: "Flash! Man's Greatest Adventure. See how it will happen in your lifetime . . as man reaches his target for tomorrow! Will flying saucers attack earth? See how it could happen in 'Conquest Of Space' —(dates) at Schine's Margie Grand Theatre. If this number appears in the boxoffice Friday you will win free admission to see 'Conquest Of Space'." The numbered plates were thrown from the theatre roof onto the courthouse lawn, opposite theatre, the day before opening. Signs were posted around town with copy: "Hey, Kids, Look! Flying Saucers Launced From Top Margie Grand Today At Four P. M. With Free Passes. See 'Conquest Of Space'." A 40x60 in the in the lobby carried similar copy. The stunt attracted plenty of attention for the picure and playdates and was most inexpensive. Ten of the 50 plates bore winning numbers, which were posted in the boxoffice window at the theatre. Williams also used an effective street bally. He borrowed one large and six small sections of sheet metal flues from a metal shop and got a boy to wear it, the larger section being used for the body and the six smaller sections for arms and legs. An old silk stocking was put over his head, with "antennae" and he wore rubber gloves and a sign plugging the picture. This attracted a lot of attention and got laughs as the downtown area was covered on Saturday afternoon when everyone was out shopping.

Lexington

Foster Liederbach, Schine's Kentucky, upon hearing of the popularity of the local TV station's daily 5:30 p.m. show featuring old Our Gang comedies, presented as the Little Rascals, presented the station manager with the idea of selecting the "Little Rascal of the Week." The manager went for this 100 per cent and put it into effect at once. Parents are urged to write in about some cute "good deed" their little rascal has done. Each week the best letter is picked to receive the "Little Rascal Award." The prize is a large, gaudy badge with the legend: "I'm the WLEX-TV 'Little Rascal Of The Week'." On the back is inscribed, "During the week of . . . . . the bearer and family will be admitted free at all Lexington Schine Theatres, plus all the free popcorn The Little Rascal can eat." This is plugged daily along with the various films shown on the TV program. The winner is presented on TV each week to receive his award, and the TV-Radio Guide does a story, plus announcements, of the winner each week. Theatres in other cities where a TV station is carrying the shows might be able to make similar tie-ups.

St. Louis

The Fanchon and Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company has dropped the art policy at the Hi-Pointe. That house has returned to the former subsequent-run policy. In the meantime, the circuit continues the use of art pictures at Shady Oak, Clayton, Mo.; the Richmond, Richmond Heights, Mo.; and the Pageant.

The pension plan for members of Moving Picture Operators' Local 143, IATSE affiliate, has progressed so that area theatres are now contributing five percent of the wages for projectionists into the pension fund. The fund, which has been approved by the Internal Revenue Bureau, is to be administered by trustees: Louis K. Ansell, Ansell Brothers Theatres, and James H. Arthur, president, Fanchon and Marco Service Corporation, for the employers, and Robert Tomsen and Phil Murphy for the union. It was provided for under the five-year contract of the union dating from Nov. 1, 1954. On Jan. 1, 1957, or when $50,000 in the pension reserve has been accumulated, whichever is earlier, members of the union who have reached 65 years will be eligible for a pension of $75 a month. This, of course, would be in addition to their Social Security benefits. Retirement at age 65 would be voluntary. The union has about 220 members and it has been estimated that within five years 50 may be eligible for pensions. The plan is actuarially sound, its intricate details having been worked out by Donald B. Warren, Nelson and Warren, actuaries.

In Lovington, Ill., the Town, owned by Hal Bowers, has been closed due to a booth fire which badly damaged the projection machines and other equipment. Reopening date is indefinite.

Harry Wald was the winner and Ben Mandel runner-up of the Variety Club's recent first annual gin rummy tourney conducted in the club's headquarters in the Chase Hotel.

A couple of tornadoes ganged up on the Sikeston Drive-In, Sikeston, Mo., owned by Mrs. O. W. McCutcheon, Blytheville, Ark., and their combined efforts have put the 450-car theatre out of business until the necessary repairs can be made. The first twister struck the screen tower from one angle and almost blew it completely over. The next morning another tornado moving in a different direction blew the screen back into position but continued its force until it had been blown to the ground. The theatre marquee also was blown down, as was most of the fence. Damage to the concessions and projection building was of a minor nature, it is understood.

Boston

A toned-down version of RKO's "French Line" has been accepted for Sunday showings in the Commonwealth by Otis M. Whitney, Commissioner of Public Safety, and for showings in theatres in Boston by its mayor, John B. Hynes. These men and other city and state officials viewed the new version, giving their sanction to the new dance sequence in which Jane Russell is seen in long shots instead of the original closeups. The Mayor of Lynn, who had banned the film in its original version for showings in his city, was not present at the screening. Should he follow along with Hynes and Whitney, which is expected, the RKO case may be withdrawn from the courts.

Gerald M. Palmier, former general manager, Eastern Drive-In Theatres of New Jersey, has resigned to accept an appointment as district manager for Smith Management Company, it was learned from Richard Smith, vice-president. A veteran theatreman, Palmier had been an executive with Warner Theatres before joining Eastern. With Smith Management, he will supervise all its theatres in the states of New York and New Jersey.

Harold Rosenberg, New York, is the new booker at the Warners exchange replacing Eddie Barry who resigned to enter another field of business. . . . At the RKO exchange, Joe Abramo has been transferred from National Screen Service as a booker, replacing Richard Oberman who moved over to Embassy Pictures as a salesman. . . . Frances Greenberg had been in charge of the bookkeeping for the ozoners.

Chester Currie, who was operated on for a hernia recently at the Veterans' Hospital, Providence, is taking it easy for a week or two at his Pawtucket home. . . . Another honor has been bestowed upon George Roberts, treasurer, Rifkin Circuit. Having just stepped down from the presidency of the Sentry Lodge, B'nai B'rith, he was installed this week as the first vice-president, Greater Boston Council of B'nai B'rith, and is the only industryite on the official board of directors.

Loew's State and Orpheum will show a Massachusetts Department of Commerce film entitled "A Massachusetts Holiday." This is believed to be the first time that a film produced by a state agency has played in a major theatre to help educate viewers as to the vast vacation resources available to them. Taking the audience by air, rail, water, and on foot, the film points out the historical, scenic, and recreational advantages of the state throughout the four seasons. In color, the film has a musical background of original ballads. Charles E. Kurtzman, northeastern division manager, Loew's Theatres, Inc., was so impressed with the film when he first saw it that he requested Commissioner of Commerce Richard Preston's permission to present it at his twin theatres as a public service.

Sympathy is extended to Louis Josephs, film salesman, Bay State Film Company, in the death of his wife, Mrs. Leah Josephs, whose funeral was held at Solomon Funeral Home, Brookline. Lajoie, manager, Capitol, Worcester, for New England Theatres, Inc., is one of the 18 students chosen by the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology for further study this summer at the Shrewsbury foundation. This is a newly established precollegiate science program in cooperation with St. Mark's School in Southboro. A student at Wachusetts Regional High School, Peter is planning to enter medical school following his graduation from high school.

Reports from Orlando, Fla., have reached this area that the address given there before the MGM Workshop group of Florida exhibitors by Charles E. Kurtzman, northeast division manager, Loew's Theatres, was received enthusiastically. An ebullient personality, Kurtzman spoke on community relations and film exploitation, telling of some of the successful campaigns used in his district. Kurtzman has signed for a week's presentation at Loew's State, Boston, for Alan Freed's musical "Rock 'N Roll" show as a direct appeal to the jazz lovers. It will be coupled with AA's "Treasure of Ruby Hill" and will have Symphony Sid of Station WBMS as emcee from the stage. Following its engagement here, the stage show moves to Loew's State, Providence, for three days in that city.

The Rifkin Circuit reopened the Cod Drive-In, Falmouth, Mass., for its second season, playing first-run films. Harold Glecken is the new manager. . . . Myer I. Ruttenberg has sold a deal of plastic housewares to ATC's Central, East Boston, starting in June.

The news of the birth of Michael Sean Pierce in Santiago, Chile, caused rejoicing to Eleanor Ahern, office manager, Columbia, and Catherine Ahern, secretary to H. C. Taylor, RKO, as the baby is the son and first child of their nephew, Arthur F. Pierce, who is with Columbia International in that South American country. . . . Larry Laskey, who was ordered to rest by his doctors, is now back at his office at E. M. Loew Theatres on a regular schedule.

Eliminations announced by the Bureau of Sunday Censorship included: "Heart of the Matter," parts 1 to 11 (Deletions: Eliminate dialogue, "Since my last confession to you a month ago, I have committed adultery many times," in part 10). (English-made). (Regal).

Fine Asks N. E. Exhibs To Support CP Drive

BOSTON—Hy Fine, the motion picture industry's New England chairman for the United Cerebral Palsy Assoeiation, appealed recently to his "fellow showmen" for cooperation in the eurrent UCPA fund-raising drive. Fine pointed out that there is no eure for the victim of eerebral palsy, and that sueh brain injury ean oeeur prenatally or at any time during life in any one of many ways. He added, however, that seienee has devised a means of training normal parts of the brain to do the work of the injured tissue, making it possible for those who eannot coordinate their museles of speeeh and loeomotion to beeome self-sufficient, instead of being the objeets of pity and even derision.

To buy equipment, establish elinies, and train personnel, funds are needed desperately, Fine said. He urged exhibitors to show the eerebral palsy film trailer and to eol!eet voluntary contributions, either by audienee or lobby soliciitation. At drive-ins he suggested car-to-car eanvassing, or workers to man coin boxes at the exits from coneession counters.

The chairman announced that $120,000 has been contributed through New England exhibitors in the last five years, and called for another all-out effort this year for the UCPA, to whieh all eheeks for monies eollected should be made out.

Sumberg, chairman of the dinner committee, made the presentation. The present chief, George H. Schenck, also commended him. Perlmutter, in acknowledging the toasts, urged the members and the public to continue their support of Camp Thacher. He described the Variety Club as a public service and public servant combined; the international organization, as one whose record in the field of charity is unsurpassed.

A grandchild arrived for Saul J. Ullman, Fabian division manager, and Mrs. Ullman when Mrs. H. Simon Ullman, wife of their younger son, recently gave birth to a son in Albany Hospital. Child was named Joseph Mark. It's the first for the Simon Ullmans. Father, a senior at Albany Law School, has been associated with Tri-State Automatic Candy Corporation in a supervisory capacity the past two summers. He also served for a time as assistant manager, Palace. A brother, Irwin, is supervisor of area Fabian drive-ins.

Strand manager A. O. La Flamme arranged a Saturday morning 3 D show for children. It was the third in a series featuring cartoons. . . . Pink lemonade has been added to the drinks served at Strand's concession stand. Fresh nuts are another new item. Stand is managed, for Tri-State Automatic Candy Corporation, by Mrs. Stephanie Nestick, with Mrs. Polly Decker as assistant. . . . Richard Cook is new assistant to Leland manager Stanton Patterson. Patterson had been without one for several years. . . . Frank Bornhort is a new night assistant at Palace, replacing Michael Maccochiero. Latter transferred to Mohawk Drive-In as assistant to E. A. Thompson, resident manager. Both men hold other daytime

German Welcomes VCI '56 Convention

NEW YORK—By radio from the high seas last week, William J. German, chief barker, Variety Club of New York, expressed pleasure at the news that the Variety Clubs International will hold its 1956 convention here next May.

"Tent 35 is proud to be host to next year's convention," German said, "and we will more than justify Variety's faith in us. I plan to take an active part in the program as soon as I return to New York."

Meantime, the Crew has scheduled a luncheon meeting with international chief barker George C. Hoover on May 20 for a preliminary discussion of plans to make next year's convention a memorable one.

Amsterdam

In conjunction with the showing of "The Glass Slipper," Schine's Rialto, C. A. Matthews, manager, promoted a special one-performance stage ballet with one of the local dance studios. The studio ran a two column by four inch co-op ad. This was a very inexpensive promotion, the only cost to the theatre being a slightly increased newspaper space ad to feature the ballet and a 40 x 60 in the lobby. It is a good way to augment this picture and local dance studios will usually be glad to cooperate.

Buffalo

Buffalo Variety Club members attending the international Variety convention in the Ambasador Hotel, Los Angeles, were Murray Whiteman, past chief barker, Tent Seven, and Mrs. Whiteman; Marvin Jacobs, first assistant chief barker, and Mrs. Jacobs; Dave Miller, first chief barker, and Mrs. Miller; Billy Keaton, past chief barker, and Mrs. Keaton; Carl Sciandra and Mrs. Sciandra; Gus Basil, Basil circuit head, and Mrs. Basil. Jacobs and Keaton are delegates from Tent Seven and Whiteman, alternate. Dewey Michaels, head, Michaels Theatres, also was attending.

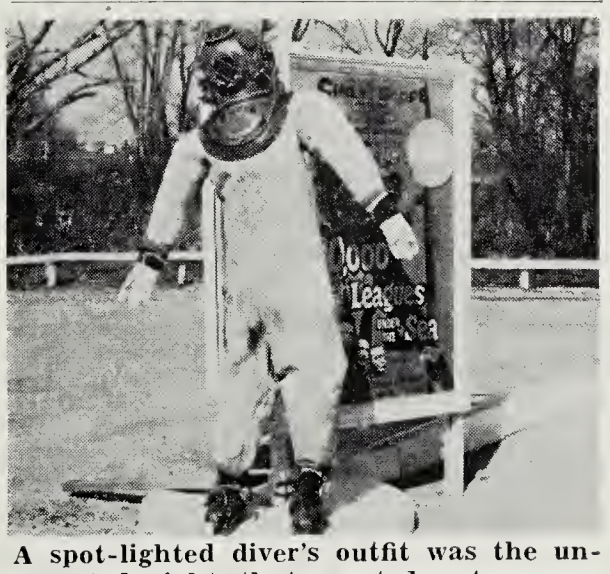
Elmer F. Lux, head, Elmart Theatres, Inc., and president, Buffalo Common Council, is heading the governmental division of the Cancer Crusade for the eighth year. Lux has been prominent in all charity and special drives in the area for a decade. . . . There was a large crowd of barkers and their wives and sweethearts in attendance at the annual Monte Carlo Night. On the program were fun, games, drinks, relaxation, and roast beef buffet, prepared by Tent Seven's famous chef, Clint.

The Buffalo Variety Club's Who's Who of the Month are Dorothy and Myron Gross, who are cited for their outstanding and remarkable achievements for Variety. Myron, who is manager, Buffalo office, Co-Operative Theatres, is at present treasurer of Tent Seven and is a past chief barker, as well as a past house chairman. Dorothy serves the Women's League as trustee and is active on several committees.

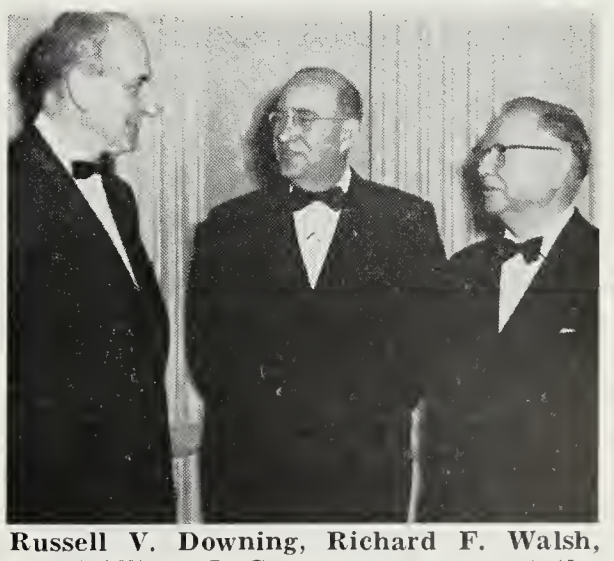
Ben Dargush, manager, Center, reports a big advance sale for the closed circuit telecast of the Marciano-Cockell world heavyweight championship fight. The battle will be shown on the Center's big TV screen at 11 p. m., daylight saving time, on May 16. No seats will be reserved and all tickets are $3.50. This will be the fourth big fight telecast to Center audiences and all of them have been successful at the boxoffice. . . . The first of a series of industrial "sell-out" performances of "This Is Cinerama" was held in the Buffalo Teck when the Bell Aircraft Corporation staged the first of four Bell Aircraft Nights, arranged by manager Paul Swater. . . . The Cinema, operated by Cohen and Slotnick, Rochester, is all dressed up with new screen curtains and front wall decor. Draw curtains of solid gold and yellow stripes now extend across the front of the theatre and over the side walls. The draperies replace the original mural paintings. With its new boxoffice and interior decoration, the Kodak Town Cinema is now to have a new canopy entrance which will be installed later.

Film Row friends are glad to hear of the recovery of Colonel William Shirley, well-known exploitationist, who is out of the hospital following a recent check-up. . . . Norman MacLaren, Canadian artist whose animated color cartoons have attracted wide admiration, was in Rochester as the guest of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, western New York section. MacLaren, head of animation, National Film Board of Canada, is known for his film, "Neighbors," and for such short subjects as "The Romance of Transportation" and others. MacLaren showed several of his short subjects in the Dryden in

As recent exploitation for Warners' "Battle Cry," the SW Roosevelt, Newark, N. J., had Irwin Fink, distributor, Allstate Records, present a recording of "Honey Babe," hit tune from the film, to Anne Norris, seen with some Marines on hand to help plug recruiting and the picture, and who, as usual, "have things well under control."



A spot-lighted diver's outfit was the unexpected sight that greeted patrons recently as they entered Walter Read's Eatontown Drive-In, Eatontown, N. J. Manager Fred Bartholdi borrowed the suit from a local salvage outfit, stuffed it to make it stand upright and used it to exploit Buena Vista's "20,000 Leagues Under The Sea."



Russell V. Downing, Richard F. Walsh, and William J. German are seen at the second annual Heart Award dinner of the Variety Club of New York at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria. Walsh was recipient of the "heart award" and is international president, IATSE and MPMO of the U. S. and Canada. German is chief barker of Tent 35.

Lafe Quinlan, Gay, is making a fine recovery from a heart condition.

Gloversville

John Corbett, manager, Schine's Globe, held a special Roy Rogers kiddie show on a Saturday morning. A local toy store gave away over 500 prizes and devoted their entire main street window to display them. They consist of holster sets, spurs, belts, lassoes, badges, coins, buttons and autographed photos of Rogers. A special herald plugging the show directed children to the store to guess the number of bullets in a jar in the window. As each child brought in his herald filled out an attendant gave him a mimeo form and explained that his name may appear at the theatre boxoffice at the kiddie show for either a free admission or one of the many door prizes. The 500 winners in the guessing contest were not announced, but were posted in the lobby the morning of the show. The toy store paid for half the cost of the heralds, and also ran two newspaper ads the week of the show, as well as several radio spots. One of the main door prizes was a huge Roy Rogers tent, seven foot spread, which was displayed in the lobby. Similar kid shows might readily be arranged through your local Roy Rogers dealer.

Kingston

Harry Lamont included a picture of his CinemaScope screen at the Sunset Drive-In in a large newspaper advertisement. It announced he was "sacrificing one day" of operation so that "patrons will see and hear the best" when they entered for the first CS presentation.

Massena

Don Gilson has undertaken a modernizing and beautifying project at the Sunset Drive-In to cost $25,000. It includes a new concession stand and rest rooms, plus ramp changes. Gilson also operates Sunset Drive-In, Canton, and Thousand Island Drive-In, Alexandria Bay, the latter in partnership with Tony Scalise. He expects this to be a big drive-in season.

Syracuse

George Snyder, manager, Schine's Palace, has set up a series of jitterbug contests to be held on the stage of his theatre. There will be four of them, held each Friday evening, with the winners of each weekly contest to meet in the finals on June 3. Prizes will be awarded to the weekly winners, with a grand prize going to the finalists. Entries are accepted at the theatre, and there is no age limit. The contests will be judged by instructors from local dancing schools.

Tupper Lake

Leon Dechene, Tupper Lake Drive-In, was confined to Mercy Hospital with a heart attack.

Watertown

In connection with the engagement of "Blackboard Jungle" recently at Schine's Avon, manager Ralph Stitt hit upon the idea of having a TV panel show in a tiein with the local schools. This featured two teachers, one of whom acted as moderator, and three high school students, two girls and a boy, in a frank discussion of the film, pro and con. The Superintendent of Schools was particularly impressed with the idea, and the local TV station went for the idea for a 15 minute period for free. The stunt worked out nicely and could readily be worked elsewhere. If no TV station is available, a radio station might prove just as well.

Leonard H. Goldenson, center, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., recently received a contribution to the United Cerebral Palsy Campaign from secertary Rosalind Betros. All 125 headquarters employees of AB-Paramount Theatres have given to UCP, which was co-founded by Goldenson, who is now UCP's board chairman. Edward L. Hyman, right, vice-president, ABC-PT, looks on.

Censorship Nebulous As Senate Holds Key

PHILADELPHIA — Governor George Leader last week instructed Mrs. Edna Carroll, head, Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors, and her assistant, Mrs. Beatrice Z. Miller, that their services had been dispensed with. This concluded for them a 16 year term.

Although Governor Leader has made new Democratic appointments in the persons of Mrs. Louise M. John, West Chester, Pa., chairman; Mrs. Helen K. Massock, Washington, Pa.; and Mrs. Clara Stevenson Black, Harrisburg, Pa., the State Senate has yet to confirm them.

Consequently, Mike Felt, who recently became chief clerk of the board, is temporarily in full charge.

Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Miller, as well as Mrs. Jewel M. Frank, Pittsburgh, were continuing their duties in the interim between the Governor's appointments and their confirmation by the State Senate.

Mrs. Carroll had been advocating amendments to the Board of Censors Act to strengthen its powers ever since the U. S. Supreme Court questioned censorship statutes and thus considerably limited the powers of State Boards.

The Pennsylvania legislative body, however, has not as yet taken this matter up and has likewise held up okeh of the Governor's new Board members.

Maryland

Baltimore

The Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland had a luncheon in honor of C. Morton Goldstein, the new chairman, Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors. Meyer Leventhal, vice-president, and general manager, Lord Baltimore, was chairman. C. Elmer Nolte, Jr., the league's president, presided. The affair was held at the Baltimore Variety Club. Addressing the guests, Goldstein said he would live up to the letter of the law, but that he also would be temperate in his viewing of films. He urged cooperation between exhibitors, distributors, and the board of censors, on the basis that such coordination would create less problems all along the line. In addition to a large attendance by Baltimore Exhibitors, many Washington branch managers and representatives attended. They included Sidney Cooper, United Artists; Jerry Sandy, Lippert; Harold Saltz, U-I; Charles Kripps, 20th-Fox; Fred Sandy, Sandy Films; Joseph Brecheen, RKO; Oscar Kanter, Warners; Samuel Tabor, Republic; Myron Mills, Equity; Ben Caplon, Columbia; Phil Isaacs, Paramount; Milton Lipsner, Allied Artists; Sam Wheeler, Wheeler Films; Teddy Shull, Peerless; and Herbert Bennin, MGM.

Felton M. Johnston, secretary of the U. S. Senate, acting on the request of Lawrence W. Weatherby, Governor of Kentucky, is seen, left, in Washington, D. C., as he recently presented Orville Crouch, eastern zone manager, Loew's Theatres, with his certificate which enrolled him into the order of Kentucky Colonels.

Manager Art Hallock, Paramount, had the Kiwanis Club of Overlea present a wheelchair to the 14th District Health Association, on the stage of his theatre. Clara Hartman, the Paramount's cashier, is receiving sympathy of friends upon the recent death of her sister, Anna. . . . The Mayfair is having a new paint job on its marquee. George Hendricks is manager. . . . William McKenzie, projectionist at the Little, is a new home owner.

The wife of Henry Jones, assistant manager, Hippodrome, is recovering from illness. . . . Max Miller, United Artists promotion specialist, was in town with the two Mickey Spillane girls. . . . Orville Crouch, eastern division manager, Loew's, was over from Washington for a business meeting. . . . Jack Sidney, Sr., will fly in from the coast to visit his son, Jack, Jr., Century's manager, and to attend the Preakness Race at Pimlico. . . . Isador Makover, general manager, Edmondon Village, took a day off to attend the opening of Pimlico.

Ted Kirwan, manager, New, and Mrs. Kirwan motored to West Point, N. Y. . . . Jack Levin, owner, Irvington, has returned from a trip to the west coast. . . . Aaron Seidler, New Albert manager, was in New York on business. He's now booking for the Alpha, Catonsville, Md.

Leonardtown

With the non-appearance of the stars of "An Annapolis Story" in connection with the Patuxent River U. S. Naval Charity carnival held on the Naval Base in conjunction with the opening of the film at the Park, Lexington Park, Md., the daily press headlined a news story, "Drums Beat But Movie Stars Fade Away," and this didn't do the picture any good or soothe the feelings of Naval personnel and civilians, who had tried to arrange the event. Many explanations are being made since not even a few starlets showed up after the event was given top billing far and wide. . . . Jack Fruchtman, treasurer, Park and Plaza, Leonardtown, Md., was among those attending the Variety Clubs International convention in Los Angeles.

The Embassy, here, was handling ticket sales for the Marciano-Cockell title battle in San Francisco, beamed into the Colonial, Allentown, via TV telecast, at 11 p. m. Admission was $3.50. . . . All seats will be reserved for the Ringling Brothers - Barnum - Bailey circus showing here June 2. Previous big circus shows have sold general admission tickets, the rest reserved. Tickets including menagerie admissions, range from $1.50 to $4, including tax.

Seen at a recent planning meeting for the Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Owners annual convention to be held at the Chamberlin Hotel, Old Point Comfort, Va., June 14-16, are, left to right, Jeff Hofheimer, Norfolk; Earle Westbrooke, Norfolk; Mrs. Dave Garvin, Newport News, chairman, ladies' committee; Hal Lyon, Franklin, general convention chairman; and Leonard Gordon, Newport News, VMPTA president.

Moviegoers here were intensely interested in "Violent Saturday," booked in the Astor. The Amish were true to life, in most respects, in the picture, although it seemed to Reading picture goers that the writer of the script must have thought the Amish are similar to Quakers in their way of speaking English. The Amish, at least those seen on the streets of Reading almost every day, do not "thee" and "thou" each other in their conversation, but use the ordinary English "you" when they are not speaking their home tongue, Pennsylvania German.

Scranton

During the current Cerebral Palsy drive, both Comerford and Paramount Theatres of the area are participating to the fullest. Trailers will be shown in all theatres and lobby and audience collections are scheduled. Paramount's Ben Rosenberg is general chairman in Luzerne County. Chief plan was the huge telethon on WILK-TV. Frank Kovaletz, Paramount, Wilkes-Barre, handled the publicity. Tom Jones, Strand, is aiding in the local drive which is headed by Frank Gilroy, Jr. Complete cooperation between Lackawanna and Luzerne Counties was evidenced by the large newspaper advertisement sponsored by the local chapter urging Scrantonians to view and support the Wilkes-Barre telethon.

The concession stand at the Strand has been remodeled and improved to accommodate the sale of not only candy but also hot dogs, soda, ice cream, etc., with the required hot and cold units included. . . . The closed circuit telecast of the Marciano-Cockell bout was held at the Comerford Drive-In and at the Shawnee Plymouth. . . . Juliana and Tommy Jones, children of Tom Jones, Strand, received the Sacrament of Confirmation at St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church. . . . The son of Comeford's statistician, Walter Dynan, James, a third year student at the University of Scranton, has been accepted in the National Honorary Society of the Jesuit Order. His sister, Mary Ellen Dynan, observed her 20th birthday. . . . Bill Graff, former assistant manager, Capitol, has joined the E. R. Parker Distributing Company where, after a short training period, he will become a salesman. . . . John Roberts, Comerford booker, has returned from a motor trip through the southern states. . . . Strand manager Tom Jones will act as sponsor for his nephew, Evan Jones, who is scheduled to be confirmed in St. Peter's Cathedral on May 29. . . . Carol Keating, daughter of Bill Keating, Comerford Drive-In, received her First Holy Communion last Sunday at St. Ignatius Church, Plymouth, Pa. . . . The Reverend John Michael Byrne, nephew of Mary Fahey, Capitol, will be ordained to the Priesthood by the Archbishop of Newark, the Reverend Thomas A. Boland.

Tent 13, Philadelphia

Backed by excellent publicity by the Daily News and an all-star show, plus door prize giveaways, all things pointed to Johnny Night at Connie Mack Stadium on June 1 being a big success. The ball game has the Phillies playing the Chicago Cubs. The event assures vacations for several hundred handicapped children at the Tent's camp.

The returning Los Angeles conventioneers had nothing but praise for host Tent and the VCI meet.

The Tent's gin rummy and canasta tourney got off to a fast start with Max Gillis, the men's gin chairman, and Mrs. Jack Engle, the women's canasta chairman.

"Court Martial" was screened through the courtesy of Screen Guild.

Truck posters were placed on both sides of the Maryland News Company's fleet of trucks recently plugging the Bantam Book edition of Warners' "East of Eden," Stanley, Baltimore, Md. The trucks covered all sections of Baltimore City and nearby towns and communities.

SAVEABLE REVIEW SERVICES were an innovation by MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR in 1936. Prior to that year many Trade Papers reviewed features and shorts, or at least listed them for reference purposes;—but none followed any uniform style or method that permitted saving in other than a heterogeneous glob in a scissors and paste pot scrapbook.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR changed all this! In 1936 it introduced a separate, saveable section, in which all reviews and indexes relating to any particular year were carefully brought to the executive theatreman for his current and future knowledge. Now imitated or adapted by most other Trade Papers, the basic method has never been improved.

But MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR went further than this! ONLY MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, down through the years, has maintained a 100% Review Coverage of ALL features and of ALL shorts, whether foreign or domestic, that were available to Executive Theatreman consideration. ONLY in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has continued to appear the MOST COMPLETE of all Reviewing Services. The record speaks for itself!

5 Against The House (742)

MELODRAMA
84M.

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller.

CAST: Guy Madison, Kim Novak, Brian Keith, Alvy Moore, William Conrad, Kerwin Mathews, Jack Diamond, Jean Willes. Produced by Stirling Silliphant and John Barnwell. Directed by Phil Karlson.

STORY: Two ex-GI's, Guy Madison and his pal, Brian Keith, who saved his life in combat but returned psychoneurotic, attend a midwest college with wealthy Kerwin Mathews and Alvy Moore. The foursome head back to school after a summer vacation with a stopover in Las Vegas, where they witness a futile holdup of a gambling spot and hear the comment as they catch the crook that it can't be done. Mathews remembers the challenging remark when they get back. Madison resumes his romance with Kim Novak, a singer in a local cafe. As a short vacation approaches, Mathews evolves a plan to rob the gambling spot just to show that it can be done and to return the money. Keith becomes enthused and Moore agrees to go along. They persuade Madison to go along without revealing the plan to him. Novak decides to come along at the last minute so that they can get married there. Enroute, Madison learns of the plan and when he tries to break it up Keith forces them to go through with it at gun's point, planning to keep the money, his mind having snapped. The plan comes off and Keith grabs the money and runs. Novak had informed the police and soon the area is surrounded. Madison talks the trapped Keith out of his gun and he is taken to a hospital for treatment. The others leave with the police to tell their story.

X-RAY: Well-done and interesting throughout, this entry deals in drama and suspense and should do well as part of the program. The cast is good and the direction and production are in the better class. The screen play is by Stirling Silliphant, William Bowers, and John Barnwell based on the Good Housekeeping story by Jack Finney. Music heard includes "The Life Of The Party."

TIP ON BIDDING: Better program rates.

AD LINES: "5 Seconds To Go . . . Then The Guns Go Off"; "Four Guys . . . A Girl . . . A Gadget . . . And The Bank Was Broken"; "The Story Of A Perfect Crime . . . Actually Filmed Where It Happened In Reno . . . The Fort Knox Of The West."

Prize Of Gold (738)

MELODRAMA
98M.

(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller.

CAST: Richard Widmark, Mai Zetterling, Nigel Patrick, George Cole, Donald Wolfit, Joseph Tomelty, Andrew Ray, Karel Stepanek, Robert Ayres, Eric Pohlmann, Olive Sloane. Produced by Irving Allen and Albert R. Broccoli; directed by Mark Robson.

STORY: In the Allied zone of Berlin, a cache of gold bullion is uncovered in a canal and American Air Force Police Sergeant Richard Widmark and his British counterpart, George Cole, are assigned to guard it in staggered shipments to London. When Widmark's jeep is stolen, his pursuit leads him to a group of children, the young thief among them, being cared for by Mai Zetterling and elderly doctor Karel Stepanek, who hope to raise enough money to take them to Brazil to start life anew. Widmark and she fall in love, but wealthy Eric Pohlmann has promised her money for the trip if she will be nice to him. Widmark throws him out and promises the money. He agrees to join Cole in a plan to steal part of the gold and they enlist the aid of ex-flyer Nigel Patrick; Cole's uncle, Joseph Tomelty, who is to provide a truck; and Donald Wolfit, who is to dispose of it. Patrick lands the craft at a deserted base in England where the truck is waiting. The plane's crew tries to make a break in the plane, but Patrick lets go with a machine gun blast that causes it to crash and burn against Wolfit's car. Unknown to Widmark, the crew manages to escape. Widmark's conscience bothers him, and he and Cole agree that they have to give up the gold and surrender. He promises to exonerate Wolfit if he will pay a large sum to wind up in the hands of Zetterling, and he and Tomelty leave. Patrick refuses to go along and kills Cole. In trying to escape laden with the gold from Widmark, he topples into a canal and is drowned by the heavy weight. Widmark surrenders.

X-RAY: Berlin backgrounds, plus local casts, plus a slightly different, if too pat yarn, plus okeh performances and average direction and production are to be found in this entry that should do well on the program. Interest is present pretty much throughout the film and things speed up at the climax. On the spot filming aids in getting the film across. Songs heard include "A Prize Of Gold" and "In Love, In Love." The screen play is by Robert Buchner and John Paxton, based on the novel by Max Catto.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "Stolen Gold For The Girl With The Golden Hair"; "An Amazing Adventure In Suspense Amid The Thieves' Market Of Berlin And The Rats' Alleys Of London"; "An Off-Limits Girl . . . An Off-Beat Story And Stunning Suspense."

(CinemaScope) (Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller with angles to help.

CAST: Stewart Granger, George Sanders, Joan Greenwood, Viveca Lindfors, Jon Whiteley, Liliane Montevecchi, Melville Cooper, Sean McClory, Alan Napier, John Hoyt, Donna Corcoran, Jack Elam, Dan Seymour, Ian Wolfe, Lester Matthews, Skelton Knaggs, Richard Hale, John Alderson, Ashley Cowan, Frank Ferguson, Booth Colman. Produced by John Houseman; directed by Fritz Lang.

STORY: Jon Whiteley arrives at Moonfleet and find himself in the hands of a group of brutal men, commanded by Stewart Granger. A letter carried by the boy and written by his mother instructs him to seek the protection of Granger, who was her sweetheart when a young man. Granger allows Whiteley to stay with him at the manor house of the boy's ancestors. Granger is secretly engaged in smuggling. He conceals his hiding place in the graveyard by fabricating a ghost-tale concerning Whiteley's ancestor, who is buried beneath the church. This person was reputed to have acquired a fabulous diamond that is still secretly hidden. When Whiteley accidentally stumbles into a hole in the graveyard, he discovers the smugglers' hiding place and the bones of Sir John. The boy obtains a locket before he is discovered by the smugglers. They plan to kill Whiteley, but are overruled by Granger. When the police catch Granger in the act of smuggling, he is forced to flee, with the boy trailing behind him. From the locket, Whiteley produces a cryptic message that tells the hiding place of the diamond. Disguised as a soldier, Granger manages to obtain the diamond from the interior of a well. He is being hunted, and the gem will act as his passage out of the country. Granger is able to make an escape, but must betray the boy's trust. A pang of conscience makes Granger return for the boy, this resulting in the smuggler being shot. Dying, Granger reaches Whiteley and entrusts with him the stone.

ESTIMATE: Fair programmer.

CAST: John Payne, Mary Murphy, Francis L. Sullivan, Eduardo Mortega, Arnold Moss, Walter Reed, Pepe Hern, Robert Cabal, Sandor Szabo, Paul Picerni, Mario Siletti, Matty Fain. Produced by William Pine and William Thomas; directed by Phil Karlson.

STORY: John Payne, one-time assistant district attorney, tells his story to police captain Eduardo Mortega as a doctor patches up a bullet wound. When his sweetheart, Mary Murphy, jilted him to elope with Paul Picerni, whom she thought wealthy, he goes on a binge that ends his career and winds up working at a Las Vegas gambling casino where he is approached by Francis L. Sullivan in a wheelchair to investigate the disappearance of a large ruby which disappeared when a plane crashed killing the owner. He takes the job when he learns that Picerni and Murphy are involved and finds Picerni jailed for the death of the owner. Murphy makes a play for him revealing she no longer loves Picerni. She would like to help him escape as he is innocent and it was she who tampered with the plane causing it to crash. She disclaims any knowledge of the missing ruby. When Payne tries to question a mechanic, the latter is killed. Also dead is Murphy's houseboy, and Payne is kidnapped by Sullivan and companions, who think he is doublecrossing them. He escapes and agrees to help Picerni escape, only to learn from him that it is a trap and that Murphy is probably after his large life insurance. Payne sets up a trap of his own with Mortega listening to her admit her guilt. Sullivan and bodyguard step in to try and take the ruby which is brought out of its hiding place, but justice triumphs and Sullivan and company are killed, Payne is wounded, and Murphy is arrested.

X-RAY: Intrigue, murder, Murphy in revealing garb, two-fisted action, gunplay are to be found in this entry for the program along with fair performances and average direction and production. It can round out the bill in okeh fashion. The screen play is by Maxwell Shane based on a story by Jack Leonard and Martin M. Goldsmith. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

COMEDY 102M.

(Reissue)

ESTIMATE: Reissue has names to help.

CAST: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Charlie Ruggles, Walter Catlett, Barry Fitzgerald, May Robson, Fritz Feld, Leona Roberts, George Irving, Tala Birell, Virginia Walker, John Kelly. Associate producer, Cliff Reid; directed by Howard Hawks.

STORY: Cary Grant is a scientist chased on eve of marriage by scatter-brained Katharine Hepburn, who wants him to marry her but wants to lead him into the idea. Everything she does gets him into further trouble. She takes him to Connecticut, where his and her antics in concealing a baby leopard on an estate make everyone believe he is crazy. They finally land in jail, but get out and merge.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of February, 1938, it was said, "This is a wildly outrageous farce which will have some family folks going out of the theatre saying it is a silly picture, but it will, for the most part, register well. It is mostly class, but it is liable to raise belly laughs among the low nabes, too. The twists of the plot has many gags that are screamingly funny. The lead stars are great." The screen play is by Dudley Nichols and Hager Wilde, from a story by Wilde.

TIP ON BIDDING: Top reissue price.

AD LINES: "Whee! What A Love Spree When 'Baby' Makes Three!"; "It's Gay, It's Crazy!"; "Love Me . . . Love My Leopard, Oh, Baby, What A Ball!"

ESTIMATE: Reissue should click.

CAST: Irene Dunne, Barbara Bel Geddes, Oscar Homolka, Phillip Dorn, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Edgar Bergen, Rudy Vallee, Barbara O'Neil, Florence Bates, Peggy McIntyre, June Hedin, Steve Brown, Ellen Corby, Hope Landin, Edith Evanson, Tommy Ivo. Produced by Harriet Parsons; executive producer and director, George Stevens.

STORY: In San Francisco, nearly half a century ago, a Norwegian family headed by wise and indomitable mother Irene Dunne and father Phillip Dorn, have many gay, human experiences in their attempts to establish themselves and maintain their home, always falling back upon "Mama's Bank Account" when things go wrong. Dunne guides her fascinating brood, her problem relatives, and other strange characters who cross the family's path; finally reveals that she never had a bank account; but always used the idea to fall back on so that the youngsters would feel secure.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of March, 1948, it was said of this reissue: "Containing all the ingredients that go into a hit film, this has its quota of warmth, feeling, comedy, dramatic touches, and all-around competence. It is based on the novel, "Mama's Bank Account," by Kathryn Forbes and a hit stage play by John Van Druten. The cast is letter perfect, and while the story consists of a number of incidents, the expertness of George Stevens has succeeded in producing an entertaining unit. The stars and the entire cast acquit themselves admirably."

TIP ON BIDDING: Top reissue price.

AD LINES: "Wonderful, Lovable, Memorable 'Mama' Is On The Screen"; "Wonderful 'Mama'—More Wonderful Than Ever On The Screen"; "Brought Back For Your Re-enjoyment."

A Day To Remember (5433)

COMEDY 72M.

(Rank)
(English-made)

ESTIMATE: Interesting art house offering.

CAST: Joan Rice, Donald Sinden, Odile Versois, Stanley Holloway, James Hayter, Edward Chapman, Bill Owen, Harry Fowler, Vernon Gray, Peter Jones, Patricia Raine, Arthur Hill. Produced by Betty E. Box; directed by Ralph Thomas.

STORY: The dart team of an English pub prepares for a day's outing to Boulogne, France. Included are Donald Sinden, quiet young man obviously mismatched with vivacious Joan Rice; Edward Chapman, a widower wishing to recapture happy memories of trips to France with his wife; James Hayter, pub owner and self-appointed chaperone; Bill Owen, tired of being kidded because of his short stature; Stanley Holloway, fun-loving girl chaser; Peter Jones, travel clerk leaving England for the first time; and Harry Fowler, politician with some smuggling plans. Owen quickly gets drunk and fulfills a lifelong ambition as he joins the Foreign Legion. Collins becomes sidetracked by a vivacious Frenchwoman and winds up drunk and dancing in a French dive. Jones happily learns that he enjoys England far more than travel. Harvey is fortunately sidetracked in his smuggling plans. Chapman successfully finds his lost memories. Sinden, who was billeted on a Boulogne farm during the war, finds a now grown Odile Versois and is drawn to her despite the fact that she is engaged to a successful lawyer. Rice, in England, falls in love with an American soldier and decides to break off with Sinden. Versois breaks up with her lawyer, promising to wait for Sinden's return to France. On the way home all have found some degree of happiness.

X-RAY: This comedy of Englishmen going French for a day makes an interesting art house offering. Each of the stories unfolding holds interest and characters are well-built. Versois is particularly charming, and other cast members acquit themselves well. Some of the material is a bit flimsy, and some of the humor perhaps a little too English for American tastes, but the whole effort comes off rather well. The screen play is by Robin Estridge from a novel by Jerrard Tickell.

AD LINES: "For Laughs You'll Never Forget, See 'A Day To Remember'"; "A Wild And Wacky Adventure In France"; "Laughs And Romance As Englishmen On The Town Meet Those Mademoiselles."

Santa Fe Passage (5404)

OUTDOOR ACTION 90M.

(Color by Trucolor)

ESTIMATE: Okeh frontiersmen vs. Indians entry.

CAST: John Payne, Faith Domergue, Rod Cameron, Slim Pickens, Irene Tedrow, George Keymas, Leo Gordon, Anthony Caruso. Associate producer, Sidney Picker; directed by William Witney.

STORY: Scout John Payne hates all Indians, particularly George Keymas, Kiowas chief, whose treacherous massacre of a wagon-train for whose safety he was responsible leads to his ostracism. He applies for a job with a train led by Rod Cameron, who hires him over the objections of Faith Domergue, half-Indian who owns half the ammunition being escorted for sale to Mexican revolutionists. He saves the train several times, not knowing her Indian background, falls in love with her despite warnings by Cameron.

Cameron reveals her background to Payne and also makes a deal with Keymas to turn over Payne to him, but the chief plans to doublecross everybody and get the guns as well. During the attack, Payne escapes from his Indian captors and rides to warn the train. Cameron is killed, but Payne manages to save Domergue, whom he loves regardless. He is unable to save Indian Irene Tedrow, who posed as Domergue's maid but who really was her mother. Keymas is killed by Payne and they ride on with the train to be wed in Santa Fe.

X-RAY: There's a goodly amount of action to be found here along with a story that holds interest pretty well throughout, and plenty of Indians for the younger set. The color shows up very well, while the cast, direction, and production fall in the okeh category. It should do well on the program. The screen play is by Lillie Hayward, based on the Esquire Magazine story by Clay Fisher.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "An Action-Packed Yarn Of The Early West"; "Thrills Galore As Pioneer Wagon Trains Run The Indian Gauntlet To Santa Fe"; "Roaring Guns Cleared The Passage To Santa Fe."

ESTIMATE: Okeh programmer.

CAST: Dennis O'Keefe, Mara Lane, Rossano Brazzi, Arnoldo Foa, Galeazzo Benti, Enzo Fiermonte, Nino Crisman, Giovanni Fostini, Francesco Tensi, Gorella Gori. Produced by Steven Pallos; directed by Dennis O'Keefe.

STORY: Dennis O'Keefe, American partner in a car agency, meets Mara Lane, secretary to Nino Crisman, wealthy club owner. One night he is summoned to her apartment to find that Crisman died of a heart attack. She begs him to move the body to avoid a scandal. He learns from a note that she was involved with the dead man. Rossano Brazzi, ex-convict, racketeer, and husband of Lane, puts in an appearance and tries to involve O'Keefe by shooting the dead man with O'Keefe's gun and then shoving the car containing Crisman and O'Keefe over a cliff; but O'Keefe turns the tables, kills Brazzi and sends the two corpses over the cliff in the car. When the police charge him with murder, the bullet being found in the dead man to have been fired from his gun, he calls on Lane to tell the whole story. She feigns ignorance. O'Keefe escapes and later forces a confession from Lane, who gets a gun and wounds O'Keefe. The police close in and capture both. O'Keefe is cleared but marked by a scar and limp for life while Lane goes off to jail.

X-RAY: There's a good deal of intrigue and some suspense to be found in this entry which should round out the program in okeh fashion. The cast is efficient, and direction and production are suitable. It unreels at a pace that sustains interest. The screen play is by Jonathan Rix and Edoardo Anton, based on a story by Steve Carruthers.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "She Was A Girl Many Men Could Love And Did"; "When She Couldn't Get Her Man One Way . . . She Got Him Another"; "Suspense . . . Intrigue . . . Murder Follow 'Angela'."

Daddy Long Legs (515)

MUSICAL COMEDY

ESTIMATE: Entertaining entry is headed for higher grosses.

CAST: Fred Astaire, Leslie Caron, Terry Moore, Thelma Ritter, Fred Clark, Charlotte Austin, Larry Keating, Kathryn Givney, Kelly Brown, Ray Anthony and his Orchestra, Sara Shane, Numa Lapeyre, Ann Codee, Steven Geray, Percival Vivian, Joseph Kearns, Larry Kent, Charles Anthony Hughes, Ralph Dumke, Damian O'Flynn. Produced by Samuel G. Engel; directed by Jean Negulesco.

STORY: While touring France, millionaire playboy Fred Astaire comes across Leslie Caron in an orphanage. Fascinated by her freshness, Astaire arranges to send Caron to a college in Massachusetts. Astaire is to be Caron's sponsor, with his identity being kept secret. Caron, who knows Astaire only under an alias, is saddened when he does not answer her letters. She states so in a letter which is brought to the attention of Astaire, who decides to visit Caron under the pretext of seeing his niece, Terry Moore, Caron's roommate. At the annual college spring dance, he meets Caron and falls in love with her. He still keeps his identity as her benefactor a secret. When Caron pays a weekend visit to Astaire in New York, he wines and dines her and she falls for him. Thinking he is too old for her, Astaire sends for her boyfriend who is working in Astaire's South American mine. Astaire then tours the world in an attempt to forget the girl. Caron, saddened by Astaire's abandonment, bides her time in college until graduation. Now confused and dejected, she appeals to her mysterious guardian for advice. A meeting between Caron and Astaire is arranged through the trickery of Astaire's business manager, Fred Clark. Caron arrives at the Astaire home and suddenly realizes who her mysterious benefactor really is. Astaire realizes that she loves him.

X-RAY: The film will appeal to a wide audience and has names that will draw. Excellently mounted, the entry makes for fine entertainment. Direction and performances are good, while dances and settings fall into a superior category. The story is handled in an able fashion, the result being a smooth and well-paced entry. Screen play is by Phoebe and Harry Ephron, from the novel by Jean Webster. Songs include "History of the Beat," "Texas Ramp and Square Dance," "Something Has Got to Give," "CAT Spells Cat," "Welcome Egghead," "Dream," "Daddy Long Legs," "Sluefoot," "Tango," "Griggs Drums," "Mambo," "Blues," "Dancing Through Life," and "Thunderbird."

ESTIMATE: Okeh western.

CAST: George Montgomery, Richard Boone, Sylvia Findley, Bruce Bennett, Peter Graves, Warren Stevens, Tony Romano, William Hopper, Leo Gordon, Stanley Clements, Joe Bassett, Leonard Geer, Al Wyatt, Boyd "Red" Morgan. Produced by Robert Goldstein; directed by Sidney Salkow.

STORY: George Montgomery arrives in town and detects outlaw gang leader Peter Graves cheating in a card game with rival gang leader Richard Boone. His fast draw impresses Boone, and he offers him a job. They ride out to a ranch owned by Bruce Bennett, confined to a wheel chair, to ostensibly care for his cattle but in reality to steal them, only to find that Graves and his men have also been hired. Bennett figures that they'll be so busy watching each other that his cattle will be safe. Bennett's sister, Sylvia Findley, arrives from a visit East and doesn't like the situation. Montgomery, a woman-hater, is assigned to keep an eye on her. The two gangs get together and decide to start the rustling, whereupon Montgomery urges her to sell the cattle at any price. She spots a wanted poster on Montgomery for murder. Boone doublecrosses Graves and his men and leaves with the cattle and Findley as hostage. Both Graves and his gang as well as a posse of lawmen take off after Boone. At a hideout, Montgomery is successful in protecting Findley from Boone but decides that he must get her away. Boone spots them leaving and alerts the camp. The shots attract Graves and a gun battle ensues with Boone killing Graves. As Boone is about to kill Montgomery, Findley sets a rockslide in motion, wounding Boone. Before he dies, he confesses to the sheriff, now on the scene, that he raided Montgomery's ranch and killed his wife and that Montgomery was justified in killing members of his gang. Cleared, Montgomery and Findley can now think about the future.

X-RAY: There's lots of action to be found in this western entry, and fans should be satisfied with the result. The story holds interest pretty much throughout, the performances are adequate, and the direction and production efficient so that the end result emerges as an entry that can round out the program where westerns are appreciated. The screen play is by John O'Dea, Sidney Salkow, Maurice Geraghty, based on a novel by Zane Grey. Songs heard include "This Is The Night," "I Turned It Down," and "Robber's Roost," all sung by Tony Romano. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "He Had To Be Quick With A Gun To Get Out Of 'Robber's Roost'"; "Rival Outlaw Gangs Battle For A Single Prize . . . The Result Rapid-Paced Action"; "Roaring Guns Ruled 'Robber's Roost'."

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller for the art spots.

CAST: Mehtab, Sohrab Modi, Mubarak, Ulhas, Ramsingh, Sapru, Baby Shika, Anil Kishore, Gloria Gasper, Kamalakant, Michael Shea, Marconi, Nayampalli, Shakila. Produced and directed by Sohrab M. Modi.

STORY: In the middle of the last century, the British East India Company has gained control of a major part of India. The Indian state of Jhansi has still retained its independence as Mubarak becomes the new king. He is a widower and an heir to the throne is a necessity if Jhansi is to remain out of British control. Sohrab Modi, the power behind the throne, canvasses India for a bride for Mubarak, and finally selects a belligerent nine-year-old girl. She marries the king and her training and education begin. After 10 years she becomes the queen and gives birth to a son. The son dies as does the king and a new heir is selected. The British now try to annex Jhansi, and Queen Mehtab pledges to defend her land. When a mob riots and massacres British soldiers, Mehtab is blamed. In retailiation the British army marches upon Jhansi. The besieged fortress stands for 14 days, but finally falls when a traitor allows the enemy to enter its walls. Mehtab flees to Kalpi where she reorganizes her forces and meets the British on the battlefield. The Indians fight fiercely and are almost victorious, but when English reinforcements arrive, Mehtab is finally killed.

X-RAY: This entry will make unusual entertainment for art and specialty spots. Filmed in India, the picture contains abundant amounts of action in the form of battle scenes. An exotic effect is added by the use of location photography, traditional costumes and pageantry, as well as a legendary plot. Production and photography are good with acting and direction being adequate. Screen play by Geza Herczeg, Pandit Sudershan, Adi F. Keeka.

AD LINES: "A Cast Of Twenty-Five Thousand In This First Indian Technicolor Extravaganza"; "Out Of Mysterious India Comes This Story Of A Courageous Heroine, Fighting Side By Side With Men To Keep Her Country Free"; "The Tale Of A Queen Who Led Her Armies In A Life And Death Battle."

ESTIMATE: Psychological drama has angles.

CAST: Jose Ferrer, June Allyson, Joy Page, Kendall Clark, Isabel Bonner, Jay Barney, Somer Alberg, Ed Platt, Dick Benedict, Will Kuliva, Martin Newman, Billy Greene. Produced by Aaron Rosenberg; directed by Jose Ferrer.

STORY: Broadway stage director Jose Ferrer is brought to a city hospital following a suicide attempt and is comforted by his estranged wife, June Allyson. He tells his story during interviews with staff psychiatrists, and reveals that he would rather not go back to Allyson. It seems that she had a role in his first play, and they fell in love and were married after the critics hailed him as a new genius in the theatre. She takes more and more of an aggressive interest in his plays when she receives no more roles, and he has a number of failures. Things get better as she becomes pregnant but a miscarriage results and nature decrees she can not have any more children. Her possessiveness over Ferrer and his activities increases while he becomes more resentful. He meets unknown actress Joy Page and gives her a part in a play that is a flop. They become better acquainted as she builds his ego, contrary to Allyson tearing it down. When Allyson suggests taking a job in her father's store in New England, he walks out to live alone and sees Page more frequently. Realizing he is getting nowhere personally and artistically, he tries suicide. He is convinced that in order to get out, he must give the answers that the doctors seek and must tell them he will return to Allyson, who must sign him out. The psychiatrist talks to Allyson and suggests that she ought to get some mental help as some of Ferrer's situations might be due to her. When he gets out, she tells him he is free to go his way and that she regrets her actions. He is affected by her remorse and hopes that the future may be better for them as they head for home together.

X-RAY: Based on a play that had considerable success both on Broadway and elsewhere, this dramatic entry has much to offer discriminating moviegoers. Ferrer turns in a fine job as the lead with mental problems, and Allyson, too, adds to the lustre of the offering, although viewers are accustomed to seeing her in other types of roles. The story is not a pleasant one, but there is a certain amount of fascination to be found here as well as some revelations as to the proceedings and inhabitants of psycho wards in municipal hospitals. The dircetion is good and the production also in the better category. The screen play is by Ketti Fringe, based on the play by Joseph Kramm.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates in many situations.

AD LINES: "The Challenging Pulitzer Prize Play Brings Its Startling Intimacy To The Screen"; "A Film Built To Shock Viewers"; "Was She Good Or All Bad . . . Only One Man Could Answer And He Dared Not."

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller has names and entertainment angles.

CAST: John Wayne, Lana Turner, David Farrar, Lyle Bettger, Tab Hunter, James Arness, Richard Davalos, John Qualen, Paul Fix, Lowell Gilmore, Luis Van Rooten, Alan Hale, Wilton Graff, Peter Whitney, Claude Akin, John Doucette, Alan Lee. Produced and directed by John Farrow.

STORY: Captain John Wayne, former German Navy officer, is in command of an old freighter, the Ergenstrasse, tied up in Sydney in 1939 on the eve of World War II. The ship is short of coal, food, etc., and getting little aid from the Australians about replenishing same. War is declared between the British Empire and Nazi Germany and aboard is Nazi spy Lana Turner, engaged to British officer David Farrar, friend of Wayne's who forces her to break it off on threat of exposure. Also aboard is Lyle Bettger, Naval Intelligence operative and ship officer. Wayne eludes his pursuers and makes for Valpariso after stopping off to raid a shipwreck station for food, where Bettger murders some stranded seamen, and to pick up wood on shores of deserted islands. There is friction between the crew and Wayne and eventually he and Turner fall in love. Sharks and rats attack crew members and there are accidents, but eventually the ship makes port and all are welcomed as heroes for eluding the British Navy. Farar's vessel arrives soon after, and Farrar calls Wayne a murederer. Farrar gets transferred to a North Sea patrol vessel to watch for Wayne, who starts homeward. With the shores of Norway close by, Wayne has his crew abandon ship as Farrar opens fire. Wayne and Turner remain aboard, as does Bettger against his will, and he is killed by an exploding shell, with the ship flying the Imperial flag instead of the Nazi swastika. The crew brings Farrar the log which shows Wayne is innocent of the accused murder, and whether or not Wayne and Turner survive and reach shore is a matter of conjecture.

X-RAY: There are those who may scoff at the thought of accepting John Wayne as a German sea captain and Lana Turner as an international spy, while others will accept it wholeheartedly. Whatever the belief, the film still packs quite a bit of entertainment possibilities. The story holds interest although the unreeling time is a bit long, and the cast is efficient in its roles, the direction and production in the good category. With a little selling, it could rise above the average in returns. The screen play is by James Warner Bellah and John Twist, based on the novel by Andrew Geer.

WESTERN
83M.

(Color by WarnerColor)

ESTIMATE: Okeh western.

CAST: Randolph Scott, Dorothy Malone, Peggie Castle, Bill Ching, John Baragrey, Robert Barrat, John Dehner, Paul Richards, Lane Chandler, Mickey Simpson, Joe Bassett, Charles Watts, Russ Conway. Produced by David Weisbart; directed by Lesley Selander.

STORY: Randolph Scott returns to seek revenge on Robert Barrat, owner of a huge ranch, for wrongs inflicted by him which broke up his romance with Dorothy Malone, Barrat's daughter. Scott intends to kill the old man fairly. He runs across saloon owner John Baragrey, who is after Barrat's lands, his sheriff appointee Mickey Simpson, his hired gun hand Paul Richards, and singer Peggie Castle, who is also Baragrey's girl. Baragrey asks Scott to join his force but is turned down. Scott learns from lawyer John Dehner that Barrat doesn't legally own the land and that a marshal will throw it open to the public. He rescues Bill Ching from being killed by irate townspeople, and learns that he is married to Malone. Ching is charged with the murder of one of the men actually shot by Scott, but he is unable to intercede at the hearing. Richards kills Ching. The word gets out that Scott shot him, but he forces the sheriff to tell the truth. Scott is asked for a showdown by Barrat in a darkened and deserted cabin, and he wounds the old man, after which he learns that he has become half-blind. Scott breaks with Dehner, who switches to Baragrey, and when the Barrat land is thrown open to the public, Baragrey and Dehner try to claim unfairly the best section. Scott, in a showdown, kills both and turns over the land to Barrat, who apologizes for past actions while Malone and Scott realize that it's still not too late for a life together.

X-RAY: Where other Randolph Scott western have done well, this, too, should join the parade for it has many of the same ingredients including lots of gunplay, fistic action, riding, and slightly different situations storywise. The cast is adequate and the production and direction are efficient. The screen play is by Joseph Hoffman, based on the novel by Norman A. Fox.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

ESTIMATE: Interesting English programmer.

CAST: Odile Versois, David Knight, Joseph Tomelty, Paul Carpenter, Theodore Bikel, Jill Adams, David Kossoff, John McClaren, Betty Marsden, Peter Illing, Peter Dyneley, Bernard Rebel. Produced by Anthony Havelock-Allen; directed by Anthony Asquith.

STORY: David Knight, an American working in the Embassy in London, attends a ballet and meets Odile Versois. Friendship ripens into love. At one of their secret meetings, Versois discovers that Knight is attached to the U. S. Embassy and tells him that she is the daughter of David Kossoff, minister of one of the Iron Curtain countries. When Versois returns home, she learns her movements have been reported and is forbidden to see Knight again. American Intelligence has learned of phone conversations between Versois and Knight and is suspicious. Versois informs Knight that they must never see each other again. Weeks go by and encouraged by a chance meeting, Knight phones Versois. The call is tapped, and U. S. Embassy officials are convinced that the lovers are engaged in subversive activities. When Kossoff learns that Versois is to have Knight's child, he orders her to return to their country. The lovers are desperate. Knight is arrested by the military police. He escapes and boards the boat train taking Versois out of the country. They elude their pursuers, and, stealing a boat, put out to sea in a strong gale. Unknown to pursuers the boat rides the storm and the lovers are free.

X-RAY: Containing abundant quantities of interest and excitement, this entry can serve as an okeh programmer. The film's somewhat unique story is well handled in performances, direction, and production, the result being a fast moving and appealing drama. Screen play by George Tabori and Robin Estridge. It can go in art and specialty houses or on the lower half in regulated spots.

ESTIMATE: Fair meller for the art spots.

CAST: Jack Hawkins, Elizabeth Allen, Eva Bartok, Derek Farr, Michael Goodliffe, Martin Miller, Walter Fitzgerald, Patricia Marmont, Joseph Tomelty, Jenny Jones, Stephen Vercoe, Helen Haye, Michael Howard, John Stewart, Bruce Beeby, Guy Middleton. Produced by Jay Lewis; directed by Gordon Parry.

STORY: Jack Hawkins, news editor, London Daily World, gets leads on dramatic news stories. The first concerns a foreign atomic scientist who turns out to be a foreign agent. Through the efforts of the World, he is arrested, but this kills the story until charges are made by the authorities. The second deals with Eva Bartok, on trial at the Old Bailey on a charge of mercy-killing of her husband. She is acquitted and as reporter Michael Goodliffe follows her, she is killed in a traffic accident. A third story concerns a group of children made homeless through officialdom's stupidity. They are brought to the newspaper office and adopted by the paper when their mother dies through an accident. Interwoven with these stories is a personal one of Hawkins' domestic worries. He learns that his wife, Elizabeth Allen, has been unfaithful with his assistant, Derek Farr, and is running away. A plane crash is reported with her name on the passenger list. Hawkins is attacked by idealistic reporter Goodliffe on a point of alleged ethics. Hawkins points out the qualities needed in journalism. As Hawkins finally leaves he is met in the hall by Allen, who has missed the plane at the last moment. They embrace, promising to produce a happier understanding.

X-RAY: In an attempt to convey the excitement and dramatics of journalism the entry over does it, thus creating false melodramatics and sentimetality. Slow moving at first, the story picks up speed and finishes with an interesting climax. Performances, direction, and production are satisfactory. Screen play by Jay Lewis and Jack Howells from the novel "Final Night," by Robert Gaines. British cast and accents slot this in art house category.

Three Cases Of Murder

ESTIMATE: Off-beat three-part melodrama for art spots.

CAST: Emrys Jones, John Gregson, Jack Lambert, Philip Dale, Colette Wilde, Christina Forrest, Maurice Kaufmann, Alan Badel, Hugh Pryse, John Salew, Leueen Macgrath, Eddie Byrne, Ann Hanslip, Harry Welchman, Orson Welles, Helen Cherry, Peter Burton, Arthur Wontner, John Humphrey, David Horne, Andre Morell, Zena Marshall, Evelyn Hall. Produced by Ian Dalrymple with Hugh Perceval; "You Killed Elizabeth," directed by David Eady; "In The Picture," directed by Wendy Toye; "Lord Mountdrago," directed by George More O'Ferrall.

STORY: This comprises three independent stories. The first, "In The Picture," deals with a painting of an eerie-looking house by an unknown artist in a museum. Museum guard Hugh Pryse is fascinated by the work and discusses it with mysterious stranger Alan Badel. They agree that a light in the window of the house would improve the painting. Badel takes Pryse into the painting and into the mysterious house. There he finds a woman and a taxidermist, who live with Badel inside the picture. Badel wants that light in the window using Pryse's candle and the taxidermist wants Pryse for a stuffed specimen. A bargain is struck, and in the gallery the scream of Pryse can be heard followed by the appearance of a light in the house in the painting. The second tale, "You Killed Elizabeth," tells of two friends and business partners, Emrys Jones and John Gregson. Gregson is addicted to spells of total mental blackout in which he can remember nothing. Jones falls in love with Elizabeth Sellers, but Gregson takes her away from him. Sellers is found murdered and Gregson has suffered one of his blackout spells. Jones convinces Gregson that during his spell he committed the murder. Gregson accepts this but later finds out that Jones did the killing. Jones pushes Gregson out of a window and calls it suicide. Jones is found out by the police when the murdered girl's bracelet is found upon his person. "Lord Mountdrago" deals with British Foreign Secretary Orson Wells, hated by political rival Alan Badel. Welles suffers from nightmares in which Badel always ridicules him in awkward and undignified situations. Welles discovers that he can control the action in his dreams and that anything that happens to Badel in the dream, happens to the opponent also in real life. Welles kills Badel in a dream, resulting in Badel's actual death. However, Welles continues to see Badel alive.

X-RAY: This film makes for okeh offbeat entertainment. The three episodes are each presented with good acting, direction, and production, and adroitly manage to convey the desired mood. It is suited strictly for the art spots. Screen plays are by Ian Dalrymple, Donald Wilson, and Sidney Carroll, based on "In The Picture" by Roderick Wilkinson, "You Killed Elizabeth" by Brett Halliday, and "Lord Mountdrago" by Somerset Maugham. The title is saleable.

To Paris With Love

COMEDY

ESTIMATE: Guinness draw makes this an art house natural with possibilities elsewhere.

CAST: Alec Guinness, Odile Versois, Vernon Gray, Jacques Francois, Elina Labourdette, Austin Trevor, Claude Romain, Maureen Davis, Jacques Brunius, Pamela Sterling, Mollie Hartley Milburn, Michael Anthony, Andre Mikhelson, Jacques Cey, Nicholas Bruce, Toni Frost. A J. Arthur Rank presentation. Produced by Antony Darnborough; directed by Robert Hamer.

STORY: Widower Alec Guinness, British aristocrat, takes his son, Vernon Gray, to Paris to learn the facts of life. With both father and son trying to get the other romantically involved, Guinness becomes infatuated with young shopgirl Odile Versois, and Gray falls under the spell of mature shop owner Elina Labourette. It becomes necessary for Versois to spend the night in Guinness' apartment, and the resultant confusion gives Guinness the idea that marriage to the charming youngster might not be a bad idea. Guinness' friend, Austin Trevor, gives a country party to which both couples come. Here, Versois sees that perhaps Guinness has passed his prime and is not for her, while Labourdette gracefully bows out of Gray's romantic life as she watches him fall in love with Trevor's daughter, Maureen Davis. Guinness and Gray return to England, but it is apparent that plenty will happen between Guinness and Labourdette.

X-RAY: Guinness fans may find that their hero has been slightly shortchanged here, materialwise, but that should dampen their spirits only slightly. He is so ingratiating a performer and the film so full of charming people and saucy but tasteful situations that its weaknesses are easily forgiven. It shapes up as a natural for art houses, with good possibilities in the general market as well, much in the manner of "Captain's Paradise." The Technicolor tints add considerably to the decor. Screen play is by Robert Buckner.

AD LINES: "Romance Goes On A Mad Holiday In The City Of Lovers"; "Another Guinness Romp That Has The French Blushing"; "Your Favorite Comedian Was Never Funnier."

ESTIMATE: Well-made Korean War documentary for the art spots.

CREDITS: Produced by Rene Risacher; directed by Jacques Dupont.

STORY: A young officer, Gracet, just out of training at the French Military Academy, joins the French Regiment that goes to join the United Nations forces in Korea. Eager and dreaming of glory, he is disillusioned when he is assigned to a communications detachment. He is soon transferred to first line duty in the thick of battle, in charge of a platoon. He tries to win the confidance of his men, but they, hardened soldiers, reject the officer because of his inexperience. Gracet's company is relieved at the front so that they may rest behind the lines. After a time, they are reassigned to action, their first objective to take "Heartbreak Ridge," a hill well fortified with enemy troops and armaments. The ensuing battle is a bloody ordeal, the U.N. forces slowly fighting their way up the hill. The objective is finally taken, but Gracet is severely wounded and is transported to a hospital via helicopter.

X-RAY: The film, in vivid scenes and striking color and photography, portrays the brutal fighting of the Korean War. Intimate details are viewed of the soldiers and the refugees in their war-torn locale. This entry is suited for the art and specialty houses. Perspecta stereophonic sound is available.

AD LINES: "The True Story Of The Korean Conflict At Last Brought To The Screen"; "Two Cameramen Gave Their Lives So That You May View The Battle For 'Heartbreak Ridge'"; "Now You Can See History As It Was Made."

CAST: Stormy, Julianne, Allouette, Shiela Lane, Rita Parker, Collette, Pork Chops and Kidney Stew, Pat Patrick, Gilbert Frye, Jack Brooks, Karla Treme, Montmarte Kitty, The Can Can Chorus. Directed by Sid Baldwin.

STORY: Julianne, a night club entertainer, receives a telegram from her boyfriend telling of his arrival. He is unaware of the nature of her job. At Julianne's club, the show starts off with a comedian telling a few jokes. Shiela Lane does a strip to music. A comedy skit is next. The show continues with Pat Patrick doing a suggestive dance, followed by a tap dancer. A shipwreck comedy skit is next. Allouette then does a breast twirling act. The program continues with Collette in a strip routine. Can Can dancers appear, followed by Rita Parker in an exotic dance. Another comedy skit and strip takes place. The boyfriend arrives at the club and is delighted to see Julianne on stage.

X-RAY: The entry is well suited for houses that play burlesque film and amply displays the talents of the strippers. Good color photography aids the film.

TWO REEL

Comedy

SCRATCH-SCRATCH-SCRATCH. Columbia—All-Star Comedies. 15m. Andy Clyde's nephew, Bob, is made the butt of a practical joke by Si, Jr., who wants to steal his girl. Clyde tells Bob of a similar experience he had years ago, when Clyde and Si, Sr., were courting the same girl. Clyde and Bob plot to turn the tables on Si, Jr., by first inviting him to dinner and then pouring a hive of bees in his pants. FAIR. (7415).

Documentary

OPERATION ICECAP. RKO—Pathe Specials. 19m. This short story tells the story of a scientific expedition that journeyed to the frozen wastelands of Greenland in order to uncover meterological information. The French research team had great difficulty in reaching the cold interior of the largest island in the world. Once there, they received supplies from the air and proceeded to construct shelters out of the ice and to set up prefabricated housing units. Working in 40 below temperatures, they conducted tests and gathered the information necessary in determining the world's future weather conditions. GOOD. (53107).

Color Historical Drama

OLD HICKORY. Warners—Technicolor Specials. 17m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of December, 1939, it was said of this reissue: "In this historical subject, Hugh Sothern portrays the homespun Andrew Jackson, and Victor Kilian does well as the president's backwoods buddy. The story deals with the problem facing Jackson when North Carolina, his home state, threatened secession from the Union, and how "Old Hickory" solved it. Lewis Seiler's fine directional touch is felt throughout. Others in the cast include Nana Bryant, Frank Wilcox and Irving Pichel. EXCELLENT." (2008).

VistaVision Color Travel

VISTAVISION VISITS MEXICO. Paramount—VistaVision Special. Technicolor. 17m. The film leads off in Mexico City where early Aztec architecture is viewed beside modern buildings. Mexico's snow-covered mountains and volcanoes are seen and, at Acapulco, the famous tourist beaches. The Mexico City police display their accuracy in pistol shooting and show off their tricky motorcycle riding. The force also boasts a band equipped with dancers. The oil industry of Mexico is also shown. The VistaVision camera adds considerably in making this short an attractive one. EXCELLENT. (V14-2).

Color Cartoon

BABY BOOGIE. Columbia—UPA Assorted Color Cartoons. 7m. This is the story of a little girl who wants to know where babies come from. When her parents say they come from the hospital, she goes there and picks herself a baby brother. The girl must return the baby, but her mother tells her that she will soon have a baby brother of her own. EXCELLENT. (7504).

CHIP AN' DALE. RKO—Walt Disney Cartoon Re-Releases. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of November, 1947, it was said: "Donald Duck tries to get some sleep in his snow-bound cabin but it is too cold, so he goes out for wood to build a fire. He picks on a log that happens to be the home of Chip an' Dale, two chipmunks, who are annoyed at losing their home and supply of nuts. They proceed to annoy Donald until he is forced to give up the log, and the two carry it off to resume their housekeeping. GOOD." (54108).

CROWING PAINS. Warners—Blue Ribbon Hit Parade Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of August, 1947, it was said: "Henery Hawk, out to conquer his first chicken, gets caught in a three-way scramble with a rooster, a dog, and a cat. Not knowing what a chicken looks like, Henery is the victim of innumerable dupes, with each of the animals out to get revenge on the other. The windup finds the cat the victim when the rooster, employing the use of ventriloquism, makes like a chicken. FAIR." (2309).

THE HOLE IDEA. Warners—Merrie Melodies Cartoons. 7m. A portable hole is invented by a professor. Its uses include rescuing a baby from a safe and providing an easy hiding place for a dog to bury his bones. A villain steals a briefcase filled with these holes and proceeds to create a crime wave. The criminal places a hole against a jewelry store window and reaches in to grab the loot. When he is chased by the law, he throws a hole in their path and they fall in. The villain finally runs out of holes and is caught. EXCELLENT. (2715).

HOUSE HUNTING MICE. Warners—Blue Ribbon Hit Parade Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of October, 1947, it was said: "Hubie and Bertie, two mice looking for a place to live, find an ultra exclusive house of tomorrow, which includes all the latest improvements. They go for the house in a big way at first, but when they examine the more intricate patterns and latest innovations, they soon form another idea. The fade-out finds them scampering away. FAIR." (2308).

MAGOO EXPRESS. Columbia—Mr. Magoo Cartoons. 6m. Mr. Magoo boards a French train accompanied by his dog. A woman spy mistakes Magoo for a member of her gang and slips him a cigar disguised as a bomb. The woman realizes her mistake and tries to use her feminine charms to get the cigar back. Magoo is unimpressed but throws the cigar in the laps of the gang where it explodes. GOOD. (7703).

PICNIC PANIC. Columbia—Color Favorites Reissues. 6m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of June, 1946, it was said: "A boy and a girl are on their way to a picnic in a cart drawn by a mule. When they pass a used car lot, she insists that he trade the mule for a car for better and smoother transportation. The mule is broken-hearted and watches them leave for their picnic on the side of a mountain. Later, the mountain's volcano erupts, and they are almost thrown off a cliff with their automobile when the mule breaks away, and comes to their rescue in the nick of time. FAIR." (7611).

READY, SET, ZOOM. Warners—Merrie Melodies Cartoons. 7m. The speedy desert roadrunner races back and forth across the mountain roads, with the coyote always on his tail. The coyote tries various means to catch the fleeting bird, including using dynamite, traps, and glue. Each idea backfires against the coyote. The coyote at last dresses up as a female roadrunner, but only succeeds in getting the other coyotes on his tail. GOOD. (2716).

SANDY CLAWS. Warners—Merrie Melodies Cartoons. 7m. Granny leaves Tweety bird on a rock at the beach. The tide comes in, marooning the bird and Sylvester the cat. Sylvester attempts to get at the bird through such devices as rod and reel, surfboard, and motor boat. When these efforts fail, the cat takes to a diver's suit which over-inflates, carries him into the air, and lands him in the dog pound. GOOD. (2714).

SH-H-H-H. U-I—Walter Lantz Cartunes. 6m. A trombonist, whose nerves are shattered, is told by his psychiatrist to go away for a long, quiet rest. He goes to a quiet hotel in Switzerland and is just about to go to sleep when sounds of a trombone and laughter emerge from the room next door. Notes and phonecalls are ignored as the laughter and music continue. Finally the desperate man breaks through the connecting door to discover that the psychiatrist and his wife are the noisemakers. EXCELLENT. (1327).

May—Mad At The World—F. Lovejoy, C. O'Donnell

. . . from Rose to rose—
without a hitch
Today, it's color . . . and precision. For example: a lovely girl dissolves to a glowing red rose. In black and white, a simple procedure; in color, a job requiring complete co-ordination of production and processing technics. To aid the industry in areas such as these, the Eastman Kodak Technical Service for Motion Picture Film maintains branches in strategic areas. Inquiries invited.

A STATEMENT TO THE TRADE ABOUT M-G-M's "LOVE ME OR LEAVE ME"

The grapevine from California has proved magnificently right again with the arrival in New York this week of the print of "LOVE ME OR LEAVE ME." Everything you've heard about this turbulent drama, excitingly attuned to today's box-office, is true.

A public Preview was held at Loew's Lexington Theatre, the same place where "Blackboard Jungle" was sneaked. The response was identical. A thrilled, spell-bound audience acclaimed a big, new dramatic hit.

Stories from the lives of real people are potent screen fare. This one pulses with the excitement of a career story that began in a tough dance hall in Chicago's lurid, mob ruled days and ran the glamour-gamut to Hollywood's movie life and Broadway's Ziegfeld Follies.

These elements have been woven into one of the greatest mass entertainments of our time.

VOLUME 54 NUMBER 4

SOMETHING REALLY NEW!

ELSEWHERE IN THIS ISSUE will be found a three page announcement and description of the bright new $5200-per-year SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES that will start with our issue of July 7. But the fourth and last page is also significant. Down through the last 37 years, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has brought more originality and fresh approach into trade paper service than any contemporary. Each of the claimed "FIRSTS" itemized on the fourth page can be substantiated by FACTS.

Weekly cash prizes from a trade paper for the cream of the showmanship ideas and promotions, is another "FIRST." Exclusive just now, past experience would indicate that it will eventually be copied. Down through the last 37 years, it is this copying of departments and of services as originated and introduced by MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR that has resulted in most trade papers following the same general departmental and service style. But it is that little bit more Theatre Knowledge, and that little bit closer Theatre Contact that has enabled MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR to set the pace.

Want to watch who is THE FIRST to copy this new "FIRST"?

THE COSTS OF MORALITY

THE INDUSTRY is certainly being treated to a close-up view of the rich rewards that are possible from a constant expounding of high-sounding moral tenets, if the expounder is not averse to a quiet reward.

It is being rumored that one of the major film distributors has handed over a juicy "reward" to an expounder, who was able to service two of its more "adult" productions so that they could get a Legion of Decency "B" rating. The importance of such a "service" can be judged from the report that the current "reward" runs into five figures.

Whether the price was a bargain will depend on the national gross of these two percentage pictures. But, as a bit of advice to the distribution executive who made the investment, we might point out that for a similar "service," on a much more controversial picture, another major film distributor was able to accomplish a similar result through the reward of only a personal emblem of appreciation.

Naturally, our prime interest is that the costs of such "service," however well concealed, must be paid; and it is the theatreman, who had nothing to do with either the making of the pictures or their moral tone, who will eventually pay the piper through higher percentage terms. And it is also the theatreman who will need to face his local clergymen when they complain about pictures that, while not "C" or condemned, contain what one interested clergyman recently termed "morally offensive material."

In our opinion, both such services and such rewards should be aired for the good of the theatreman and of the industry as a whole.

GIVING THINGS AWAY IS NOT SHOWMANSHIP

WHEN YOU GET right down to it, the operation of a theatre is very much like any other kind of retail store, except that we have only one product to sell, a couple of hours of entertainment. But we, and all other retail stores, share the same objectives of making a living and a return on investment.

How these objectives can be accomplished by giving product away for free, and regardless of the gimmicks of confection sales, package deals, companion admissions, etc., is a mystery to us, as well as it must be to the butcher, the baker, and the candle stick maker, who have been unable to do it for centuries before this industry began.

From many different sources across the country we have before us actual samples of "showmanship" on the part of drive-in theatres that seem to be more aptly described as stupidity and economic suicide. In one

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

All Unsolicited

(The letters from readers of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR which appear on this page are all unsolicited.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR does not suggest questions to readers in order to provide a flow of letters to the publication.—Editor)

Dear Sir:

There is only one true wide-screen medium of the motion picture screen, and that is CinemaScope! The aspect ratio of CinemaScope is ideal for both indoor and outdoor theatres. Paramount's VistaVision rates high for clear photo definition. However, we can not subscribe to the plan of providing a picture of tremendous height. A lot of your key first-run theatres are projecting regular standard prints on screen so high above the stage that patrons sitting in the rear section of the orchestra floor suffer from cropped viewing.

CinemaScope has been accepted by the theatre attending public. CinemaScope alone will not save your theatre from loosing patronage! It still takes plenty of hard selling on the part of the entire motion picture industry. You know, for years I worked with theatre chains throughout the New England area. This employment taught me plenty of lessons in theatre management. It also taught me a lesson in economic frustration. This economic frustration involved the saving of money and the operating of a theatre as cheap as possible. Well sir, this saving of money in theatre operation became an obsession with management. Theatres became run down, the management could not afford to purchase a can of paint for renovation purposes. Executive and junior executive personnel were changed as often as management changed their underwear.

This is not the way to attract business! And you can not attract patronage via the poverty pitch. People do not want to hear of all your economic troubles. People want to know what you are offering in the way of entertainment; is the theatre clean and comfortable? And patrons want the new look in motion picture presentation!

About a year and one-half ago, I went into theatre exhibition on a shoe string investment. The wise guys in the industry said, "Jarvis, we will give you six whole months!" In a year and one half, we have been very, very successful. Of course, we have not become millionaires to date. But, at least we are making progress toward gaining more and more patronage.

We ain't worried about toll-TV. We are truthfully against the system in the public interest. And we keep our eye open to the day when we can take over another theatre under lease, purchase, or percentage basis. There is nothing wrong with our business but good old showmanship. There are millions of invisible people standing in line waiting until the day when we open the doors of our theatre with a smile and say, "Step right in and enjoy the mighty monarch of entertainment!"

We have the tools . . . we should begin the showmanship job!!

Dear Sir:

Your editorial on "The Noose Hangs High" (April 27) caught my attention for two reasons. First, because Abbott and Costello made a picture of that name in 1948. Secondly, because it was an excellent piece of hard headed and realistic thinking. All the best to you.

MPE Editorials On Bingo Draw Press Attention

One of the more serious problems confronting theatremen is the competition created by the wholesale operation of Bingo parlors in localities where theatres have been denied the right to use the game as an attendance booster.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, in a recent series of editorials on Bingo generally as a competitor, and the city of Reading as a specific Pennsylvania example, has attempted to throw the light of publicity on the situation. We emphasize again that the campaign is not an attack on Bingo, per se, but a questioning of the wide open nature of the game's operation, not always tied up with charitable fund raising, in a state that has never legalized such activity.

This entire file of editorials, including "The Strange Position Of Bingo," Feb. 16; "Try This On For Size," March 30; and "What Movies Means To Amusement Taxes," April 6, as well as correspondence with the state capitol which proved little beside the fact that no official in Harrisburg is anxious to comment on the Bingo situation or its legality, was forwarded to John M. Cummings, columnist with the powerful Philadelphia Inquirer.

Cummings thought the material of sufficient interest to devote his entire editorial page column on May 16 to the problem, referring to Reading as "Little Las Vegas." Four Reading theatres are dark, while countless holes-in-the-wall lure Bingo fanciers in that city, he pointed out.

Nothing spurs political action like public opinion, and nothing creates public opinion like press attention. Thank you, John Cummings, for thinking this situation of sufficient importance to warrant such extensive attention.

—THE EDITOR.

competitive eastern situation a clever "showman" is wowing the opposition with three 50-cents-a-car nights each week, apparently forgetting that price cutting can set up a chain reaction and is not patentable as his exclusive property. In another situation, each printed weekly program contains a merchant sponsored pass for one car useable on any week night, apparently forgetting that his competition is also free to "paper" his house, and with a good offset printer handy could even do a mass "repapering" for the guy who starts it.

We are also told of trailer copy that advertises, "Every Tuesday Night Is Ladies Night," which means that the first 100 ladies get in FREE, and 24 pairs of nylon stockings are given away FREE, too. And to become even more ridiculous, FREE coffee and donuts will be served to each and every lady. Or there is the other trailer that designates, "Every Wednesday Is FREE Car Night," which means that on that night the name of some one make of car will be drawn and the first 100 cars of that make, complete with driver, will be admitted FREE.

Newspaper ads before us show, "FREE Pizza Pies from Opening Time to Show Time"; "Lucky Car Nite . . . all cars and drivers of this make admitted FREE"; "Bakeware . . . FREE with all adult admissions"; "Dishes FREE"; "Children . . . FREE"; "Lollypops and balloons . . . FREE"; and FREE this, and FREE that, all over the place.

And all of this on top of two features at all times, playgrounds, kiddie rides, and CinemaScope.

Of course, it all seems to add up to saturation being reached in drive-ins. But how you bank FREE business, or how you pay the film companies, the employes or the supply dealer with it, is a major mystery. It is a situation that must resemble that old story about the fellow who constantly sold under cost so that he lost money, but "did a helluva lot of business!"

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

Spring Doldrums Hit

NEW YORK—Business was off considerably in the Broadway first-runs over the weekend due to the spring-like weather and the fact that most spots were winding up long runs.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount was down to $40,000 on the fifth week.

"Daddy Long Legs" (20th-Fox). Roxy reported $23,531 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the third week down to an expected $40,000.

"Interrupted Melody" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, claimed $81,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the third and last week anticipated at $121,000.

"The Far Horizons" (Paramount). Criterion hoped for a $26,000 opening week.

"Revenge Of The Creature" (U-I). Globe will be lucky if it takes in $6,000 on the second week.

"Violent Saturday" (20th-Fox). Mayfair dropped to $12,000 on the second week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor fell off to an $11,000 11th week.

"Strange Lady In Town" (Warners). Victoria perked up, doing $28,000 on the opening week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol expected the second week to drop to $32,000.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State was down to $14,000 on the 10th week.

EFFG Progress Slowed

NEW YORK—It was reported last week that national circuit executives are cautiously weighing the legality of investment by divorced theatre companies in the Exhibitors Film Finance Group without authorization from the Department of Justice which, to date, has declined to give a definite "yes" or "no" to the clearance sought by Theatre Owners of America. Government attorneys seek assurance, it is said, that the circuits, regardless of their buying power, would receive no special privileges with product sponsored by EFFG.

The meeting scheduled for EFFG stockholders to elect directors and officers and to plan assistance to independent production aimed at helping to ease the product shortage has been cancelled, with no new date set. Projected meetings across the country to invite subscription also have been postponed.

Sam Pinanski, head, American Theatres, Boston, one of the founders of EFFG, stated there is no need for haste in holding a stockholders' meeting, inasmuch as the organization is being built for a long, basic operation and is meeting with considerable support everywhere.

Pete Smith has been selected by the Publicists Guild as recipient of its third annual Tom Tom Award which goes to a man who started his Hollywood career as a press agent, and gone on to fame, prestige, and importance in the industry. Smith is producer of the Pete Smith Specialties for MGM, and has received over 150 awards, including three Oscars and a MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR LAUREL AWARD. The award will be made at a luncheon on June 8.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

ARRIVAL: Ernest K. Gann, author of both the novel and screenplay, "Soldier Of Fortune," which 20th-Fox is releasing, arrived here for some promotional work on the film. This chap, who also authored "The High And The Mighty," was paid $50,000 for "Fortune," which stars Clark Gable, with more to come as soon as receipts start coming in on the film. He stands to make quite a bundle should it be the success anticipated.

KONECOFF

He feels that it is about time that writers have been recognized as creative artists and paid accordingly with a percentage of the proceeds if the end result is successful. A writer should be prepared to stand or fall by his work. He had approval of cast, except for Gable, whom he felt was ideal for the title role, with Gable, incidentally, also in for a percentage of the film.

Gann likes having his books wind up on the screen and adapting for this medium, and he thinks that he might like to take a crack at directing in the future. He was pleased with the fine results achieved by "The High And The Mighty" but disappointed with those on "Island In The Sky," which he felt was handicapped by poor selling and promotion.

Presently he is working on a novel of sailing ships in the 1920's entitled "Twilight Of The Gods," but no deal has been set as yet for this one. Come summer, he expects to sail a schooner he purchased in Rotterdam to Los Angeles and film the voyage for release as a travelogue.

With regard to public tastes, he feels that the average reader and moviegoer is much smarter than he is given credit for and that the story in a film is its most

TOA, Allied To Decide On Other Means Of Relief; AA, Republic Are Commended For Acceptance, Understanding

NEW YORK—In a joint press release last week, E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, and Rube Shor, president, Allied States Association, expressed regret that most film company heads had rejected their bid for an all-industry conference of May 24 to discuss exhibitors' problems.

The executives reiterated that there was no intention of discussing individual company sales policies, "the veil under which the invitations were declined," calling the action short-sighted. They warned that they cannot now be criticized for using other methods to obtain relief following the joint committee of Allied-TOA meeting in New York this week, when it will be decided whether committee members will meet with film executives individually or seek Federal legislation regarding exhibitors' problems.

Shor stated that four rejections had been received by him at the time of the press release from Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox; Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's; Milton Rackmil, U-I; and Barney Balaban, Paramount. Balaban, in declining, said that assurances in the invitation about sales policy were self-contradictory. Shor and Martin thanked Herbert Yates, president, Republic, and Steve Broidy, Allied Artists' head, for their prompt acceptance and understanding.

Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), who was recently approached by Allied general counsel Abram F. Myers and Allied defense committee chairman Benjamin Berger, said he felt sure that a Senate subcommittee would hold hearings on the current situation of film exhibitors if Allied and other groups want them. The Senator said he had not yet been asked to introduce a specific bill calling for Federal film industry regulation, as proposed by Allied, nor does he expect to introduce such a bill at present, but that the hearings can be held without a specific bill. He added that the forceful presentation of the situation by Allied officials made him think a Congressional committee hearing worthwhile, although he had not yet heard the other side of the story.

RKO Circuit Cancels "Sinbad"

NEW YORK—A spokesman for the RKO Theatres home office recently reported that the circuit had permanently cancelled all out-of-town bookings for RKO's "Son Of Sinbad."

After many revisions, the film finally received a Production Code Administration seal, but was then placed by the National Legion of Decency on the "Condemned," or C-rating, list, and it has been the RKO theatre's policy not to show films so classified. The spokesman said no deal has been negotiated for the picture in the circuit's New York houses.

Phillips, Novins Promoted In Paramount Shuffle

NEW YORK—It was announced last fortnight that Louis Phillips has been appointed general counsel of Paramount Pictures, following a meeting of the board of directors, and that Louis A. Novins was elected secretary of the company. The late Austin C. Keough held both posts at the time of his death on April 20.

Phillips is a member of the New York law firm Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin, and Krim, and entered the industry as executive secretary and general counsel for the New York Film Board of Trade. He joined Paramount late in the '20s and has been assistant general counsel for some time.

Novins is a former assistant attorney general of Massachusetts. He joined Paramount in 1946 and has served as assistant to the president, and in other official capacities.

O'Donnell Favors Conference

NEW YORK—Robert J. O'Donnell, vice-president and general manager, Texas Interstate Theatres, said last week that the proposed roundtable conference attempted by Theatre Owners of America and National Allied is essential.

He expressed regret that film company heads had declined the invitation to talk with the exhibitors at the May 24 roundtable and said it was "wonderful" that TOA and Allied are "seeing eye to eye" on so many important issues. He added that there was no question in his mind that distribution "has been milking the theatres by asking exorbitant rentals."

Since last September, the circuit head said Texas Interstate has presented five top pictures and has not made a profit on any of them. He pointed out that many top pictures allow the exhibitor only six to seven per cent profit, and that average films are usually not money makers.

Seattle Seeks Censorship

SEATTLE—The Seattle Board of Theatre Supervisors was authorized last week to act as a censor board for motion pictures by a resolution passed by the board of King County Commissioners.

Complaints were received from rural patrons, parent-teacher, and Catholic groups because "Garden Of Eden" was shown without an "adults only" restriction.

TOA, Allied Merger Forecast By Reade

NEW YORK—Walter Reade, chairman of the board, TOA last week disclosed the strong possibility of a merger between TOA and National Allied. Reade said that such a merger will be welcomed by his group as a step towards strengthening the exhibitor's position in this country. The consolidation would gain greater respect and attention for the industry. It was announced that joint action between TOA and Allied was conducive towards such a merger and that the two groups have already had exploratory talks concerning the topic.

Reade, who recently returned from a trip through France and England, was highly critical of relations between American distributors and exhibitors. He pointed out that European industry representatives do not have the same problem, since distributors and exhibitors of that continent are always willing to sit down and discuss important matters. It is inconceivable to Italian and French exhibitors that such a situation should exist. Reade echoed the views of the European exhibitors by stating that in his opinion it is unreasonable under any conditions for heads of companies not to be willing to sit down with exhibition representatives, regardless of legal entanglements. Should legal entanglements arise no one will be obligated, since the discussion would cover broad topics that do not have binding qualities attached to them.

In regard to foreign films, Reade stated that a growing market exists in the U.S. for imports. There is a weakening of American audience resistance towards foreign films. Furthermore, with film shortages a current problem in this country, the time seems right for importation of productions. The opinion was expressd that the important thing to audiences is the quality of the picture and not where it was made.

Reade, who attended the Cannes Film Festival while in Europe, put forth the idea that a similar festival in the U.S. would aid the industry by supplying publicity that is greatly needed at this time. Comments on American attendance in the Cannes Festival took the form of praise, with Reade revealing his gratification at the conduct of the American during the festival.

Makelim Names Three Directors

HOLLYWOOD—Hal R. Makelim, originator of the Makelim Plan, and president, Makelim Pictures, Inc., announced recently that C. A. Dandelake, Tarboro, N. C., owner, Colonial and Tar, and president, Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina; Hugh Thomas, Jr., Sarasota, Fla., business executive and owner, Siesta Drive-In Theatres; and Jack Jackson, Houston, Tex., editorial columnist, have been elected to the board of Makelim Pictures, Inc.

The company recently announced that it was ready to begin.

AB-PT To Expand; Earnings Increasing

NEW YORK—Answering questions at the annual stockholders' meeting and at a press conference afterwards in the Sheraton Astor Hotel, Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., revealed plans to acquire additional theatres "in growing and profitable areas" once the consent decree's divestiture is completed. Local situations are already being surveyed, with interest in both four-wall houses and drive-ins, he said.

Earnings to date in 1955, his report said, are well ahead of those for the comparable period last year, and the improvement in theatre business continues, although second quarter earnings are seasonably weak because of a lack of good pictures.

Goldenson pointed out that the company has nothing in its Justice Department consent decree to prohibit feature film production. If the product shortage should continue and production were undertaken, he said AB-PT would act strictly on its own account and not participate in the Exhibitors Film Finance Group or any similar film financing organization. He added that his trip abroad last year to stimulate European production for the U.S. market had been successful in increasing the availability of Italian product, and that German and Swedish films would soon be arriving.

Earnings for ABC will be substantially higher in the second quarter of this year than in the comparable period of 1954, the stockholders learned. The TV network is making particularly good progress for the fall season, with time sales already exceeding the network total for all of last year. The broadcasting division, too, is well ahead of its standing last year.

Concerning AB-PT entry into the phonograph record field, Goldenson said that the company would most likely form its own subsidiary in such a venture, rather than purchase an established organization. In the electronics field, another subject of inquiry, the president referred to the company's one-third interest in Microwave Associates, manufacturers of various electronic devices, which has sufficient capital available without further financing, and that Western Union's entry on a one-third basis is expected to accelerate its growth. Microwave sales last year were close to $1,500,000, he said.

Goldenson also revealed that the company's theatre operating subsidiaries have largely joined in opposition to the toll-TV proposal, and that the ABC division will oppose it in the proceedings before the Federal Communications Commission.

TOA Hails Conciliation As Arbitration Progress

NEW YORK—A Theatre Owners of America bulletin received by members last fortnight advised that exhibitors may go into conciliation on any matter, including film rental, under the agreement reached by the arbitration negotiators. If the exhibitor is not satisfied with the decision of a branch manager on his stated grievance, he will now have the opportunity to appeal to the sales manager, although the distributor will not be compelled to grant relief except where a violation of law is concerned.

The distributors, however, still refuse adamantly to arbitrate film rentals, but if the exhibitor fails to get conciliation in most matters, he can then resort to arbitration, the bulletin said, contending that conciliation will be helpful if the distributors take an understanding approach to the problems of exhibition. Progress in arbitration, TOA members were told, has been good but slow; slow because TOA seeks the broadest interpretation of arbitratable matters, while distribution wants to have it as narrow as possible.

Ad Series Praised

NEW YORK—The 44th in the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher which appeared last week, features the ads published in the New York Journal-American to encourage movie attendance. The Journal-American ads all carry the caption, "Only At The Movies Can You Enjoy Entertainment Without Interruption."

"Like us," says the COMPO ad, "the publishers of the New York Journal-American apparently are convinced that it is important that people should go out of their homes and seek entertainment in theatres. . . . When one of America's most famous newspapers goes to such lengths to encourage theatre attendance, it should be obvious that greater theatre attendance is important. At any rate, we are grateful to the Journal-American for giving such dramatic proof to what we have said so often—that newspapers should do everything possible to foster more attendance at movie theatres."

Top Exhibitor Campaigns Saluted With Cash As 260 Boxoffice Champions Will Be Offered Annually

PHILADELPHIA—With the announcement this week of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR's "Showmanship Sweepstakes" (see pages 19 to 22) the "Better Management" department of the publication takes on added impetus. It also should reach deep into the advertising, exploitation, and publicity consciousness of theatremen and create greater interest than ever before obtained by any trade publication in the motion picture field.

In its practical application "Showmanship Sweepstakes" is designed not only to give financial remuneration to go-getters among the vast number of industry ballyhoo artists, but also, in write-ups about the five best stunts of the week, to have them adapted and used by many, many theatres, particularly those not having high-priced exploiteers or publicists on their payrolls.

The stunts and campaigns will be aimed solely for exhibitors and will be applicable for use in any situation. This is no time for selfishness in the face of diminishing boxoffice returns. Except for the prize winners, we shall all share and share alike.

In future issues of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR's Better Management, along with its incentive giving "Showmanship Sweepstakes," we shall endeavor to help exhibitors out with "selling the product." All of the 260 stunts submitted annually, along with the 52 winners, will be yours for the trying.

Too long have many small operators been complacently putting up stock fronts, and then sitting back and waiting for the people to rush in when the boxoffice opens. These same fellows, locking the doors at night and counting diminishing receipts, wonder what's wrong with business.

We believe that lack of incentive is what is wrong; and we are out to prove it with the selling angles that are sure to be unearthed in "Showmanship Sweepstakes."

Get in on it at the start!

"Marty" Tops Cannes Films

CANNES—For the first time, last fortnight a United States entry won the Golden Palm grand prize at the annual Cannes International Film Festival. The Hecht-Lancaster production of "Marty," released by United Artists, received a special jury citation crediting the combined talents of Paddy Chayevsky, script writer; Delbert Mann, director; and the film's stars, Betsy Blair and Ernest Borgnine.

Two more grand prizes went to American entries, which made a notably strong showing. Warners' "East Of Eden" won a citation as the best dramatic picture viewed at the festival, with Elia Kazan receiving special mention for masterful direction and excellent performances from the cast. The male acting award went to Spencer Tracy for his performance in MGM's "Bad Day At Black Rock."

Adult Film Themes Creates Censor Problem

TORONTO—One out of every five pictures submitted to the Board of Censors of the Province of Ontario was either treated or rated by the board.

In submitting his report to The Theatres Branch and Board of Censors, Ontario Treasury Department, O. J. Silverthorne, chairman, said there is an "evident tendency" on the part of producers to emphasize "distinctly adult content and a decrease of interest by them in full length pictures suitable for the whole family."

This tendency made necessary the censoring or classifying as adult entertainment 21 per cent of the films submitted, says the report, but only one feature film, a documentary of African tribal life, was rejected in its entirety.

Also indicated in the report was the closure of five per cent of the licensed theatres in the province through what is described as "obsolescence." The theatres were financially unable to keep up the trend towards wider screen processes and the "consequent modernization."

The report points out that while this was a "relatively small number" of theatre operators, it was "noteworthy on account of the steady growth during the last decade" of the theatre industry in the province.

Noted especially in the report is the decrease in the number of films submitted from the U.S. and "strikingly large" increase in the number of features from foreign countries. In all, 522 features were submitted to censor, of which 306 were from the U.S., 77 from Great Britain, 80 from Italy, and 28 from west Germany.

The decline in number of U.S. films is explained through the trend towards wider screen processes; "feature subjects were longer and they commanded greater expenditures of money, talent, and attention."

Just six theatre operators were prosecuted during the year for failure to provide matrons to take care of children and the licenses of seven projectionists were suspended for various infractions.

Silverthorne pointed out that the British board of film censors has rejected six Hollywood features in their entirety in 18 months, and has issued a warning "that crime, violence, and passion must be toned down in future films." Improvement also is "likely," the report adds, because following this, the directors of the Motion Picture Association of America met to discuss imposition of a stricter production code.

"Theatre management cooperated in an appreciable manner in the enforcement of departmental regulations with respect to advertising of classified entertainment," the report concludes. "There were 9,200 bookings of adult entertainment; on 247 occasions only did management fail to comply with requirements in this respect."

Canadian Comment

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the government-owned broadcasting company in this country, turned down pay-as-you-see TV for its use in this country. A. Davidson Dunton, chairman, board of governors, CBC, said that both from the technical and financial points of view it would be impractical. It was pointed out to a government Parliamentary committee that the CBC was experimenting neither in toll nor color TV at present.

Toronto will be the scene of the annual meeting of the National Committee of Motion Picture Exhibitors Associations in Canada, Monday, Oct. 31. The following two days, Nov. 1-2, will be devoted to the annual meeting of the Motion Picture Industry Council of Canada, which will gather in the same hall as the NCMPEAC. The annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario will be Oct. 26. The trade fair, which was held during the past two conventions, will be dropped this year because space wasn't available.

U-I World-Wide Meet Draws International Execs

BARCELONA — The Universal-International sales conference got under way last week with the arrival of home office and studio executives to meet with supervisors, branch managers, distributors, and publicity heads from four continents. The U.S. representatives were led by president Milton R. Rackmil; executive vice-president Alfred E. Daff, also president, Universal-International Films; and Americo Aboaf, vice-president and foreign general manager.

Foreign publicity director Fortunat Baronat, already in town for two weeks, remained for the conference, together with Far Eastern supervisor Arthur Doyle, and Latin American supervisor Al Lowe.

Daff announced the winners of the recently completed 1955 Daff Drive. Individual territories competition winner was Mexico, managed by Alfredo Helquin, with Chile in second place under Raul Viances, and Denmark placing third under manager Knud Jorgenson.

In the divisional race, Latin America was first, under Lowe. In a sales drive held on J. Arthur Rank product distributed by U-I in the Philippines and Latin America, Mexico and Chile again placed first and second, with Brazil third.

Southeastern Film Festival Opens With Accent On Super Showmanship

ATLANTA—The month-long Southeastern Film Festival got underway last week, with production, distribution, and exhibition working together to promote a tri-state saturation release for new product from five companies, opening with MGM's "The Prodigal," and continuing with 20th-Fox's "Daddy Long Legs," Allied Artists' "Shotgun" and "An Annapolis Story," Warners' "The Sea Chase," and Republic's "The Eternal Sea."

At the Biltmore Hotel, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Georgia and the Alabama Theatre Association met with the Florida Theatre Owners Association in a two-day convention. Mayors from 50 towns in the three states, with reporters and newspaper editors, joined in the exhibitors' promotion; Sunday papers in Atlanta, Birmingham, and Jacksonville carried major articles, with radio-TV spots to follow up, in addition to trailers, window cards, posters, mats, recordings, and other material. T. L. Shearer, board chairman, Theatre Equipment Dealers Association, announced that his executive director, Ray C. Colvin, will address business, civic, and other groups in the area during the next 30 days, stressing the theme, "What the Movie Theatre Means to Your Community."

An MGM Workshop, opened by Emery Austin, MGM publicity chief, conducted a panel discussion headed by Mike Simons, MGM director of customer relations. The panelists were Joseph Jarvis, Riverside, R. I., Claude Motley, Video Theatres, Inc., Oklahoma City; L. J. Williams, Williams Theatres, Union, Mo.; Hal Barnes, Central States Theatre Corporation, Des Moines; Judson Moses, Atlanta press representative; C. J. Briant, MGM branch manager; and Austin. A luncheon followed, hosted by Coca-Cola Company.

The second day of the convention opened with a series of talks, conducted by A. B. Padgett, Wilby-Kincey Theatres, on selling methods for the festival. Another luncheon, this time provided by the Nehi Corporation, followed, with J. H. Thompson, president, MPTO of Georgia, presiding. Fred Storey, president, Storey Theatres, introduced guest speaker Mayor

William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta, who was followed by Governor Marvin Griffin.

In the afternoon, the festival was discussed from the industry-wide view by Dick Kennedy, president, ATA. Colvin, introduced by Nash Weil, Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Company, gave a short address, as did William E. Smith, executive director, The Popcorn Institute, who was introduced by Jim Blevins. Later, President E. D. Martin, Martin Theatres and Theatre Owners of America, addressed a closed meeting of the exhibitors, presided over by John Stembler, MPTO of Georgia.

A cocktail party and banquet closed the festivities in the evening. Additional glamor was added by the visit of screen personalities Mary Murphy and Rex Allen.

MPTO of Georgia reelected Thompson to the presidency. Other officers include O. C. Lam, executive vice-president; Nat Williams, Jay Edmondson, J. E. Tankersley, W. R. Bisell, John Stembler, and Fred Storey, vice-presidents; E. D. Martin, treasurer; and John Thompson, secretary.

ATA reinstated R. M. Kennedy as president, with Dan Davis, Rufus Davis, Jr., Lester Neeley, and J. W. Gaylard as vice-presidents; T. M Watson, secretary-treasurer; and Mack Jackson, TOA board representative.

20th-Fox Net Down; Surge Is Forecast

NEW YORK—Twentieth-Fox Film Corporation and wholly-owned subsidiaries last week reported consolidated net earnings of $1,423,811 for the first quarter ended March 26, 1955. This amounted to 54 cents per share on the 2,644,486 shares of common stock outstanding, as compared with net earnings for the first quarter of 1954 of $2,048,030 or 77 cents per share on the same number of shares. This failed to dampen executive spirits, however, as the report was optimistic.

At the company's annual stockholders' meeting, Spyros Skouras, president, stated that "our first quarter earnings are somewhat below the first quarter of 1954, but this was because we had only four CinemaScope releases for January, February, and March, one of which, though in our opinion well made, proved extremely disappointing at the boxoffice. Since the company did not have any other pictures in inventory available for immediate release, we were not in a position to correct this condition which is to be expected because of the law of averages. We have decided, therefore, to increase the number of pictures for release by an additional four to six pictures so that we will always have them in reserve to meet a similar situation."

Concerning the company's second quarter, Skouras stated "it is confidently expected worldwide film rentals will reach $27,300,000 as contrasted with $22,394,000 in the second quarter a year ago. Therefore, it is estimated that by the end of June our earnings for the first six months of this year will be between $1.25 and $1.30 a share as compared with $1.17 in 1954.

The board reelected Skouras as president. Members of the board elected by the stockholders to serve until 1956 included L. Sherman Adams, Colby M. Chester, Robert L. Clarkson, Daniel O. Hastings, Robert Lehman, Kevin C. McCann, B. Earl Puckett, W. C. Michel, Skouras, and James A. Van Fleet.

Officers named for the next year were William C. Michel, executive vice-president; Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production; Murray Silverstone, vice-president; Joseph H. Moskowitz, vice-president; S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation; Donald A. Henderson, treasurer and secretary; C. Elwood McCartney, comptroller and assistant treasurer; J. B. Codd, assistant treasurer; Francis T. Kelly, assistant treasurer; Frank H. Ferguson, assistant secretary; J. Harold Lang, assistant secretary; Norman B. Steinberg, assistant secretary; William Werner, assistant secretary; and Morris L. Breggin, assistant comptroller.

Admissions Up

WASHINGTON—The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last week that admission prices in large cities rose to record levels in the first quarter of 1955. The combined index of adult and children's prices stood in March at 202.6 per cent of the 1935-1939 average, compared to 196.9 per cent at the end of December last year, and a previous high of 199.9 per cent in September, 1954.

Paramount's Telemeter Enters War On Behalf Of Subscription Video

HOLLYWOOD—At a luncheon meeting of the Hollywood Advertising Club last week, Alfred Starr, co-chairman, Organizations for Free TV, clashed in a debate on controversial subscription television with Paul MacNamara, executive vice-president, Paramount-controlled International Telemeter Corporation. MacNamara was replacing Dr. Millard C. Faught, economic consultant to Zenith Radio Corporation, who was not permitted by that company to appear.

Starr accused the advocates of toll-TV of seeking to take free television away from the public. He pointed out that television as we know it today is gaining in favor, citing production of 50 per cent more sets in the first quarter of this year than in the comparable period of 1954 as an indication. There is no great uprising against current TV fare, he said, and even if there were a clamoring for better programs, there has been no indication of just what improvements would be effected to the toll system.

MacNamara countered sarcastically that the organizations and persons opposed to subscription TV are taking a "high level bleeding heart route" that "they want free TV for the American people" when in reality they are worried about real estate holdings "and the money they get out of popcorn." MacNamara said that if these groups would admit they are fighting for the survival of their businesses, he could better understand their position. He pointed out that production currently receives less than 15 cents on the boxoffice dollar because of the method and cost of distribution, and that the toll-TV method would cut such costs by half, to the benefit of the public. He discarded the argument that the public has purchased television sets with the notion of free entertainment by saying that no contract ever went with a set guaranteeing anything, and added that sports programs now lost could be returned to the home screen by this method.

CBS And Affiliates Oppose Toll-Television

NEW YORK—At the first annual conference held at the Waldorf-Astoria last week, the primary affiliated stations of the CBS Television Network, by a vote of 107 to 2 in a secret ballot, joined with CBS in opposing pay-television.

In their resolution urging CBS "to assume leadership for the preservation of the present American system of free home service," the stations pointed out that "any system which would require the public to pay for programs broadcast over the air would be wholly inconsistent with the history of American broadcasting and would divide the American people by barring programs to those who could not afford them . . . "

In stating CBS' position, Dr. Frank Stanton, president, Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., said, "CBS opposes pay-television because it would highjack the American public into paying for the privilege of looking at its own television sets. This is a betrayal of the 34 million families who have already spent $13½ billion for their sets in the expectation that they would be able to use them as much as they wanted without paying for the prerogative of watching."

Finske To Succeed Netter As Florida Circuit Chief

NEW YORK—Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., announced last week that Leon D. Netter, president, Florida State Theatres, Inc., and a theatre executive in the home office of the company for more than 20 years prior to his coming to Florida, has decided to retire and assume a consultant role with Florida State Theatres, Inc., effective July 1.

Goldenson also announced that predicated upon Netter's recommendation, Louis J. Finske, who is now serving as vice-president, Florida Circuit, will become its president, succeeding Netter. Finske has been associated with Netter for the last three years in the operation of Florida State Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Jacksonville. Prior to his affiliation with Florida State Theatres, Inc., Finske served as president, Penn-Paramount Corporation, which operates theatres in the Pennsylvania area.

FCC Approves NARTB Demonstration Of Phonevision

WASHINGTON—The Federal Communications Commission last week authorized Zenith Radio Corporation to display its Phonevision method of pay-as-you-see TV to the NARTB convention delegates this week. However, the Commission stressed that the public is not to get the impression that this means the FCC has decided one way or another concerning the subscription TV proposals pending before it.

The FCC has granted WMAL-TV temporary authorization to broadcast between 8 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. from May 25 to June 24. The trial period license was granted to The Evening Star Broadcasting, and after the NARTB meetings, members of Congress and the FCC will witness showings. The programs will go on the air preceding WMAL's regular hours, and can be viewed only on special sets equipped with Zenith's unscrambling gadgets.

Jarrico Loses Appeal

WASHINGTON—Without giving a reason, the Supreme Court last week declined to review an appeal by writer Paul Jarrico from lower court decisions in favor of RKO.

After he refused to answer questions of the House Un-American Activities Committee, Jarrico was fired by RKO and removed from the screen credits of "Las Vegas Story," on which he had worked. Arbitrators held Jarrico entitled to first writer's credit for the picture, but RKO refused and sought a declaratory judgment in its favor from the California courts. Jarrico then sued for damages. After several California courts ruled for RKO, he appealed to the Supreme Court.

important component, with the public seeking more adult and challenging themes. Profanity and sex are not necessarily prime ingredients which insure the success of any particular film.

ARRIVAL TWO: From the land down under came John Glass, general manager, Hoyt's Theatres, Australia; indirectly, that is, for he really arrived here after a visit to Europe enroute to meetings with studio officials on the coast. His circuit operates 180 theatres with 20th-Fox being principal stockholder, and it takes in about 30 per cent of the total revenue of the continent's 1,300 theatres. Included are three of the country's four drive-ins.

Glass expected that attendance at theatres and income would be substantially higher this year as compared with 1954, with business on the continual upgrade since the end of the war. He gave credit to CinemaScope for a goodly part of the current success. The entire circuit is equipped for the process as well as for stereophonic sound.

Australia is a real movie-going continent, and he reported that there are 84 theatre seats per 1,000 people in Australia, as compared to 34 per 1,000 in the U.S. and 32 per 1,000 in the United Kingdom. They definitely don't think they are overseated.

He felt that a lack of TV competition was not a factor in the present prosperity, and they didn't expect much of a boxoffice recession when TV does hit the area at the end of this year and early in 1956. His circuit has found a reserved seat policy highly successful for a portion of each house, with the balance being thrown open to regular boxoffice admissions.

There is no product shortage "down under," said Glass, and films are playing extended runs, especially with the advent of CinemaScope.

BITS AND PIECES: Broadway strollers did a double take last week as their eyes lit on Marilyn Monroe in king-size over Loew's State. We are referring to a 52-foot sign plugging the opening of "The Seven Year Itch" at that house on June 3. There was plenty of press and TV coverage as the four-and-one-half story figure was unveiled. There was many a crick in necks that strained to take it all in, we can report.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: "Love Me Or Leave Me" goes into the Radio City Music Hall tomorrow. There is really an entertaining hunk of film that should go over big with lots of people. Doris Day reveals many Marilyn Monroe-type qualities with a voice that sells her numbers in wonderful fashion, while James Cagney comes through with a performance that should be considered come award time. . . . Charlie Levy, eastern publicity and exploitation director for Walt Disney, last week started an extensive tour of the country for Fess Parker (Davy Crockett) that should really start the ball rolling in a big way for the release of the film shortly afterwards. Incidentally, the Disney office got up an elaborate handbook on the 22-city tour that will take a month that is really a masterpiece of information and a wonderful guide for all concerned.

Bring Back The Kids, McGee Tells Managers

DENVER—In a letter sent recently to all circuit managers, Pat McGee, Cooper Foundation Theatres' head, appealed for workable ideas to increase attendance, especially of children, in connection with a Greater Film Summer Festival to be launched simultaneously with the closing of the schools.

McGee revealed Cooper attendance dropped 80,000 in the first quarter of this year, of which 60,000 was in kiddie attendance. To recapture the under-12 age group he advocated redoubled efforts to sell children on the idea of going to regular as well as the special kiddie shows, noting that when the moviegoing habit is broken, it is very difficult to re-instill it. Early in June a Freedom Day for Kids, inaugurated last year, tied in with "Downtown Merchants Value Day" and offering free admission from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. will be repeated, McGee said, and at that time managers should make announcements in person and through screen and lobby about summer plans for the theatres. He also recommended a series of giveaways, utilizing parakeets, bicycles, ponies, and novelty items such as the "Space-O-Rain" suit, as well as the inclusion of a cartoon and similar short subjects on every program.

The letter cited a need to develop benefit ticket sales for children, serial ticket awards through dairies and bread companies, and other methods utilizing contests, such as a collection of film stars' photographs. Specifically, McGee said, he wanted a plan whereby the child would be rewarded for bringing an adult to the theatre at a particular time, inasmuch as it is commonly known parents are often induced by children to set against their specific desires, particularly in the case of films, a tendency to be carefully cultivated by the exhibitor. Newspapers, he added, have declined sadly in selling film attractions, and other media must be relied on to bring the public into the theatre.

20th-Fox Launches Group Plan

NEW YORK—20th-Fox last fortnight disclosed a novel way of selling films in closing a deal with Fox West Coast Theatres and the Kaiser Steel Company, whereby 23,000 Kaiser employes, with their families and friends, will see private showings of "Daddy Long Legs."

When a Kaiser personnel officer contacted Morris Sudmin, 20th-Fox branch manager, Los Angeles, about renting a film to be screened on the occasion of an employes' general meeting, agreeing to pay a guarantee, details were worked out to show "Daddy Long Legs" in Pomona May 24-26 and in San Bernardino May 24-28.

Local interest in the film is expected to increase inasmuch as the general public is excluded from the screenings. Other large companies are understood to be considering the continuation of the group selling plan, using only top pictures.

The company also announced that 100,000 window streamers crediting the musical production have been printed by Capitol Records as part of an extensive promotion. Enterprising exhibitors can tie up with record dealers for window displays, etc.

Children from St. Joseph's Orphonoge were guests of Famous Players Capitol, Fort William, Ontario, Conada, recently ot a screening of Buena-Vista's Wolt Disney's "20,000 Leagues Under The Seo." Needless to soy, some fine public relations were occomplished, as well as o nice break in the locol newspoper.

Posters In 23 States Aid "Not As A Stranger"

NEW YORK—A precedent-setting advance poster campaign spotting luminous 24-sheets for United Artists' "Not As A Stranger" on key highway billboards in 23 states from coast to coast was launched last week, it was announced by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for United Artists.

The teaser-type displays, inaugurating the combined use of Day-Glo ink and a special headlight-reflecting glass beading will beam news of Stanley Kramer's all-star production at night as well as by day.

Approximately 11,000,000 motorists and their passengers will be reached daily by more than 2,500 of the unique "Not As A Stranger" 24-sheets strategically located on major traffic arteries in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Missouri, Michigan, Nebraska, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, and Wisconsin.

The advance 24-sheet campaign heralding Kramer's screen version of the best-seller by Morton Thompson represents an outlay of almost $50,000. The overall promotion for "Not As A Stranger" is being backed by an all-time UA record budget of $1,200,000.

Time Tieup Aids "Leagues"

FORT WILLIAM, ONTARIO, CANADA—Famous Players Capitol recently obtained a three columns by 12 inches co-op ad with local distributors of Timex waterproof watches on "20,000 Leagues Under The Sea."

To make sure of reader interest, tied in with the ad was the giveaway of a Timex watch to the person guessing the nearest to the total number of people who saw the film at the theatre. Contest blanks could be picked up at the four dealers.

Schimel Asks Deletion Of Treble Damages

WASHINGTON — Adolph Schimel, vice-president and general counsel, U-I, last week went before the House Judiciary Committee to seek Congressional action deleting the treble-damage provision governing private anti-trust suits, to end legalistic "prospecting for gold." He pointed out that judgments entered under the provision are unrelated to damage suffered. In the case of one Kansas exhibitor, the award represented the "potential earnings of several lifetimes . . . of that theatre"; in another, jurors were not advised of treble damages until after delivering a verdict for the plaintiff.

Schimel added that the film industry has had more experience than any other with such actions, and that a large percentage of increased filings involved the studios. Of 261 cases in 1952, 94 named picture companies as defendants, and in 1953, 70 were defendants out of 212 cases. As of last Feb. 24, U-I was being sued in 186 private civil suits, damages claimed being $382,700,000 in 163 of them. The U-I executive submitted that trade practices of long standing struck down by the Supreme Court had, on occasion, been upheld by FTC and circuit courts, and that only changes in economic theory and judicial construction resulted in their condemnation.

House members were advised that grounds of action in many cases dated back 20 years, the incentive to sue being the treble damages provision. Some lawyers have become specialists in the field on a contingent fee basis and, Schimel added, the court now allows the plaintiff to use the earnings of the defendant as the yardsick for damages. Speaking in the capacity of chairman, MPAA law committee, he proposed a discretionary provision replace the mandatory one, on the basis that a judge should be able to decide fairly when treble damages are warranted and when they are highly inconsequential under the anti-trust laws.

IFE Names Poe

NEW YORK—In a series of steps designed to strengthen the representation of Italian motion pictures in the American market, the board of Italian Films Export in Rome last week approved recommendations brought before it by its managing director, Renato Gualino.

Designation of Seymour Poe, well-known U.S. distribution executive and producers' representative, as new executive vice-president, IFE; election of E. R. Zorgniotti to the post of chairman of the board; establishment of a new company exclusively devoted to the development of Italo-American co-productions; and arrangement of talent deals, TV packaging and sales, and producer representation under the direction of Zorgniotti and Ralph Serpe, were the highlights of the board's actions.

The revised set-up of IFE Releasing executives is chairman of the board, Zorgniotti; president, Gualino; executive vice-president, Poe; vice-president in charge of sales, Bernard Jacon; vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation, Jonas Rosenfield, Jr.

"Love Me Or Leave Me"

Producer Joe Pasternak and director Charles Vidor, with the aid of CinemaScope, the brilliant Doris Day, and James Cagney, have come up with an MGM musical drama that should prove one of the year's best pictures—not only in entertainment, but at the boxoffice. You won't soon forget Cagney as the tough guy who wanted to make the "big time." Cameron Mitchell does a splendid job in support. This should be sure-fire at any theatre.

Pulitzer Prize Urged For Screen Writers

BURBANK, CAL.—A Pulitzer Prize for motion picture writers was advocated by Jack L. Warner, production head, Warners, in a letter last week to John H. Hohenberg, secretary, Advisory Board on Pulitzer Prizes, headquartered at Columbia University.

Basing his suggestion upon the fact that motion picture writing is an art which reaches a vastly wider public than any other form of creative writing, the film executive said it was inspired by the fact that many Pulitzer Prize Winners could not have won the coveted awards had their works been created specifically for the screen, and cited William Faulkner and Ernest Hemingway as examples.

"Regardless of the calibre of their writing," Warner stated, "they could not have received Pulizer Prizes for screen works. There is no provision by the Advisory Committee on Pulitzer Prizes to give an award to a motion picture."

Warner said it was understandable that when the original Pulitzer Prizes were established 42 years ago motion pictures might not have been considered of sufficient stature to warrant an award. "But since that time," he stated, "they have grown to the point where they are one of the biggest international media of communication and entertainment."

The film executive stated he spoke only for Warners but voiced his conviction that other major studios and producers shared his belief there should be a Pulitzer Prize for the writer of a motion picture.

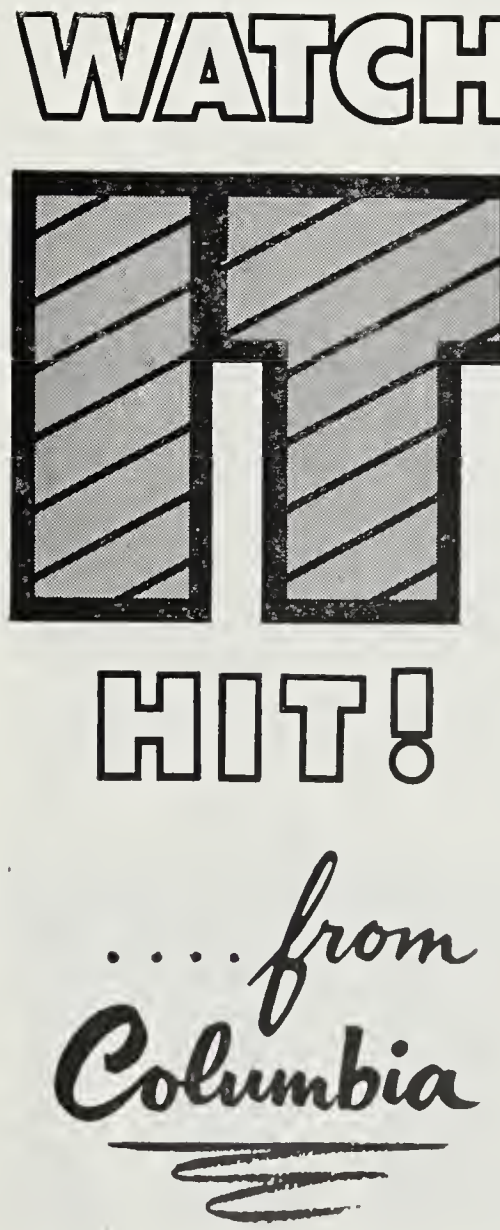
Donald O'Connor was guest of honor at a recent cocktail party given for him in the Sun Room of the U-I studio by his co-workers in celebration of his 14 years' association with the studio. Seen with O'Connor, left to right, are Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president; Nate J. Blumberg, chairman of the board; and Ed Muhl, vice-president in charge of production.

Legion Rap At PCA May Tighten Code

HOLLYWOOD—High on the agenda of Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Association of America president, when he arrived from Washington last week, was the serious industry problem created by the recent attack in New York on Production Code Administration ethics by the Rev. Thomas F. Little, executive secretary, National Legion of Decency.

Johnston was expected to meet with Geoffrey Shurlock, PCA administrator; Y. Frank Freeman, board chairman of American Motion Picture Producers, of which Johnston is president; and with other film executives and producers. It was unknown to what extent Father Little's criticism would result in PCA tightening up on films, but feeling here was that this was a poor time to involve the industry in the displeasure of the Legion and the Church. Shurlock did not comment on the recent denunciation in New York.

Discussing Father Little's remarks in the New York Times, Freeman and MGM studio head Dore Schary, speaking as individuals, contended that the Legion executive ignored the good being done by producers. Freeman asserted that the Code was well administered by Shurlock, and that Father Little should have pointed out the specific "weaknesses" to which he objected so that they could be avoided. Schary said the entire industry should not be blamed for a few Legion-condemned pictures which might deserve anything that happened to them, and of which the industry as a whole might not approve.



Paramount Readies For Stockholder Meet

NEW YORK—It was learned last fortnight that Paramount's management has recommended against the proposal to be made by minority stockholder John Campbell Henry at the annual meeting on June 7 calling for the election of auditors by stockholders and providing that representative of the firm selected be present at the annual meeting to answer inquiries. Henry is record holder of 100 shares, according to the proxy statement enclosed with the notice of the meeting.

Management maintains that auditors have already been appointed by stockholders through their elected representatives, the directors, and that it is necessary the board have freedom to change auditors or engage them for special purposes. The policy of having a member of the auditing firm present at stockholder meetings will be continued.

The proxy statement reports that the officers and directors of Paramount received a total of $811,400 in remuneration in 1954. Individual amounts included Barney Balaban, $124,800, including $20,800 expense allowance; Y. Frank Freeman, $130,000; the late Austin C. Keough, $91,000; Paul Raibourn, $46,800, including $7800 expenses; Edwin L. Weisl, $5,000; George Weltner, $64,800, including $5,150 expenses; and Adolph Zukor, $78,000.

The present board of 12 directors will be nominated for reelection at the annual meeting, as follows, Balaban, Freeman, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, Earl I. McClintock, Maurice Newton, Raibourn, Weisl Weltner, and Zukor.

Rowley Named By UA Circuit

NEW YORK—The appointment of Edward H. Rowley, Sr., president, Rowley United Theatres, Inc., Dallas, to the executive vice-presidency of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., was announced recently by UATC president George P. Skouras.

Rowley's career began in 1916 when he and Harold B. Robb leased the San Antonio, Tex., opera house, which was the beginning of the Robb and Rowley circuit. Headed by Joseph M. Schenck, UATC acquired an interest in the circuit in 1937, and, following the death of Robb in 1944, the Paramount interest and the Robb family interest were bought out four years ago. After 1951 the corporate name was Rowley United Theatres, Inc., operating 145 theatres and drive-ins in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas.

Rowley is also president, Rowley-Brown Broadcasting Company, operating KWFT and KWFT-TV, Wichita Falls, Tex., and a director of the Zonite Products Corp.

Weekly Movie Attendance Tops Any Sport's Annual Gate

NEW YORK—A pointed reminder to newspaper editors of the tremendous public interest in the movies, which cater to more people in a week than any major sport does in a year, is contained in the 43rd of the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher which appeared recently.

Entitled "Want More Readers?" the ad was as follows, "We have just read some interesting figures in our newspaper. The story said that for the third straight year racing has led all sports in attendance figures, with a total of 50,408,584 paid admissions for the year. Major league baseball, said the story, had a paid attendance of 16,000,000, collegiate football 13,749,000, and bowling 17,000,000 participants. Far below these figures were the 2,190,000 total of paid admissions for pro football, and the 3,500,000 total for wrestling bouts. These, mind you, were all figures representing a whole year's attendance. Reading them, we just couldn't help thinking, 'Gee whiz! What's all the shooting for? The movies have 50,000,000 admissions every week!' Americans like to look at movies . . . and read about them too. End of today's sermon."

Montana Exhibitors Oppose "Unfair" Terms

BILLINGS, MONT.—At its spring convention last fortnight the Montana Theatres Association reelected C. E. Anderson president, and J. Grady, vice-president. A. Suckstorff was reinstated for the 16th consecutive year as secretary-treasurer, and A. F. Lamey was retained again as general counsel.

At a general discussion session, Anderson attacked the toll-TV proposal now pending before the Federal Communications Commission as "one of the greatest threats to our industry," and urged members to write to FCC expressing opposition to the plan. He also reported on the Film Financing Group to the effect that Montana state authorities are considering MTA's application to solicit stock purchases.

The convention passed a resolution opposing unfair film rental practices and terms now being imposed on Montana exhibitors. It also resolved to "take such further action as the officers feel necessary to inform the presidents of various distributing corporations of the attitude of this association." The same document pointed out that in some cases distributors have allocated 40 and 50 per cent terms to mediocre pictures, imposing thereby a financial burden on the exhibitors.

Clarence Golder, Civic Center Theatre, Great Falls, announced with thanks that TOA had untangled the first-run film problem there, having arranged for the Great Falls Air Force Base theatre to run films 14 days behind downtown houses. A. M. Lockrem, Circle, Circle, disclosed that his business attendance was being hurt by tavern owners showing current features on 16mm., in violation of Montana law. The matter was referred to counsel. E. M. Jackson, Laurel, Laurel, advised members that the newly-licensed Saskatchewan insurance company offering 20 per cent reduction in fire insurance rates, which would offer up to 50 per cent of approval from the Canadian government.

New directors named for MTA are Finas Lewis, Livingston; Frank Macler, Lewiston; Jack Holmes, Miles City; and Fowers, Missoula. Directors retained are N. M. Stubblefield, St. Ignatius; Jackson, Pletywood; Fred Arnst, Ft. Benton; Golder; and Chris Gorder, Poplar.

The fall meeting was set for September 28-29 at the Florence Hotel, Missoula. An MGM Theatre Workshop was held in conjunction with the convention.

Fight Telecast Disappoints

NEW YORK—Theatre Network Television reported last week that 83 theatres in 59 cities as far west as Denver presented the closed-circuit telecast of the Marciano-Cockell heavyweight championship fight of May 16 in San Francisco's Kezar Stadium, to an estimated audience of 280,000.

The International Boxing Club will realize nearly $200,000 from closed-circuit theatre receipts. A spokesman for RKO Theatres, which showed the bout in seven houses, said that the sale of tickets was "pretty good," while Stanley Warner officials stated that sales were "generally slow," but with sell outs in 11 spots.

Paramount Earnings Doubled

NEW YORK—Paramount reported last fortnight that estimated earnings for the first quarter of 1955, ended April 2, were $2,858,000 after allowance for income taxes, representing a $1.31 per share on 2,190,000 common shares outstanding. The figures more than doubled those for the comparable period last year. A dividend of 50 cents a share was voted by the directors, payable June 15 to holders of record May 26.

For the first quarter of 1954, earnings were $1,404,000, representing 63 cents a share on 2,217,044 common shares outstanding then.

Play For Play

An area set aside for playground facilities to entertain the children has become as much a part of the typical drive-in theatre as the screen tower or concession building. Outdoor theatre operators soon learned that it paid off to provide the ways and means for keeping Junior out of trouble, and give his parents a chance to relax and enjoy the evening out. The public appreciated this effort, and the fact that the drive-in not only offered them the opportunity to get out without going to the expense of hiring a baby sitter, but even furnished special equipment to keep the kids happy. Therefore, it can honestly be said that the playground has played a key role in erasing the "passion-pit" mental image that had been associated with drive-ins, and replacing it with the "family entertainment" label.

With almost 5,000 drive-ins currently in operation in this country, it is possible to visit theatres with playground facilities ranging from a simple swing and slide, to giant merry-go-rounds, mechanical trains and other devices usually associated with the amusement parks.

Many outdoor theatres today offer rides which are not free. Certainly in these days no exhibitor can afford to overlook any sensible and legitimate new source of revenue. However, the question of installing rides which will cost the parent money over and above his admission fee can be a delicate one. If there are no major amusement parks in the area, and there is enough space available to properly install such things as mechanical trains and other large pieces of equipment, it might be profitable to use the playground as a place where you pay to play. However, the average theatre operator should give this matter serious thought before making such a move. It should always be remembered that the playground's original purpose was to supply an extra inducement for adult patrons. It could very well be that these parents might resent the fact that in addition to the admission price, and what they will spend at the concession stand, they must also now spend money on rides in an area which they have come to look upon as a regular service offered free of charge.

Another factor that could possibly rub parents the wrong way in connection with charging for rides, is that the youngsters might spend the evening annoying Mom and Dad to let them take one more ride on the toy space ship, train, etc. If carried too far, parents might start limiting their visits to the drive-in, just as most of them do with amusement parks.

This question of charging for rides at a drive-in is a complex one, and although the circumstances may vary from area to area, the outdoor theatre operator would do well to consider the matter very carefully.

PLAYGROUND OPERATION

PHYSICAL THEATRE

Vol. 10, No. 6 May 25, 1955

IN the eight drive-in theatres we operate, and the many on our planning boards, we of Walter Reade Theatres feel we are developing play centers to which the entire family comes for a full evening's entertainment. In planning these centers, we believe the big, free kiddie play area is a necessity.

Vital Function

Our organization has thousands of dollars invested in playground equipment in its theatres, and we consider this a vital part of our drive-in facilities. As a result of many years of experience in the field we are convinced that we must cater to the family trade, and one of the best ways to get this business is to make the theatre attractive to the youngsters. I wish to point out that these conclusions are the result of our own experience, and may not necessarily hold true with other drive-in operations in other parts of the country. In general, however, I do not believe the average exhibitor would go wrong in adopting these facilities which we offer without charge to our patrons, because they provide a great incentive for the entire family to come early. Obviously,

By EDWIN GAGE
Vice-President, Walter Reade Theatres

your concession should be open early also to take care of this plus business.

Location and Equipment

In our operations our play areas are located either at the foot of the screen, in the rear of the concession building or, if the roadside location lends itself so that the equipment itself can be seen by the passing automobiles, it is placed toward the roadside, but far enough back so that there is no traffic hazard. We average about 10 pieces of equipment per theatre, standard equipment, from our point of view, should include: swings with a capacity of about 10 youngsters; two or three see-saws; one or two slides; one or two of the Merry Whirl type of merry-go-rounds which are non-mechanical, and self-propelled (if the theatre can afford one of the flashy type with horses and a canopy, all the better); one or two sand boxes and a half dozen or more park benches so that the parents have a place to sit while the youngsters play.

We have found that while it is more expensive to buy the heavy duty type of playground equipment, such as is found in public school yards and in public parks, the investment more than pays off in the end because, under heavy usage the light equipment such as would be purchased for a private home just will not stand up. There are several reliable firms in this field and it is a matter of preference as to which one the individual drive-in deals with. All, basically, are good.

Stationary Equipment

We have put some other stationary type of playgrounds equipment, such as jungle gyms, and pole swings in our theatres, and recommend them with one reservation. There is always a danger on this type of equipment that the youngsters will fall off, and that is a calculated risk the theatre has to take. However, in all

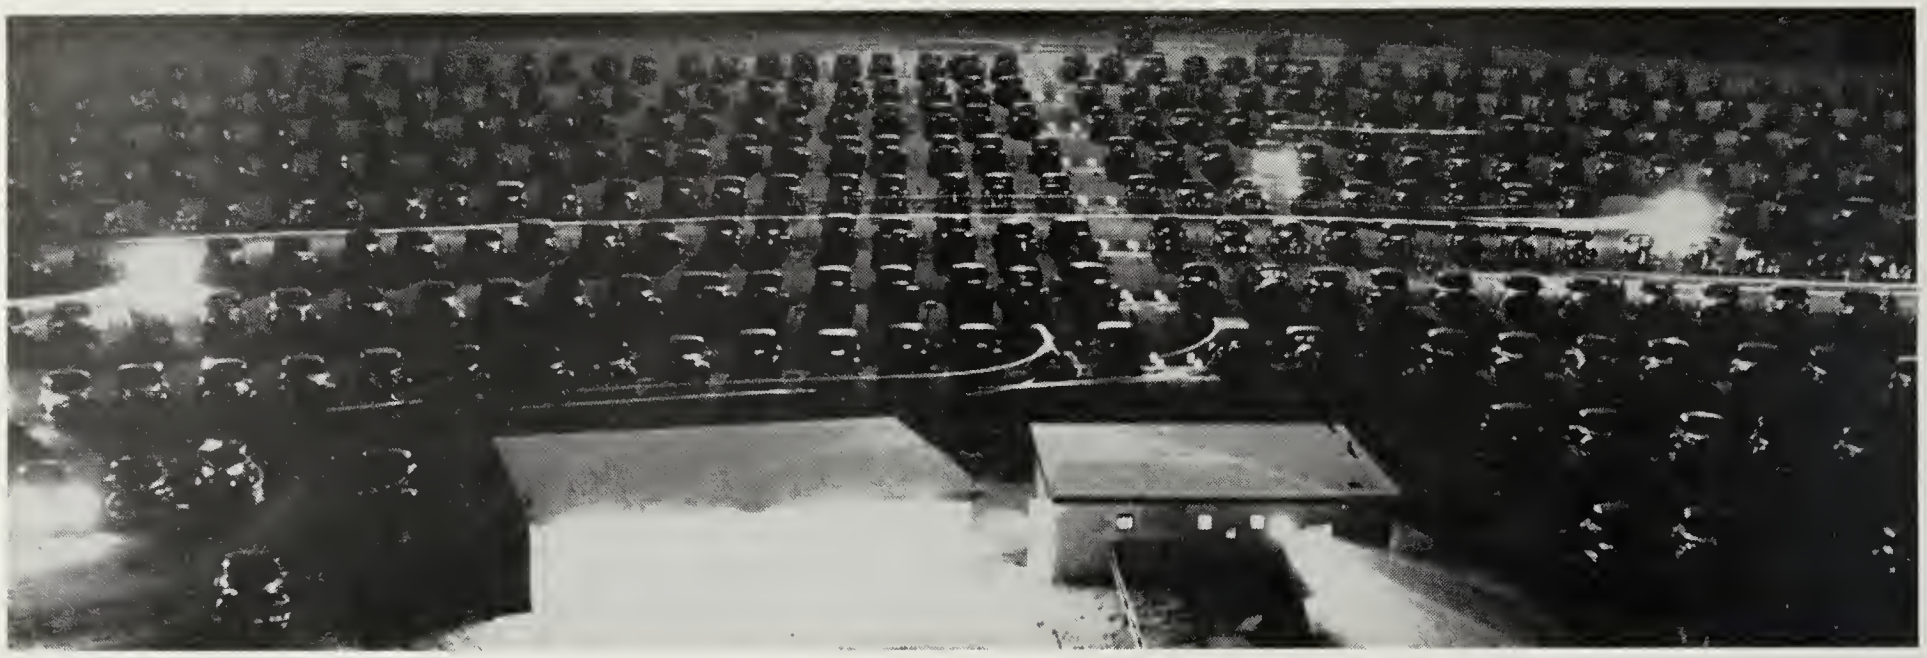
Colorful entrances to the drive-in playground, such as the Eatontown, Eatontown, N. Y. (above) attracts children. The use of such things as pony rides, such as at the Atlantic, Pleasantville, N. J., (below, left) and a well equipped play area, like the 9-W, Kingston, N. Y., (below, right) pays off.



THE NATION'S DRIVE-IN THEATRE AUDIENCES HAVE BEEN FOUND TO BE VERY RECEPTIVE TO MANY OF THE ON-THE-SCREEN ADVERTISING MESSAGES.

Some Of The Techniques Used To Produce

Outdoor Screen Advertising

THE continuing steady growth of the drive-in, both in business and expansion, has launched an entirely new aspect for theatre screen advertising and the drive-in owners. More and more drive-ins are now screening commercial films as part of their regular program.

Income Source

Screen advertising revenue is an income source on which the drive-in operator can definitely bank. He is paid by the film company at a rate determined by the value of the screen to the advertiser based on attendance and by the class of the theatre. The number of ads run by the drive-in during a week's performance is also an important revenue factor.

One of the most important features of modern theatre screen advertising is the fact that today's commercial films are actually entertaining and informative short subjects, employing Hollywood's finest techniques. Skilled directors with experience are making these commercials attractive and pleasing to the audiences. Professional models, animation, trick effects, and all the setting and background materials used by entertainment film producers, have found their place in commercial film advertising. New models of cars and appliances are effectively and excitingly introduced by film commercials. Food and kitchen product commercials suggest helpful recipes and household hints for today's modern housewife.

Different Categories

There are several different categories of theatre screen advertising which are offered to the theatre owner by the leading film companies. The most common is the ad for the local business firm in the theatre's community. It may be a drug-store, flower shop, garage, bank, lumber company or any one of some 50 different business lines for which ads are made. The film will be general and will advertise certain benefits to the customer by use of the businessman's product or service. An average ad of this type will run 40 seconds.

Another type of 40-second film is produced specifically for a large manufacturer's dealer organization. One of the largest of these programs handled by the film companies is the Seven-Up Company with developers all over the United States. Seven-Up makes a series of films each year featuring their famous "Fresh-Up" family theme. Last year over 50,000,000 people saw these films in theatres all across the country. Drive-in and other concessions carrying Seven-Up benefitted too—as an indirect result. The Seven-Up Company has been using film advertising for 17 years and recognizes the value of drive-ins as one of their most important audiences. More than 100 other national advertisers are using the theatre screen medium at the present time with more and more emphasis being put on drive-in advertising.

Still another form of ad which is popular with large manufacturers with mass distribution is the "Minute Movie." This 60-second film is used by a large national advertiser who supplies his product to dealers or retail outlets throughout the country. Chevrolet uses these ads on a big scale in the drive-ins. Also typical is Ethyl Corporation's use of the "Minute Movie" on more than 500 drive-in screens in their intensive 1953 ad campaign. Ethyl estimates they reached an audience of 3,350,000 in 1953. 1954 will mark the fourth consecutive year that Ethyl has used the drive-in campaign with very satisfying results. Other mass distribution "Minute

STRONG

SINGLE PHASE SELENIUM PLATE RECTIFIER

Single- or Three-Phase Models Available

Developed especially to fill the need of drive-in theatres which require the most powerful projection arc lamps but to which three-phase current is not economically available. Fulfills all the requirements for efficient burning of 10mm. and 11mm. regular carbons and 10mm. Hitex carbons.

This new rectifier incorporates all the proven features of other Strong Selenium Plate-Rectifiers, such as moisture-proof selenium units, remote control relay, air-flow protective device, large fan ventilator and taps to provide adjustment to compensate for supply voltage variations through a range of 10% above or 10% below the rated A.C. input voltage throughout the output rating range. The selenium rectifier stacks carry a three-year guarantee.

Strong makes a complete line of selenium plate and tube type rectifiers for use with all carbon trims.

Interesting Additions To Your Drive-In Playground Equipment

Hand-Operated Locomotive

A backyard railroad which was recently introduced at the New York Toy Fair, soon will be made available to Kiddielands and playgrounds at drive-in theatres.

Called the "Yardbird," the basic toy includes a hand operated "locomotive" that will carry one or two youngsters around the 40 feet of circular track supplied with the set. The unit is manufactured by the Charles William Doepke Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati.

Originally designed for home-use, the "Yardbird" offers sturdiness, low price and easy assembly which makes it ideal for institutions where special amusement devices are necessary to entertain small-fry, four years old and older.

The track consists of two metal rails, eight inches apart and held together with wooden ties to form a circle 12 feet in diameter. The hand-car is made of heavy, 18 gauge steel and will easily bear the weight of adults, although it is a child's toy, the manufacturer claims. A hand crank turns the chain drive directly connecting all four rear wheels and will drive the car forward or backward.

In order to keep the price down, the manufacturer will supply rails, ties, and hand-car unassembled. Assembly of the complete unit is an easy morning's job for two men, it is claimed. Additional track is available in either curved or straight sections, and it will also be possible to purchase "flat-cars" which will couple onto the locomotive to carry additional passengers.

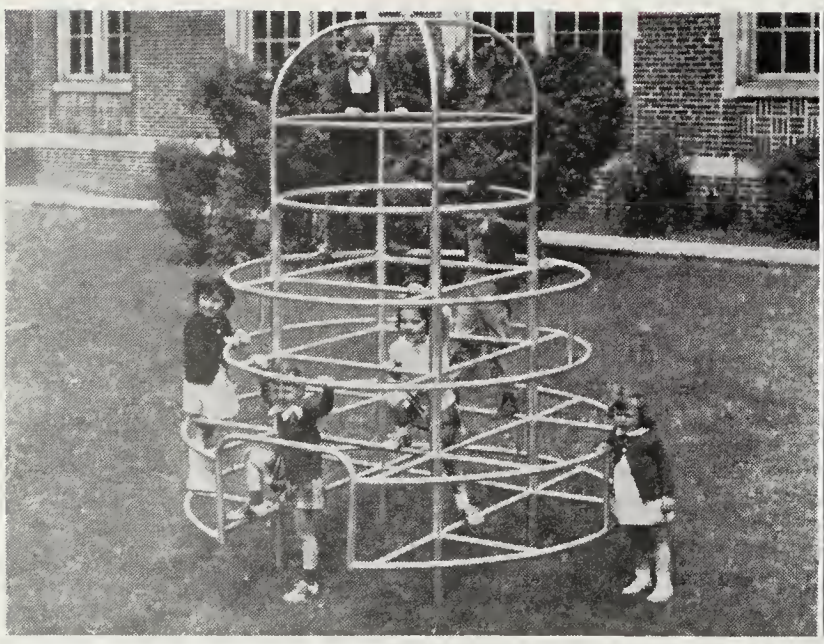
Miniature Carousel

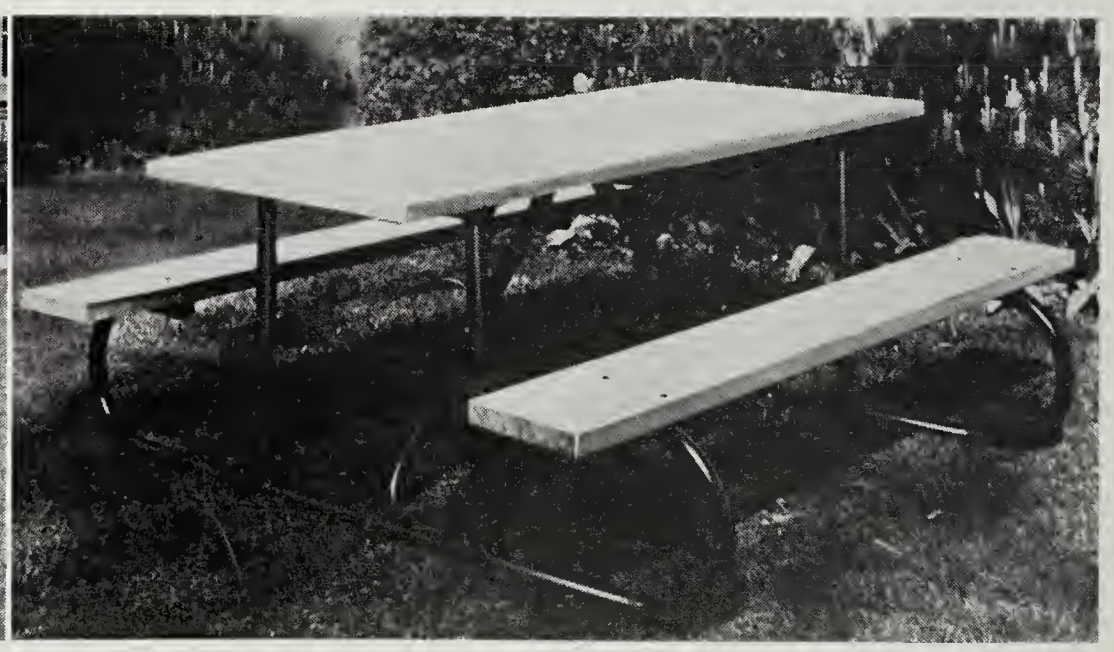
There is probably no other playground ride or device which has a wider appeal or popularity than the carousel, or merry-go-round. This type of ride is usually in such demand by the youngsters that there are very few drive-ins today that do not have some form of carousel in its playground area.

It is now possible to obtain a carousel which can be used as a sales promotion tool to sell soft drinks, popcorn, etc., in addition to entertaining the younger set.

The Bert Lane Company, Tampa, Fla., has developed a miniature carousel which can be towed to any site desired. Power to operate the revolving platform, the horses and the music is provided by an electric plant manufactured by the Kohler Company, Kohler, Wisc.

Instead of putting these carousels in the playground, it might be possible to install one or two of the units near the concession building, with signs advertising a certain brand of soft drink. A super market installed some of these units and made a deal with a beverage company which agreed to give a free ride for each sale of six bottles. It might be possible to work out a similar arrangement in a drive-in. Another good reason for keeping these carousels near the concession building is that parents often bring the youngsters with them when they come to make their purchases, and it might prove profitable to have these rides, which are not free, nearby. The fact that the ride is not too long will prevent any undue tieup at the concession area.





Pictured here are two playground items from Game-Time, Inc., Litchfield, Mich. Seen (left) is the Mountain Climber. Child capacity is said to be doubled by the unit's design. It can be assembled in 10 minutes, and only four excavations and cement piers are needed instead of the usual 18. Seen on the (right) is a handy picnic table. It will comfortably seat eight persons, it is claimed. The frames are formed from 1⅝ inch O.D. heavy steel tubing, electric welded for strength, and bolted to seats. The one-piece top bolts to angle irons and may be knocked down very quickly.

The Strong 18" f/1.7 Reflector Super "135" for theatres with f/1.8, f/1.7 or f/1.5 objective systems and projectors cleared for these high speed optical systems.
Also available with 16-1/2" f/1.9 reflectors.

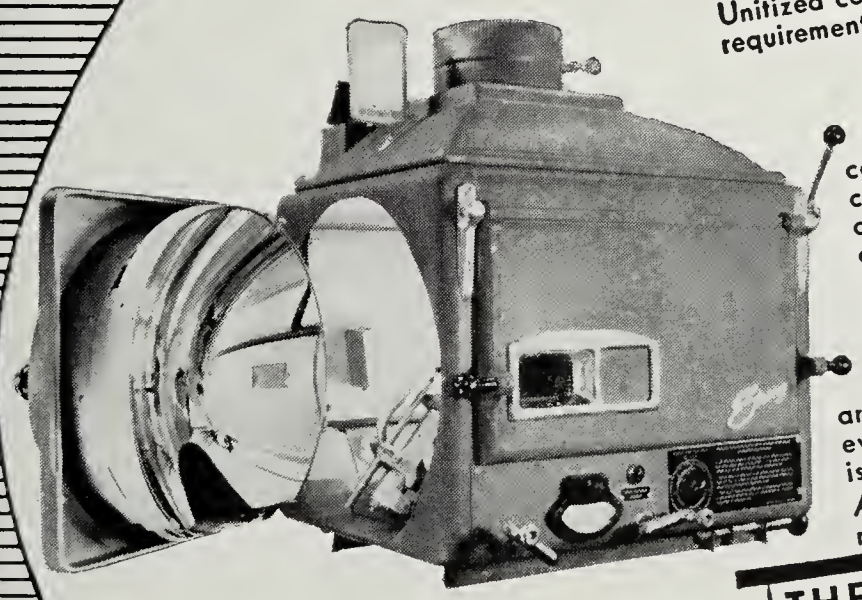
MOST POWERFUL OF ALL PROJECTION LAMPS

PROVED BY IMPARTIAL FOOT-CANDLE-METER TESTS



Unitized component design. Quick, simple changes attain the correct light requirement for any of the new presentation techniques, even two or more on the same program. Burn a choice of four different carbon trims; 9, 10, or 11mm regular trim, and 10mm Hitex in a total of seven separate manners to attain any desired degree of cost of operation, screen illumination, or burning time. A single control selects any desired amperage. NEW, long life positive carbon contact. NEW ventilated reflector frame, insures cool operation of reflector and rear section of the lamp even at extreme angles of projection.

NEW Strong Infra Ban Beam Cooler blower fan. New removable filter holder.

Exclusive Lightronic crater-positioning system automatically maintains the correct arc gap length and correct position of the positive arc crater at the EXACT focal point of the reflector. A perfect light, evenly distributed, of constant intensity and unchanging color value, is maintained at the screen without manual adjustments.

A jet of air stabilizes the burning arc and prevents deposit of soot on reflector.

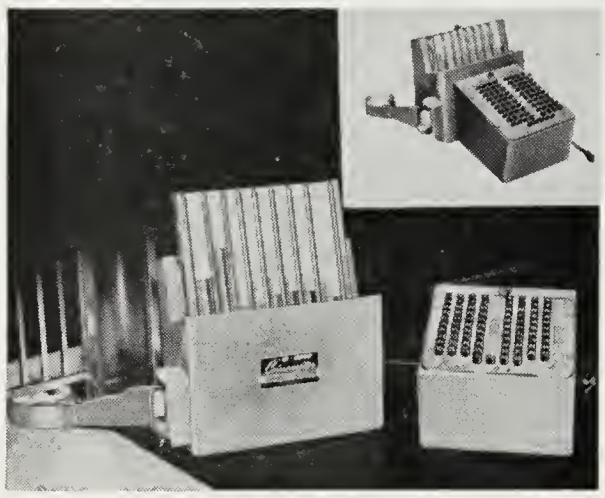
Electric Coin Changer

What is said to be the first practical coin changer and payer ever to incorporate all-electric operation, was recently introduced by Coinometer Corporation.

Known as the Coinometer "400" series, these new machines have the keyboard unit and coin ejector independent of each other. Therefore, it is claimed, it is no longer necessary for a specific area on top of the counter to be reserved for the coin-changer. The keyboard may be placed in a drawer or in some other location that is especially convenient for the cashier, while the compact ejector unit can be placed where it is most convenient for the customer.



This coin changer and payer is said to be the first one to operate completely on electricity. The keyboard and coin ejector may be separated.

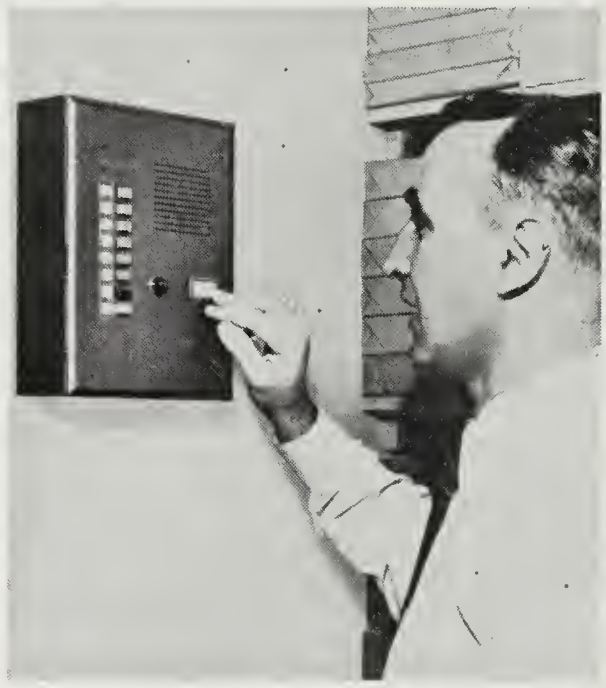
The new machine has a 104 key control board that is said to enable cashiers to handle any conceivable coin-changing task by depressing a single key. Some of the other features to be found in the "400" series include smooth and quiet action, since solenoids are used instead of motors; built-in safeguards that automatically prevent incorrect coin delivery; and increased capacity, since the electric power can accommodate higher coin trays and more coins.

Wall-Mounted Intercom System

Wall-mounted master stations and economical "single amplifier" operation are among several of the features claimed for the new "6000" electronic Intercom System recently introduced by Executone, Inc.

Master stations in this new system are available in cabinets for desk or table use, and in special wall-mounted housings designed to conserve space in such places as offices, projection booths, concession buildings, and other key locations.

The central amplifier, said to draw only as much current as a 30-watt bulb, is the only unit in the system that requires an electrical power outlet. Stations may be installed and full communication provided between as many as six master stations, even in locations where no electrical power outlets are available, it is claimed.

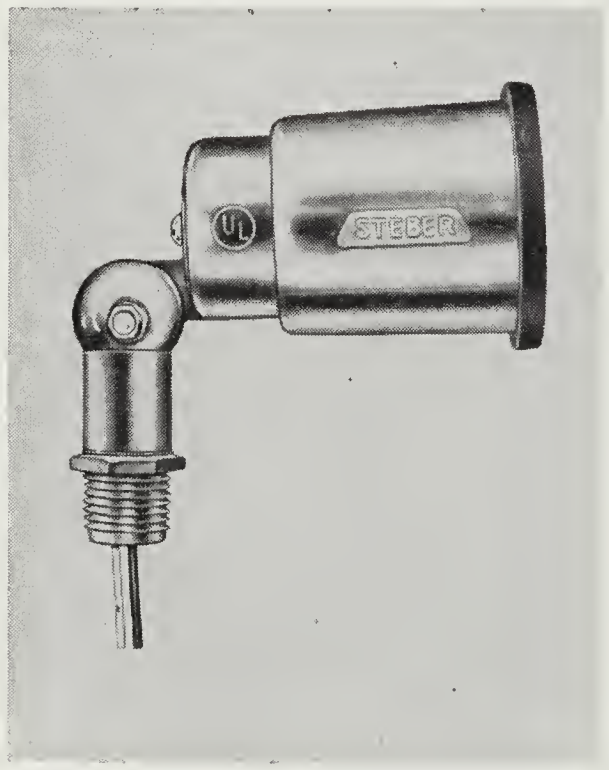


Large theatres and drive-ins may be interested in this intercom system which can be mounted on a wall. A small amount of electricity is required.

The master stations of the wall-mounted type are available in two models: flush-mount for recessing flush with the wall where remodeling or new construction is contemplated, and surface-mount for simple installation on existing walls. Face plate of the flush-mounted models is eight-and-a-half inches wide and 11 inches high; wall box is seven-and-a-half inches, 10 inches high and three inches deep. Surface-mount models are eight-and-a-half inches wide, 11 inches high and three inches deep.

Chrome Plated Lampholder

The Steber Manufacturing Company recently announced an addition to its Steberlite line. The new unit S-500—is designed to accommodate medium base sealed beam PAR-38 and R-40 lamps, such as those used to light the theatre front and other areas of indoor and outdoor theatres.



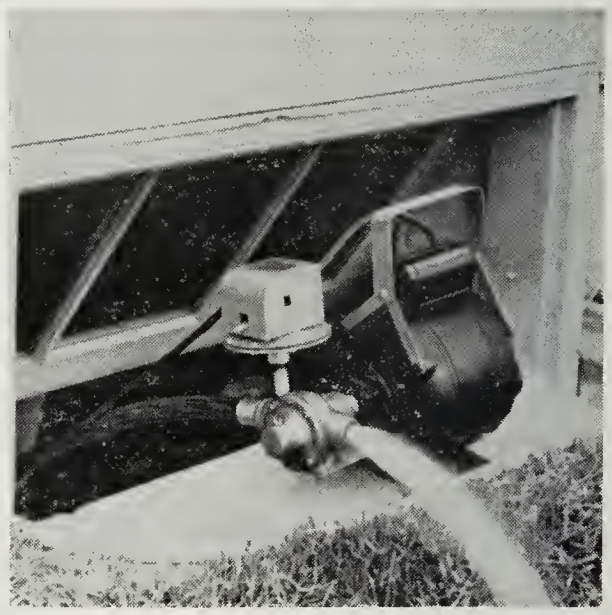
Designed to hold medium base reflector and projector lamps, this chrome-plated lampholder is suitable for use in indoor and outdoor theatres.

The socket housing, articulated adjusting joint, and mounting arm (threaded one-half inch) are triple chrome plated. Each unit is furnished with a black "Hycar" rubber lamp gasket and is equipped with high-grade porcelain socket, factory wired with weather-proof leads.

Portable Pump

One of the problems which often faces the operator of indoor, and particularly drive-in theatres, is water seeping into basements and storage buildings. To cope with the problem. Hypro Engineering, Inc., is marketing a lightweight portable pump equipped with a vacuum switch that automatically stops the motor when the liquid supply runs dry, permitting untended operation.

The capacity of this pump is said to be five gallons per minute, with pressures up to 30 pounds, and it handles clean or dirty water with a minimum of clogging. The unit weighs 26 pounds, including motor, hinged carrying handle, and vacuum switch.



This lightweight portable pump may be used to keep basements and storage areas dry. The pump capacity is said to be five gallons per minute.

The motor is one-quarter horse power, 110-volt, heavy-duty capacitor type with manual reset overload protector and five foot cord.

NATIONAL Projector Carbons

TRADE-MARK

• Delivering sharp, bright pictures to the giant screens of drive-in theatres is a problem — even with the finest projection equipment. But there's a way you can meet this challenge of greater screen areas and longer projection throws.

First, make sure that every component in your projection system is maintained in perfect working order. Second, be certain that your lamps are trimmed with "National" carbons — so small a part of your operating cost . . . so large a part of picture quality.

Building A Low Cost Swimming Pool

THE trend toward the use of swimming pools in drive-in theatres continues to grow. This seems to be a natural development since the outdoor theatre is offering the public more and more entertainment and recreational facilities with each passing year.

Of course, only the very large drive-ins, near large population centers, will probably find it profitable to build full-sized swimming pools, with all of the lockers, dressing facilities and other things called for by law in order to operate a community size swimming pool. However, there is no reason why the medium and small drive-in cannot install low-cost pools designed to keep the youngsters happy.

Low-cost, excavated swimming pools that may be built by the exhibitor, or a contractor, are now available using the Bilnor pool liner distributed by the Lin-O-Plast Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y.

These pools use strong, durable liners of Krene plastic for simplified watertight construction and easy maintenance. The liner can be left in the pool all year, according to the manufacturer. A wall support of cement blocks, or other low-cost construction can be used. The design also includes provisions to light the pool underwater for night swimming.

The liner prevents water seepage through porous concrete and eliminates the cost of an expensive pool floor and costly annual reconditioning. Four sidewalls of concrete block construction resting on a poured concrete footing buttress the pool excavation and support the flexible liner. Planks at the pool's edge hold the liner in place on top of the walls. A wide deck around the pool provides room for lounging and sunbathing, and prevents splashed water from muddying the ground.

Underwater lights for night swimming shine through panels of clear Krene plastic sealed into the ends of the liner.

After selecting the best site, it is excavated to the required pool dimensions, including the supporting wall thickness. The lightweight liners are produced in three standard pool sizes. The smallest, 12 feet wide by 27 feet long is graduated

Aluminum Diving Board From American

ANDERSON, IND.—The exclusive international distributorship for the Lifetime aluminum diving board, designed and developed by national diving champion Jim Patterson, has been acquired by the American Playground Device Company, it was announced by company treasurer Ralph Williams.

Said to be one of the best diving boards ever designed, the extruded section, which is the principal component of the Lifetime board, was produced by the Reynolds Aluminum Company specifically for diving board construction, according to Williams. All parts of the board are made from heat-treated aluminum.

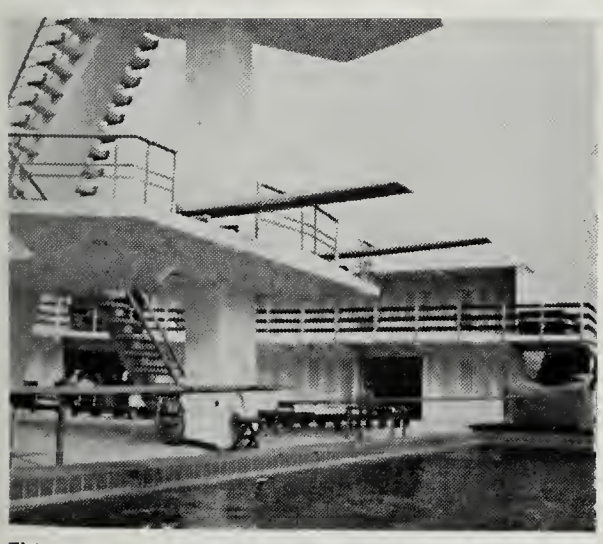
Design and construction are the same as those established by the aircraft industry as the best method of joining aluminum parts into a strong, light and flexible structure. All parts are assembled into an integral whole which flexes as one unit, William said, to insure proper distribution of loads.

The safety and assurance of the diver, which would be of prime importance to a drive-in operator thinking of using this board at his swimming pool, were given top priority. The top of the board comes equipped with a safety tread the full 18-inch width of the board. The board has no protruding parts or sharp edges on the surface, sides, or tip end, it is claimed.

Torque, or the twisting action at the tip of the board when the diver lands off-center, Williams explained, is held to a minimum. Torque is less than two degrees on an off-center impact of 400 pounds. This means that no matter where the diver lands on the end of the board, he has a stable platform for his take-off.

The Lifetime aluminum diving board is said to be simple and economical to maintain. It is completely anodized to protect its finish against salt water and corrosion. The non-skid safety tread is of a type that can be easily and inexpensively renewed by any maintenance man. The lightweight of the aluminum board (118 pounds) makes it easy to handle and install.

In addition to selling the new Jim Patterson diving board, Williams also announced that American would continue to manufacture its wooden diving boards using the finest Douglas fir, since many customers find that through proper use and maintenance they can get full value of the wooden boards.



This new aluminum diving board is lightweight, safe, and easy to handle and install at pools.

Altec Engineer Posthumously Honored

NEW LONDON, CONN.—The memory of Franklin C. Gilbert, chief engineer of Altec Service Corporation, has been signally honored by the U. S. Navy Underwater Sound Laboratories, here, through the dedication of Franklin C. Gilbert Road, principal thoroughfare on Fort Trumbull Reservation, recently.

The ceremonies, conducted by Captain Edward J. Fahy, U. S. Navy Commanding Officer and Director, included the unveiling of a plaque by Gilbert's widow. The commemoration took the form of a tribute to the supreme sacrifice made by the Altec chief engineer in action during the German submarine campaign waged by Germany off the New Jersey coast during World War II.

In addition to Captain Fahy, tribute was accorded Gilbert during speeches made by U. S. Senator Prescott C. Bush, Dr. John M. Ide, chief scientist of the Navy's Underwater Sound Laboratory; U. S. Congressman Horace Seely-Brown, Jr., Captain R. R. Williams, Officer of Naval Research; Dr. F. V. Hunt, Director of Cruft Labortory, Harvard University; Rear Admiral A. M. Morgan, U. S. Navy, and T. E. Shea, wartime director of the New London Laboratory (now a vice-president of Western Electric Company).

Paying eloquent tribute to Gilbert's sacrifice, Shea said in part: . . . "This spirit of dedication was characteristic of Franklin C. Gilbert. A well-remembered expression of his, which became almost the motto of U. S. Navy Underwater Sound Laboratory was: 'What are we waiting for.' Perhaps this sense of urgency led indirectly to his death."

On leave of absence from his company at the time, Gilbert, in company with E. S. Seeley, present Altec chief engineer, T. H. Carpenter, and other Altec technicians, was engaged in anti-submarine warfare research and development in behalf of apparatus for the detection and destruction of submarine raiders. His death came in a blimp while testing experimental detection gear off the Jersey coast.

Distribution

All film advertising is distributed by the various film companies after a representative has reached an agreement with the theatre on the rate to be paid for each ad unit. Most ads run for one week and all are complete units which are merely spliced right into the theatre's regular entertainment program. The film company agrees to pay the theatre owner a certain amount for each week of screening and ads are sold in conjunction with the theatre's guidance as to ad limit, etc.

A rigid shipping schedule to the theatre is maintained by the film company, and all film units are shipped to the theatre at least one week ahead of the scheduled screening time. Return postage is provided by the film company to facilitate the prompt return of the film after screening. Ease and convenience for the operator is of importance to the film company in assuring the advertiser that his films will be shown as scheduled.

Film advertising is popular with advertisers. The drive-in owner will find that by cementing good relations with the advertisers who are showing ads on his screen he will win many real friends who are in a position to help him by recommending his theatre, pictures that are playing, and in aiding him with promotions.

Trend Growing

The trend toward advertising on the drive-in screen is continually gaining in importance. Recently one of the world's largest advertising agencies prepared a special film for use in presenting the idea of drive-in screen advertising to their account executives, who in turn will use it as an effective means of selling the screen advertising medium to the company client's. Recognition such as this is giving the drive-ins a solid reputation for showing good advertising and will increase the owner's chances in further increasing screen ad revenue.

The Alexander Film Company, which is the world's largest producer and distributor of theatre screen advertising films, has been in the business for 36 years and was among the first to realize the advertising potential of the drive-in. At the present time their clients are increasing their demands for more drive-in space. Alexander has agreements with 2,500 drive-ins and estimate that 10,000,000 people a week see their ads in drive-ins with the figure increasing weekly.

Reliable Friend

Drive-in men will find that the film advertising salesman from a well established firm is a reliable friend who is sincerely interested in the theatre's welfare. He is ready and willing to help. Most advertising film salesmen have worked in the motion picture business a long time and are highly trained in theatre procedure. At the Alexander Film Company, the salesman is considered an "Ambassador of Goodwill" wherever he goes. He is always telling his prospects about the merits of the theatre in which he sells service.

Advertisers are realizing that the

SMPTE Reports On Drive-In Screen Brightness

CHICAGO—Average screen brightness in drive-in theatres is 3.0 foot-lambers as compared to the indoor standard of 9-14 foot-lamberts, it was revealed in a preliminary survey conducted by the Screen Brightness Committee of the Society of Motion Pictures and Television Engineers. The results of this survey, which was undertaken to ascertain the practical operating problems of drive-in theatres, and to assess the possibilities for changes in existing theatres, were made known at the recent 77th semi-annual convention of the society.

For the past year and a half the Screen Brightness Committee has been making measurements in 26 drive-in theatres in the eastern and central states, with wide screen widths about equally divided between the 40-60 feet and 60-120 feet range. Although the measured group represents only 0.6 per cent of the more than 4000 drive-in theatres in the United States, the survey provided much useful information about this type of exhibition that accounts for about 23 per cent of all the theatres in the United States, and at least 20 per cent of the boxoffice gross.

Observations in this SMPTE preliminary study were divided into three categories:

1. Screen brightness including light distribution on the screen, variations between projectors, screen reflectivity, and directional performance;
2. Geometric characteristics including theatre size, screen size, aspect ratio, and viewing angle;
3. Equipment characterstics including light source and power supply, picture mechanisms and projection methods.

The survey, revealed that the screen brightness of none of the drive-in theatres fell within nine-14 foot lambert range set for indoor theatres. In fact 82 per cent were below four foot lamberts. However, the survey also showed that low screen brightness in drive-in theatres is not due to large screen size alone. A great deal of low output equipment is used in the smaller theatres, as if low screen brightness had been a design objective.

Equipment performance and operator standards, nevertheless, were found to be entirely equivalent for indoor and drive-in theatres. Side-to-center distribution ratios and corner-to-corner distribution ratios were found be almost identical with those in indoor theatres except for the slight indication that the brightness in the corners of drive-in screens is frequently sacrificed in order to obtain higher brightness at the screen center.

In addition to the results of the drive-in survey, other screen brightness questions were discussed at a meeting of the Screen Brightness Committee, which is under the chairmanship of Frederick J. Kolb, Jr., Eastman Kodak. The position on screen brightness of the United States delegate to the International Standards Organization meeting in Stockholm, June 11-16, was established. The delegate, William F. Kelley, secretary-treasurer of the Motion Picture Research Council, was given authority to discuss a wider range of screen brightness than the currently established American standard of nine-14 foot lamberts, as well as factors relating to the use of directional screens.

The Committee also received the preliminary report of the Sub-Committee on Projection Screens. This group was authorized to carry out a three-fold program including:

1. A review of screen standards to determine whether or not the present standards should be retained or revised, the obsolete war standards should be proposed;
2. Consideration of the matter of classification of screen surfaces;
3. A survey of photometric methods as related to all types of projection screens and screen surfaces.

Huge Drive-In Tower Erected

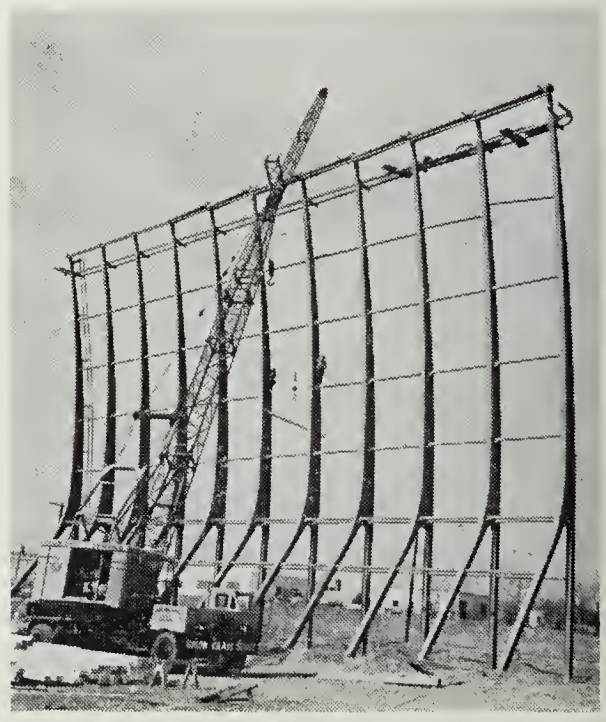
UNION, N. J.—The structural steel work on what is said to be the largest motion picture screen tower in the country has been completed at the Route 22 drive-in by the Elizabeth Iron Works, it was announced by Irving Diamond, vice-president of the steel firm.

"This screen tower marks a new milestone in outdoor theatre screen construction," Diamond said. "Our engineers designed and prefabricated it especially for this drive-in theatre. It has a tower height of 74 feet and a picture area of 6,200 square feet. The picture, itself, will be one of the largest projected on a screen of this type."

The size of the Route 22 screen will permit the theatre to show all the latest projection methods, including CinemaScope. In addition, Elizabeth Iron Works engineers have designed the screen so that the audience will get full viewing benefit of the picture from any spot in the drive-in.

Constructed of all-welded steel, and field bolted, the tower is tilted and tapered. Its design gives it a modern look that easily harmonizes with the surrounding landscape. A special screen surface has also been developed to give maximum color brilliancy for color movies.

All the structural steel towers are built to withstand a wind velocity of more than 100 miles per hour. The Route 22 tower, itself, was erected in less than six days working time.



Technicolor Advances Revealed By Kalmus

NEW YORK—An improved process for making Technicolor release prints by the imbibition process was revealed last week at an industry press conference conducted by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president and general manager of Technicolor, Inc.

Kalmus reported that the improvements involved, "changes in Technicolor matrices, in the Technicolor blank upon which it prints, in the printing procedure, and generally throughout the imbibition process."

A demonstration of the improved new process was conducted recently, Kalmus said, and the result "was the most wonderful picture in color made by any process that I have ever seen on the screen from all technical points of view, including sharpness or definition, and especially color rendition," Kalmus enthused.

Kalmus also stated that the new process embodied all the changes in the imbibition process that Technicolor has been working for since the advent of Eastman and Ansco color type negatives, and the introduction of large screens in theatres.

Commenting on the future as regards improvements in the manner of film presentation, Kalmus made the following remarks:

"It is the opinion of Technicolor that none of the existing processes of photographing and presenting motion pictures is the ultimate. Nor do we look for standardization in the immediate future. Eventually, we foresee an all-purpose process stemming from negatives of increased area (compared with the former standard of 35mm. negatives) from which prints may be made in the Technicolor laboratory for all purposes, whether for specialty theatres in the large cities, for general release in theatres equipped with standard 35mm. projectors, for 16mm. projection, or for television. Technicolor has appropriated substantial sums for research and development in this all-purpose field."

Low Cost Swimming Pool

in depth from three to five feet. Larger pools measure 16 by 32 feet, sloping from three to seven feet in depths, and 20 by 40 feet, sloping from three to eight feet.

The excavation is leveled off at the maximum depth of the liner and backfilled to the correct slope after the walls are built. This eliminates difficult staggered block construction and makes it possible to pour a concrete footing in a channel at the base of the side walls without using wooden forms. Level courses of concrete block are built up quickly from footing, working from the corners for a strong steady wall. Then two-by-10-inch boards are bolted to the top wall course to hold the flexible liner. Openings are also let into the wall to accommodate underwater lighting fixtures.

Before the swimming pool liner is fitted into the frame, the loose earth floor is tamped and sloped gradually. A backfill around the outside of the porous concrete block walls completes the pool frame.

The liner is unrolled on the loose earth floor. Sections of half-inch galvanized pipe through loops in the hem of the liner, weight it down over the edge of the pool.

Standard plumbing drains may be fitted to the bottom of the liner. Water pumps to empty the pool, or a recirculating filter system may also be attached.

The plastic liner resists chlorine and water-purifying chemicals, as well as grease, oils, and pool algae. All that is necessary to keep the pool liner in good condition is to wash it with soap and water, and a soft brush.

Humanitarian Award to Samuels

ALLENTOWN, PA.—The Benjamin Rush Award for 1955 has been conferred on Abram Samuels, president of Automatic Devices Company, manufacturer of curtain controls and equipment, for "humanitarian service."

In choosing Samuels for the honor given annually to a distinguished citizen of the county, the Lehigh County Medical Society cited his work particularly in the field of aid to crippled children and adults. And, while nominating him for the Benjamin Rush Award to be made by the Pennsylvania Medical Society, the Lehigh County group said:

"Automatic Devices Company, which he has headed as president since 1946, has laid down a consistent pattern of humanism at work, by employing handicapped persons in its manufacturing operations. Presently, this long-established manufacturer of curtain controls and equipment has a number of such employes on its payroll, including a paraplegic. In such practical fashion, Mr. Samuels has transmuted principles into action."

Triple-S Expands Facilities

SAN FRANCISCO—New and enlarged manufacturing and sales display headquarters have been established by the Triple-S-Supply Company here, at 780 Golden Gate Avenue, according to John Tierney, general manager.

"Changeable letter orders have been increasing at such a pace, we have been forced to increase our manufacturing space," Tierney stated, "and the addition of the Ballantyne Theatre equipment line has necessitated showroom display and sales space."

New Series Of Lenses From Projection Optics

The Projection Optics Company, Rochester, N. Y., recently announced the development and availability of their new Super Hilux f/1.0 Light Collecting Speed Anastigmat projection lenses. The following is the statement issued by the optical firm giving the details of this new aid to motion picture film projection:

"Two years ago when 3-D and wide screen projection was at the threshold, we decided that a whole new concept of projection lenses was required. Lenses then on the market were designed for the small screen era. We realized that the next requirements of projection lenses were to project and transmit light evenly over a screen size many times the old size, and that color correction over such a size would become an important issue.

"After careful review and study of all known lens types, and many hours of computation, we completed development of this new lens, which will be known as the Super Hilux f/1.0 Light Collecting Speed. We here at Projection Optics feel that this represents the optimum in color correction, flat field, definition, contrast, and most important of all, a means of getting considerably better light distribution across the screen and, have also managed to get noticeably more light transmission.

"In the past, the optical manufacturers throughout the world have used the f number to identify the free aperture opening of a given focal length. However, due to the limited technical knowledge of the public, such identification has been greatly misinterpreted as meaning 'a certain amount of light transmission.' Since this is not quite the truth, we have chosen a definition which actually can be used to measure a certain performance, and it is for this reason that we have decided to identify the Super Hilux series as f/1.0 Light Collecting Speed. Actually, there is no accepted standard for measuring light transmission, which is so vital to this theatre business. By measuring the actual amount of light the lens can collect the trade now has a definite guide.

The Super Hilux f/1.0 Light Collecting Speed Lens

"A paper covering the technical aspects of the Super Hilux was presented during one of the sessions at the recent SMPTE convention in Chicago. The paper was read by John R. Miles, head of the John R. Miles Company, one of the country's finest optical designers, who have handled all our research and design programs.

"Actual production on the Super Hilux has commenced and this new series will be available in effective focal lengths from 1.5 inches to seven inches in the 2 25/32 inch small diameter, and in effective focal lengths from 4.75 inches to 14 inches in the high speed four inch diameter mount. The focal lengths from 1.5 inches to three inches, and from seven inches to 14 inches will be available only on custom orders. The remainder of these lenses will be carried in stock."

Outdoor Screen Advertising

drive-in affords an excellent medium for reaching the family as a group in the privacy of their car. Man and wife, and other family members who are in a position to buy, have an excellent opportunity to discuss the items advertised at the time they see them on the screen. Automobile adverisers, for one, have been quick to realize the point of selling automobiles and automobile equipment to the audience that came to the drive-in in an automobile. Local advertisers realize that most of the people who attend the drive-in are their potential customers.

Some Reasons Why

Here are some of the reasons clients give for preferring screen advertising: Low-waste circulation with concentrated reader attention; local, sectional, or national coverage . . . excellent farm circulation; product demonstration with full color; action and sound . . . strong sales impact; easy to plan and use with the complete production-distribution service offered by the leading commercial film companies; surprisingly low cost . . . about one-third of a cent per reader-hearer; outstanding quality . . . assured by long production experience plus millions of dollars in production facilities and precision equipment.

A drive-in owner can do much to add to his revenue and enhance his entertainment program by showing quality ads from a realiable film company. The film company pays the drive-in for running the service, takes care of the problem of selling space on the screen, and collecting from the advertiser. All the theatre man must do is run the film as scheduled by agreement with the film company representative. The drive-in owner will find that theatre screen advertising, pleasingly and originally presented by a reliable company, is now accepted by all audiences. He will find that good advertising will bring favorable comment to his theatre as well as business to the merchants of his community who are having their ads placed on the screen.

Revenue is high with film advertising. Compared with the running time of feature films the average rate paid by the Alexander Film Company runs about four cents per minute higher on film ads than on feature material.

The major film commercial companies have grown right along with the entire movie industry. The latest developments in the field have been incorporated into their production to make them better than ever. Drive-in owners are urged to check advantages of screen advertising.

Colvin Aids Movie Festival

St. Louis—The Theatre Equipment Dealers' Association (TEDA) has arranged for Executive Director Ray G. Colvin to spend 30 days in Georgia, Alabama, and Florida during the Movie Festival to be staged by the exhibitors of these southeastern states. Playground Operation cases, we strongly recommend that the area around any play device be carefully cleared of rocks and anything that might injure a child if the child fell. It is highly desirable that the areas around these play items be dug up and replaced with soft sand. The sand is not only clean and porous, so that there is no drainage problem, but also provides a soft cushion if children do fall off any equipment—and they do fall.

In all of our drive-ins we have ponies and give free rides to the children. This, supplementing of our other stationary, or non-mechanical equipment, has been sufficient. Of course, in all cases, we dress up our areas, putting in, where space permits, picnic tables, cut-out figures of animals, or comic characters, umbrellas in some cases; in other words anything that will give the area a fresh, neat, and interesting appearance. And of course, lots of paint applied frequently to keep the area spic and span is of utmost importance.

Paid Rides

We have experimented with paid rides and find they have not been profitable. But may I again emphasize that this is based on our experience in our part of the country, and might not hold true in other areas. In the east, and particularly the northeast, there are many large kiddie play areas which operate during the day and which have 10, 15, or 20 large mechanical rides, including elaborate merry-go-rounds, whips, scooter cars, and devices of that sort. I would say that each of these devices purchased new would average out roughly $10,000 apiece, so that it would require a tremendous investment to purchase and set up a play area containing enough mechanical rides to warrant charging an admission for each ride. We have found that to do it half-way, putting in just one or two devices—does not pay. They just do not add up to enough of an attraction to be self-amortizing or, in some cases, to even pay the cost of help to man them and to collect admissions. A few drive-ins in the east have such big play areas with paid mechanical rides, but they are almost a separate operation from the drive-ins themselves, and unless a drive-in theatre operator is willing to make a big investment in such rides, and does not face stiff competition from outside play areas, I would recommend very careful thought before such a step is taken.

Supplementary Concession Booths

We have set up supplementary concession booths near our play areas and we have serviced some of them from carts, but our experience has proven over a period of years that the patron in the play area is quite willing to walk over to our Refreshery in our main projection building if he wants something to eat or drink. If a drive-in is considering such supplementary service I would recommend that the figures be very carefully checked to make sure that the cost of labor involved really makes such service economically worth while.

In our part of the country we feel that the patron expects these services for his children and that they must be provided in a clean, wholesome, well operated manner. This requires attention by the manager and that one of the field men need not necessarily be assigned specifically to the play area, but at least keeps his eye on proceedings while it is open. In our opinion, free play areas of this type, which are not expensive in the overall picture, are one of the big reasons why families come early to our theatres and consider our drive-ins a recreational center for an evening of enjoyment, and not just a place to go to see motion pictures from their cars.

It is suggested that part of the basic equipment at a drive-in playground should include non-mechanical merry-go-rounds, such as this model from the Miracle Whirl Sales Co., Grinnell, Ia.

New Orleans

W. O. Williamson, Jr., district manager, Warners, on his round of exchanges, visited with manager Lucas Conner and personnel. . . . The spotlight is focused on the eye catching front of theatre display advertising on "Revenge of the Creature," at the Joy. Developed under the direction of manager Ernest A. MacKenna, it portrays a vivid impression of what is being unreeled on the screen. Life sized pictures of the fabulous "Gill Man" in captivity, shackled with honest to goodness chains, his escape clutching on to the seized woman, scenes of the expedition along the Amazon which captures the monster, and a replica of the city fleeing in terror are featured.

A new RCA screen has been installed in Pittman's local Delta according to Raymond Gremillion, sales and service representative, Southeastern. . . . Harold "Babe" Cohen, Lippert, and southeastern district manager, Howco exchanges, is back at his desk after attending The Tri-State (Alabama, Georgia and Florida) annual convention in Atlanta. Miami

Edward N. Claughton, 60, vice-president and co-owner, Claughton Theatres, and one of Miami's realty and hotel investors, died at his home. He helped develop much of the Edison Center and Allapattah business areas, part of the old Royal Palm property in duPont plaza, and much of Boynton Beach. He died of cancer. Survivors are his wife, two sons, one daughter, and three grandchildren. A Variety Club member, he was active in the Variety Children's Hospital fund raising.

Proceeds from Variety Club Tent 33's Old Newsboys' Day sales passed $18,000. Last year's campaign netted $12,000. . . . A testimonial dinner to International Chief Barker George Hoover, who was a founder of Tent 33, Miami, is being planned for the latter part of May. . . . Maurey Ashmann, chief barker, Tent 33, Variety Club, headed the delegation to the international convention in Los Angeles. Others attending included Paul Bruun, delegate; Joe Lieber; and Hal Kopplin.

A heart-warming story in The Miami Herald won sports writer Luther Evans an award for the best article published anywhere about the Variety Club in the past year. Evans' story appeared after he toured Variety Children's Hospital as a new member, Tent 33, Variety Club. Joe Lieber, executive secretary, Tent 33, submitted Evans' story at the convention in competition with those turned in by other tents located all over the world. Maurcy Ashmann, chief barker, Tent 33, accepted the citation for Evans and The Herald.

Beatrice Eve, assistant, Bunche, Opalocka, Fla., is overjoyed at the prospect of seeing her son, Arthur, recently returned from overseas service in Germany. . . . Mel Haber, Carib, Miami Beach, Fla., recently was awarded the City of Miami Beach Courtesy Award for March. . . . The Miami quietly celebrated its eighth birthday last month. . . . Harry Troeger, Miami, was on a leave of absence. While he is gone, Robert West, Sr., formerly of the Town, will be greeting patrons at the door.

A "violent protest" was made by Judge Walter H. Beckham, Dade County Juvenile Court, against the showing of "Blackboard Jungle." Judge Beckham said that any theatre manager showing the film "possibly is guilty of contributing to juvenile delinquency." Spokesmen for the three local theatre chains, each of which is showing the film at a first-run house, defended the picture, explaining that it spotlighted a social problem in some communities and made a case for the need for better trained and better paid teachers. Judge Beckham's statement said the picture "shows a lawless element of school children taking over the school with many criminal acts, vile language, and portrays a group of teachers who are not typical of the average teacher in the American school today. It teaches no moral and has no proper ending. In fact, there seems to be no reason for such a picture ever having been filmed." He urged a local board of censors to preview and rate movies before they are shown to the public locally.

Durham

An attempt was made in the North Carolina Legislature at Raleigh, N. C., to exempt motion picture houses and drive-ins from a 25 per cent increase in privilege license fees which has been given tentative approval. Representative Carroll Holmes, Perquimans, who instigated the move, pointed out that the tax now ranges from $225 to $1,000 per year and that motion picture houses are finding the going rough from TV competition. After being told that the proposed increase was a "package deal" and that to open it for various groups in the dying days of the Legislature would prolong the session, he withdrew his amendment and said he would try to give movie houses relief in a separate bill.

The Capitol, one of Raleigh, N. C.'s oldest and formerly its best known theatre, has closed because of diminishing revenues. Decision to close the house was announced by W. G. Enloe, district manager, North Carolina Theatres, Inc. Enloe said that first-run houses have not suffered the impact of television severely, but that the "B type" houses, one of which the Capitol had become, have been hard hit. No motion picture company, he said, is making a product especially for these houses, and the producers are concentrating on fewer and better films. The Capitol, Enloe said, has run in the red for some time and with a diminishing revenue, "we just can't afford to buy new license on this type of theatre." North Carolina Theatres has a lease on the building which still has several years to run, but Enloe said it had "no present plans for using the building" or of converting it to other uses. James Carver, manager, Capitol, will remain with North Carolina Theatres in another assignment, he said.

Cincinnati

20th-Fox's "Daddy Long Legs" probably got more pre-showing bally than any film ever screened locally, when it was tied in with "Downtown Discovery Days," a 10-day promotion of downtown stores. Numerous stories with art were splashed on first pages of local newspapers for several days before the film opened at the Keith. Starlets Robert Wagner and Mary Murphy were brought in from Hollywood to highlight the razzle-dazzle in front of the house on opening night, and a squad of police were required to handle the hundreds of autograph and camera fans. "It's hard to believe that it happened in staid, conservative Cincinnati," one newspaper commented next day.

Most live shows headed this way next season will be housed in the Shubert, with fate of the Cox and Taft presently unknown. The Shubert had been leased for 20 years to RKO as a movie house, but had been dark during recent years, except when occupied by revivalists.

Phil Chakeres, president, and Frank Collins, general manager, Chakeres Circuit, Springfield, O., visited circuit houses in Kentucky. . . . Dorothy Kelly is new secretary for Ray Frisz of the Chakeres office. . . . Traditional Friday the 13th showings of horror films in Chakeres houses attracted good boxoffice. . . . The local Columbia branch is readying promotions for "Cell 2455, Death Row" and "Seminole Uprising" for saturation bookings starting in mid-June. . . . Typed invitations to trade screenings are old hat to exhibitors, so they got a kick out of the swank printed invitation mailed by the local Warner office for the "Mister Roberts" prevue at the nabe Valley.

New Censor Law Drafted in Ohio

COLUMBUS — Mrs. W. Andrew Martin, chairman, Committee For Decent Films in Ohio, denied any knowledge of the film clips from censored movies shown to members of the Ohio Legislature allegedly in an effort to influence their votes on censorship. Mrs. Martin's committee has been accused of arranging the screening. She said she had never had the films, did not handle them, and does not know where they came from. She is reported to have received letters from RKO and the Times Film Corporation asking for immediate return of the film. Mrs. Martin said the matter has been turned over to her attorney, John Caren, Bricker, Marburger, Evatt, and Barton law office in Columbus. Caren refused to comment on the matter.

Current film censorship bills before the Legislature should be defeated, said The Dayton News and The Springfield News, both owned by James A. Cox, former governor of Ohio. The original state censorship law was passed during Governor Cox's term in 1913. The editorial comment is the first expression from the Cox newspapers in the current censorship fight.

"The censorship bills are rooted in a sound public concern over the rising rate of juvenile delinquency," said the editorials, "but the censorship bills pose dangers in excess of those they are trying to do away with."

The papers pointed to the industry's self-policing as a safeguard against showing "improper" films to children. "Alert parents, conscientious newspaper critics and vigilant church groups" also can exert influence against objectionable films. The editorials said that "there are long-established criminal penalties for those who exhibit obscene films."

Following is the language of House Bill 29, the revised film censorship bill now under consideration by the House Judiciary committee, in defining obscenity and incitement to crime:

"A film or portion thereof is obscene, lewd or lascivious if it depicts an act of sexual intercourse or sodomy; portrays the genitals or genital regions of man or woman; portrays an act of sexual immorality or sexual perversion; expressly or by reasonable implication presents as an acceptable or proper pattern of social behavior either fornication, adultery, rape, seduction, prostitution, sodomy; is in dominant purpose and effect either erotic or pornographic; employs language or depicts conduct of moral depravity.

A film is advocative or provocative of immediate crime or jeopardy to public safety if it advocates or provokes an immediate breach of the peace; portrays or presents as socially desirable, acceptable, or respectable behavior the commission of acts which are criminal by laws of the state of Ohio or the United States; advocates or teaches the illegal use or the methods of illegal use of narcotics or habit-forming drugs; advocates or provokes the immediate commission of acts which are criminal by the laws of the state of Ohio or the United States; portrays the use of any medicine, drug, substance or instrument by which the miscarriage of a woman is procured.

The exhibitor, as well as the distributor and producer, is liable to a fine for showing unlicensed films. For the first offense the fine is from $25 to $300. For subsequent offenses the fine is from $300 to $500.

In House Bill 712, which would ban obscene comic books and films, there is a fine of not more than $1,000 or six months in jail for showing films to minors under 18 "any part of which is obscene or has a tendency to corrupt morals."

In the same bill there also is a fine of $5,000 or six months in jail or both for violations of the following section:

"No person shall produce, sell, lease, lend, give away, distribute for purposes of exhibition, exhibit, or have in his possession or under his control for any purpose, an obscene motion picture film or any motion picture film, the exhibition of which has created a public disorder, or from the exhibition of which a public disorder is imminent."

With the coming of summer, Harry Fry, Wampum, Wampum, Pa., has shipped his boat to Erie, Pa., and expects it to be in the water by the first of June. . . . Andy Biordi, Majestic, Ellwood City, Pa., will start a Bank Night midweek, replacing his Bingo nights.

Plans were being completed for the celebration of the 50th anniversary of John Harris' opening of the first nickelodeon. It is hoped to attract to this event the Governor and other state and city dignitaries, as well as many prominent industryites.

Daytime use of several neighborhood theatres' parking lots may be asked by the city if a proposed "park and ride" plan is adopted. Dr. Ivan Ulrey, the city's utilities director, suggested that such lots could be used in daytime hours when most theatres are closed. Motorists would drive to the lots from outlying areas and then board buses for the remainder of the trip downtown. Initially, the plan would be confined to main thoroughfares with bus lines, such as Broad Street, High Street, Cleveland Avenue, and Sullivant Avenue.

Toll-TV Enemies Hypo Campaign

Chicago—In a move initiated by Alderman Daniel J. Ronan, 30th Ward, the Chicago City Council voted unanimously to refer a previously approved resolution petitioning the Federal Communications Commission for approval of subscription television to its judiciary committee for public hearng.

At a meeting the same week called by Allied Theatres of Illinois, Inc., and the local Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, Chicago area and downstate exhibitors mapped out plans to enlist the aid of Illinois citizens and business groups against toll-TV, and for Chicago exhibitors to urge their aldermen to eventually reverse the City Council resolution seeking FCC licensing. The first retail group to join the opposition is the Chicago Retail Merchants Association, and other business groups are expected to take a similar position. Members were urged again to write letters and pass resolutions addressed to the FCC and the Illinois General Assembly, working at the same time to approach newspapers, radio and TV broadcasters, transportation companies, and many other organizations, to explain at the community level the vital effect toll-TV would have on the American economy.

Jack Kirsch, ATI president, said the outcome depends largely on the grassroots efforts of exhibitors. In a prepared statement the following week, Kirsch attacked the "reckless charges" against motion pictures theatres made by Zenith Radio Corporation, and said that Chicago, home of Zenith's toll-TV system, is kept "in the dark" about the real issues at stake. He referred to a rumor that Zenith has no intention of eliminating advertisers from its coin-box programs, and retaliated to the recent statement by Zenith head E. F. McDonald, Jr., that exhibitors have contributed nothing to entertainment but "colored popcorn," by saying that the color of the "corn" that will fill pay channels will destroy free-TV which, like the theatres, safeguards the freedom of choice. Zenith, he charged, seeks an entertainment monopoly, having persuaded advocates that the coin set will provide the fine entertainment now too costly for advertisers to put on free-TV, oblivious that baseball, for instance, has been one of the joys of free-TV which will likely disappear to the pay channels if they are approved. "Any reasonable person," he concluded, "can figure out that with the tremendous drain on talent to supply existing . . . outlets, toll-TV . . . would put a quick end to free-TV."

Organizations for Free TV were heard from in the Chicago Sun-Times, which published a letter from co-chairmen Trueman T. Rembusch and Alfred Starr endeavoring to refute that paper's pro-toll television editorial policy. They pointed out that the viewer not wishing to pay is deprived of the toll-captured channel, and that in a one- or two-station community a partial or complete TV blackout would result, which is a limitation opposed to the public interest. Millions of Americans, the chairmen said, would be deprived of channels licensed by the FCC with the understanding that they would provide the best programming possible to the consumer.

Research in Illinois and Iowa have disclosed the fact that theatre closings have a deterrent effect on the business of merchants within the theatre areas. This situation was explained by Ray G. Colvin, board member, Council of Motion Picture Organizations, in an address before the Optimists Club, Springfield, Ill. He explained the strong relation between the presence or lack of motion picture theatres in all towns and cities. He advised the businessmen to take further interest in the success of theatres.

In Herrin, Ill., funeral services for Bart Meinardi, 75, father of John Meinardi, district manager, Fox Midwest Theatres, were conducted at Johnson Funeral Home here. . . . The threat of another concerted effort by Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter, local Archdiocese of the Catholic Church, to curb attendance at some theatres because of their film programs is seen in an official pronouncement by the local Legion of Decency carried in a two-column box layout on the first page of the St. Louis Register, official Catholic weekly newspaper. "Just six months ago all the faithful made the pledge of the Legion of Decency; they promised to form a right conscience about pictures dangerous to their moral life; and they promised to stay away from them. Finally, they promised to stay away altogether from places of amusement which show such pictures as a matter of policy. Currently, a concert effort seems underway to flood the entertainment world with pictures that are an outrage to true Christian morality. Consequently, during this month of May, it is most opportune to renew the pledge and to carry it into effect by consulting the church or school bulletin board for the rating of current shows; by attending only A-1 or A-2 movies and remaining away from all others; and by refraining from patronizing all places of amusement that show condemned movies as a matter of policy."

NEWS OF THE Territory

Boston Crosstown

Edward Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New Engand, called a meeting of the drive-in association to report on the progress of the insurance committee which is seeking a re-appraisal of the insurance rates for workmen's compensation in the Commonwealth. As it stands today, the Commissioner of Insurance in the Commonwealth has placed drive-ins under the same classification as parking lots, garages, restaurant lots, and other hazardous businesses, with the same insurance rates. The committee is seeking to have the Commissioner place drive-ins in a special classification of its own with lower insurance rates. To back up its appeal, the committee has furnished the commissioner with statistics of actual experiences in drive-ins over the past 10 years. Should the Commissioner change the classification and go along with the contentions of the committee, every drive-in in the country could be favorably affected by the lowered insurance rates.

Decision on a request by James B. Sniffen for a reversal of the Stratford Planning Board action, which denied him a waiver for a drive-in on South Main Street, was reserved last week by the Board of Zoning Appeals. Opponents to the Sniffen petition included Albert M. Pickus, owner-operator, Stratford, and a TOA vice-president.

$4,000,000 Damages Sought In Two Anti-Trust Actions

CONCORD, N. H.—Anti-trust suits have been filed in Federal court here to the tune of $4,000,000 against eight major motion picture producing and distributing companies.

Warners, Paramount, Loew's, Inc., 20th-Fox, RKO, United Artists, U-I, and Columbia are defendants in the suits which charge violations of the Sherman and Clayton Anti-Trust Acts.

One suit was brought by Baruch S. LeWitt and Margaret L. Gloking, owners and operators, Arch Street, New Britain, Conn., and the second suit was brought by Miriam Z. LeWitt, owner and operator, Strand, Plainville, Conn. Both actions contain three counts each and both ask $2,000,000.

The complaints charge that the producers and distributors combined unlawfully, and conspired to restrain and monopolize interstate trade in motion pictures, and to eliminate competition by means of controls on production, distribution and prices. A jury trial is asked in each case.

The law firm of Devine and Millimet represents the plaintiffs, and Wyman, Starr, Booth, Wadleigh and Langdell, Manchester, Conn., represents the film companies.

Winsted

The case of the Torrington Drive-In Corporation against Theodore Zolli, Torrington, was settled out of court with terms not disclosed. Before Judge John H. King, the case got under way in Winsted Superior Court with the drive-in concern seeking $50,000 damages, claiming breach of contract and faulty construction at the theatre, situated in Burrville. The plaintiffs had charged that there were landslides from nearby embankments, which clogged gutters and led to faulty drainage conditions. The defense charged that there was no breach of contract because plans and specifications which the plaintiff was to provide under terms of a contract were never supplied.

Massachusetts

Springfield

Al Clark, manager, Bijou, used a tried and always effective means of telling Springfield that Columbia's "5 Against the House" was playing the Bijou. Clark prepared 4,000 paper bags with imprinted cast and credits information, and lined up eight supermarkets who used the bags two days prior to the opening of the picture.

Worcester

Loew's Poli New England circuit has sold the Elm Street for $152,000 to Bertram and Lena Handleman, real estate investors, who will demolish the theatre and erect a multi-deck parking garage.

New Hampshire

Manchester

Bernie Menschell and John Calvoressci, operators, Manchester Drive-In; the Star, Hartford; and Plainfield, Plainfield, said last week that they are prepared to branch out. "We're looking around for more theatres now, both hardtop and drive-in varieties," the partners' statement said. "The movie business is going to boom again, we're sure of that. People are tiring of television and the low grade movies they use. They're starting to come back to the theatres and before long things will pick up considerably."

Meredith

The Key placed a line in its ad for "Cell 2455, Death Row," that it was not recommended by the theatre for children.

Nashua

The Park gave away free comic books to school children patrons and held a big kiddies auction on their stage at a special Saturday showing during a week while school was in recess.

Newington

The Newington Outdoor Theatre has held its grand reopening with free treats to all who attended the first show of the season.

Rhode Island

Providence

The Hope, East Side neighborhood house, has been staging a series of yo-yo contests at Saturday matinees, with the grand prize being an Armstrong English bicycle. The same type of promotion is also being featured at The Castle, in the Mount Pleasant district, in the effort to boost kiddie attendance substantially.

All hapless male citizens who escaped the siren call of spring had their red corpuscles recharged when a 52-foot high figure of Marilyn Monroe went up on the front of Broadway's Loew's State Building. The figure, soaring some four and one-half stories above the marquee, shows Marilyn in the famed billowing skirt pose, a photo which made news-picture history around the world when it was snapped here during filming of location sequences of "The Seven Year Itch," due to open at the State on June 3.

Edward F. Lomba, South African director, 20th-Fox's International Corporation, was in for home office conferences with president Murray Silverstone, as were Albert Cornfield, managing director, Europe and England; and Albert Leonard, 20th-Fox's office in Caracas. . . . Sandra Gordon, secretary to 20th-Fox executive assistant general sales manager W. C. Gehring, was married to Frank Popovich, New York. The wedding was held at the Cathedral of St. Sava.

Max E. Youngstein, vice-president, United Artists, returned to the home office from England and Europe. . . . Dr. Renato Gualino, president, IFE, returned to Italy after a two-week business trip to the company's New York offices.

James Velde, UA western division manager, left for a one-week visit to the company's California branches. . . . Hazard E. Reeves, president, Cinerama, Inc., left by plane for Paris to supervise the opening of the Empire, in which his company has installed its sound and projection equipment. The Parisian installation is the 19th theatre showing Cinerama productions. Others going over were Harry M. Kalmine, general manager and vice-president, Stanley Warner Corporation, his wife, and Arthur Rosen, assistant Nat Lapkin, vice-president in charge of production, who is special representative of his father, Sam Rosen, executive vice-president, Stanley Warner Corporation.

Steve Broidy, Allied Artists president, came in from the coast for conferences with Edward Morey, vice-president; Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager; and Norton V. Ritchey, president, Allied Artists International.

Marvin Kirsch, Radio Daily executive, and Harold Rinzler, Randforce Theatres executive, have been appointed co-chairmen of the Fourth Annual Film Industry Golf Tournament being sponsored by New York's Cinema Lodge, B'nai B'rith at Vernon Hills Country Club, Tuckahoe, N. Y., on June 9. Martin Levine is chairman of the event, and committee members include Dave Bader, Glenn Ford recently signed a five-year contract with MGM following his roles in "Blackboard Jungle" and "Interrupted Melody," and on his first visit to the home office was surrounded by the girls of the publicity, advertising, and exploitation departments.

Herb Berg, Dave Dash, Jack Hoffberg, Milton Livingston, Don Mersereau, Alan Robbins, Burton Robbins, Norman Robbins, Milton J. Salzburg, and Cy Seymour. Reservations are being accepted at the Cinema Lodge office for the tournament and banquet dinner which will conclude the events of the day.

Brooke Dennis, director, Barbizon School of Modeling, and Lester Grady, member of the Paramount home office publicity department, were married on May 22 at the Community Church.

John Glass, general manager, Hoyt's Theatres, Ltd., Australia, arrived from London enroute to Los Angeles on a business trip. Spyros P. Skouras, president, 20th-Fox, presented a dinner in his honor at the Metropolitan Club, which was attended by top company and industry figures.

New Jersey

Newark

On recent Saturday matinees, the Ritz, Elizabeth, N. J., presented on the stage, Di'Zinno's Accordion Band, and a Kiddie Review. . . . The DeWitt, Bayonne, N. J., presented a Punch and Judy show for the children.

The fourth week winners in the Stanley-Warner Spring Festival Drive were Al Barilla, Union, Union, for the best adult activity, and Morty Bratter, manager, Millburn, Millburn, for the best children's activity. The April winners for the best overall series of promotions were, first prize, George Kemp, manager, Montauk, Passaic; second prize, Diane Gordon, manageress, Central, Jersey City; and third prize to Adolph Finkelstein, Embassy, Orange.

Miss Diane Gordon, manager, Central, Jersey City, has been promoted to become manager of the Oritani, Hackensack. She was feted at a luncheon by the merchants and notables of the city of Hackensack.

Anne Hamill, Stanley-Warner contact department, celebrated a birthday on May 14.

The Marciano-Cockell championship fight was telecast at the Branford, Newark; Fabian, Paterson, and Stanley, Jersey City.

New York State

Albany

Area prize-fight enthusiasts had their pick of two theatres, Grand, Albany, and Proctor's, Troy, for the closed circuit telecast of Marciano-Cockell world heavyweight championship contest. Both houses charged $3.30, tax included.

Teen-age "rock 'n roll" exuberants welcomed the news that Bill Haley's Comets would give two performances in the Grand on May 24. Admission was set at $1.50. It was reported that an Albany music salesman arranged with Paul Wallen for use of the theatre that evening. . . . Fabian's Plaza, Schenectady, presented a stage-and-screen horror show at Saturday midnight. Admission was $1.

The Variety Club annual golf tournament has been tentatively set for June 6 at the Shaker Ridge Country Club, Colonie. A dinner in the attractive clubhouse will climax the day. The committee comprises Aaron and Nate Winig, who are also members of Shaker Ridge; Ken Farrar, Norman Jackter, and Chief Barker George H. Schenck.

The Variety Club finalized its decision to occupy new quarters in Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel when officers signed a three-year lease on a large section of the former first-floor Rose Lounge. Chief Barker George H. Schenck and his associates did so after inspecting the site with managing director George B. Chelius, Jr., a Tent Nine member, and discussing details about furnishings and decorations. The move-in date will be Sept. 1. A house committee consisting of Jack Goldberg, MGM manager; Lewis A. Sumberg, film attorney and club property master; Leo Rosen, manager, Schine-owned Station WPTR; Harry Lamont, former chief barker; and Gene Teper, has been appointed. Palace theatre has been used for five years.

The New York State Association of Motion Picture Projectionists, convening here for one day, voted to oppose toll television. All locals will write letters of protest to the Federal Communications Commission, which is receiving opinions, pro and con, until June 9; also, to television-set manufacturers proposing the pay-as-you-see video plan. Zenith is presumably a special target. James J. Brennan, New York, first vice-president, urged "operators throughout the nation to fight toll television." He predicted it "will close down the small theatres in outlying districts and could very well close down small establishments, such as candy stores and soda fountains, which rely on the theatres' customers for their business." Should the subscription idea for television catch on big, theatre attendance probably would drop, and accordingly, the need for motion picture projectionists would decrease.

Following completion of wide-screen extension and installation of CinemaScope lenses at Sunset Drive-In, Kingston, Harry Lamont pressed forward on similar projects at Riverview Drive-In, Rotterdam, and Vail Mills Drive-In, Vail Mills. . . . Dollar nights are being observed by several drive-ins.

Bill With, Palace manager, arranged with Armour and Company's Albany plant for a gift to the first 100 women attending the premiere matinee of "The Prodigal." . . . Frank Bornhorst is a new night assistant at the Palace. He replaced Mike Maccochiero, who shifted to Mohawk Drive-In.

Menands Drive-In, Albany-Troy road, recently became the scene of Sunday morning community worship, arranged by the pastor of a Troy Baptist Church. Similar services are held from mid-June to September, under the direction of a Glens Falls Lutheran minister, at Jules Perlmutter's Fort George Drive-In, Lake George.

Albany has recently seen plenty of 20th-Fox visitors. C. Glenn Norris, eastern sales manager; Jack Bloom, his aide; Charles Cosco, Buffalo manager; and Izzy Schmerz, Cleveland chief, stopped at Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel en route to and from Schine Circuit base in Gloversville, N. Y. Clayton Eastman, Albany manager, accompanied them to Gloversville. Later, Sam Diamond, Philadelphia manager, came here for a meeting with Eastman.

An Albany paper printed a photograph of Jack Goldberg, MGM resident manager, and Mrs. Goldberg boarding a plane in New York for Los Angeles. Goldberg, a delegate from Tent Nine to the Variety Clubs International convention, also planned a visit with his wife to the MGM studios and a trip to San Francisco during the three-week vacation.

Stanley Kositsky, United Artists Buffalo manager; Albany booker Ray Powers; and Albany salesman Burt Toppal put heads together during a visit here by Kositsky. The branch boss also made several circuit calls.

Sanford Bookstein, certified public accountant, who recently served as an officer with the Navy in the Far East, is new treasurer and comptroller, Hellman Enterprises, Inc. President Neil Hellman announced the appointment, effective immediately. Bookstein, a graduate of Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, is serving in an official capacity for an organization that operates the recently-opened and swank Town Manor Motor Hotel on Northern Boulevard in Albany, the two-year-old Mount Vernon Motel in East Greenbush, Auto-Vision Theatre, East Greenbush, Lincoln Drive-In, Philadelphia, and Roosevelt Drive-In, Levittown, Pa. Two Hellman indoor houses, Paramount and Royal, here, are closed. Bookstein is a director of Albany Jewish Community Center.

Buffalo

President Constantine J. Basil, Basil Enterprises, has announced the signing of a new long term contract with George H. Mackenna as general manager and managing director, Basil's Lafayette. The contract will run until 1960.

Charlies McKernan, Seneca, and Bill Colson, Niagara, both put on special horror shows at midnight on Friday the 13th and packed 'em in after an extensive advertising program. . . . Balked in a holdup in the Park Drive-In, West Seneca, two masked gunmen fled in a stolen car the other night when an employee of the outdoorer telephoned police. A thug fired a shot at the cashier's cage. Frank Stephen is the owner.

The deadline for filing applications for this year's motion picture operator's examination came and went. City License Director Edwin L. Kantowski announced that the examination, first in Buffalo since December, 1953, will be conducted in two parts under direction of the city's newly appointed motion picture operators' examining board. Stanley Kozanowski, manager, Rivoli, is chairman. Kantowski said the examination is open to all persons having at least six months' practical experience under a duly-licensed operator.

Top brass of the Air Force, as well as Air Force Reserve, Civil Defense officials, radio, TV, and newspaper folk, attended a private screening at the Paramount of "Strategic Air Command," on which E. J. Wall, field representative, Paramount, has been in assisting Arthur Krolick and Charles B. Taylor, UPT, on the advance promotion. . . . Nat Marcus, manager, Warners branch, issued invitations for a special screening of "Mr. Roberts," in the Center, which was attended by newspaper, radio, TV folks, as well as local theatre group officers.

Leonardtown

To disprove that Friday, the 13th is an unlucky day, the Park, Lexington Park, Md., gave free passes to future shows to all lucky persons whose ticket stubs bore the number 13. . . . T. L. Harrison, general manager, Southern Maryland Theatres, Inc., now has his office in the Park, Lexington Park, Md. . . . A special screening of "The Eternal Sea" was held at the Park, Lexington Park, Md., for the wives of naval personnel at the Patuxent River U. S. Naval Air Test Center. . . . The New held a Walt Disney cartoon festival for the kiddies recently and it proved a success. . . . The movie schedules and information about current pictures are now broadcast over the loud speakers at the auto hot rod track operated by Bill Sanner, near Lexington Park, Md., and recently opened. . . . Jack Fruchtman, head, Southern Maryland Theatres, Inc., returned from California, where he attended the Variety Clubs International convention.

Allentown

The Super Skyway and West End Drive-Ins, the former at the end of the thruway by-passing Allentown, both operated by Manos Theatres, were given over on a recent Monday, to a benefit in behalf of the deficit fund of the Allentown Free Library. Sponsors of the benefit were the Allentown Junior Chamber of Commerce, backed by the PTA organizations and by the Ministers League of Allentown. Manager Sol Shockor, of the two drive-ins, and Tony Nastasee, who manages the Super Skyway, arranged for an exceptional two-hour program. At the West End, the patrons were entertained by the South Mountain High School Band; Tallmaniers, musical organization; and Harry Starkey, ventriloquist. Super Skyway patrons heard the Parkland High School Band; Joey Petersack and his orchestra; and saw Jimmy Johnson and his trained dog and bird act. Both spots also had double features.

"Tony" Nastasee, manager, Super Skyway, Kuhnsville, Pa., and Mrs. Nastasee welcomed a third son into their family on May 3 at St. Luke's Hospital, Bethlehem. The family resides at Hellertown. David Mark, the newcomer, weighed a half ounce short of eight pounds. He has Anthony Joseph, three, and Frank Daniel, two, to welcome him.

Repairs to the sign at West End Drive-In, and to Hurricane Hazel damages at the Super Skyway, both slight, were completed before the season's openings.

The Variety Club of Washington recently selected Mrs. Richard M. Nixon, wife of the vice-president of the United States, as its "Mother of the Year" at a luncheon held in the Shoreham Hotel. Seen, left to right, are Milton S. Kronheim, chairman of the luncheon committee; Mrs. Nixon, holding the locket presented to her by the Club; Vice-President Richard M. Nixon; and Phil Isaacs, first assistant chief barker, Tent 11.

Harrisburg

Victoria M. Vogler, chairman, theatre group, reported that a total of $1,612.22 was made by local theatres in the recent March of Dimes Drive. The breakdown showed totals as follows, Grand, $120.40; Loew's, $357.27; National, $46.75; Paxtang, $127.83; Penway, $215.19; Senate, $464.86; State, $31.63; Rialto, $120.50; and Uptown, $127.79.

State manager E. C. Wollaston employed an extensive press, radio, and TV advertising campaign to bally the closed circuit TV telecast of the Marciano-Cockell fight. . . . Harry Smith, 65, operator, Colonial, for over 25 years, died. He was off sick for a year with a heart condition. He is survived by his widow and two sons. . . . B. J. Bispeck, Senate manager, took a prominent role in Harrisburg's observance of Freedom Day.

Dr. Samuel Goldstein is having the inside of his Paxtang redecorated. "Figure if we're to go broke we might as well do it in style," said the good doctor.

Reading

The Laurel, a small house in Laureldale Borough, north of Reading, was sold for a nominal consideration, $10, subject to mortgage of $16,194 and unpaid taxes, at sheriff's sale to John G. Rothermel, attorney. It was closed some weeks ago. It will be sold to the Borough for use as a hall. For a time it was operated by Harry Friedland, manager and lessee, Majestic, Mt. Penn, Pa. Previously it was owned and operated by Sam Felt.

Manager Emanuel Rosenberg, Park, booked a Friday midnight horror show, at $1.00 admission. The bill was "Frankenstein," with "Count Maurice's Ghosts" in a stage show, and a horror movie, "The Cat Creeps."

Dr. Harry J. Schad, president, Schad Theatres, Inc., and Earl Hinkle, manager, Strand, were hosts to 45 directors and guests of the Home for Widows and Single Women, this city, at a Mother's Day showing at the Strand.

THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW

—about this service— THE CHECK-UP

This every-second-week regular department is NOT just an index as published in many other trade papers.

THE CHECK-UP is an exclusive EXHIBITOR service. Started many years ago, it represents a complete, unmatchable . . .

CAPSULE SUMMARY

. . . of ALL Features and of ALL Shorts that have been released and reviewed during the last 9 Months, . . . PLUS information on all that are in production for early release.

WITH THE CHECK-UP AT HAND—

. . . it is NOT necessary to go to your file or to look up a complete Review in order to find:

1. TITLE
2. TYPE OF SHOW
3. COLOR or BLACK AND WHITE
4. LEADING PLAYERS
5. ONE-LINE CRITICISM
6. RUNNING TIME
7. PRODUCTION NUMBER
8. DATE OF COMPLETE REVIEW
9. LEGION OF DECENCY RATING

They are all right here in THE CHECK-UP. And you need only save it for two weeks,— for it will be up-to-date the next time issued.

Pictures in order of release, with principal players, and producing company. Release dates are subject to change. Check your local exchange for current release date of any title. Holidays and special events will be found at the bottom of this page. This chart is kept as up-to-date as possible on information made available by the home office.

AND FEATURING: EXTRA PROFITS

Eric Johnston last week gave a vote of confidence to the administration of the Production Code and said no changes were contemplated despite attacks on the group made recently by Legion of Decency officials.

LOOK looks at M-G-M's "LOVE ME OR LEAVE ME" and loves it!

In its issue, out May 31st, LOOK Magazine runs a 2-page spread with beautiful color art on "LOVE ME OR LEAVE ME." Be sure to display it in your lobby. It will help sell tickets. With permission of LOOK we reprint the following:

'A true story of a singer and a gangster makes a fine film.

'LOVE ME OR LEAVE ME' is based on the life of a singer of the 1920s, Ruth Etting. This M-G-M film tells a story of her marriage to a racketeer, Martin (the 'Gimp') Snyder, and the real names of both are used. The 'Gimp' is shown promoting Ruth's career by strong-arm tactics. Their relationship is dramatized with such explosive realism that audiences are never sure how the picture will end — a novelty for biographical movies. Under director Charles Vidor, Doris Day and James Cagney give dazzling performances as the mismated pair."

"I'll kill you if I ever catch you hanging around her!" The "Gimp" (James Cagney) bursts into the house of a musician friend (Cameron Mitchell), looking for runaway Ruth (Doris Day). All three participants in this show-business tragedy are still living.

AN EXPERIENCED SHOWMAN HELPS THE LEGION OF DECENCY

WHILE WE EXPECT no gratitude for our efforts, particularly in view of the close ties which are known to exist between the Legion of Decency and another contemporary, we do believe that there is some helpful criticism and well-founded advice that could prove of service to the Legion.

But first, let us point out that we are not the official organ or representative for any one religion, or for any one moral group or opinion. We respect everything that contributes to wholesome coexistence; but our primary objective is to serve well the motion picture theatre industry. If we have bias, it will be toward the motion picture theatre industry. Because, you see, ours is a motion picture theatre industry trade paper.

And now to the criticism and advice, based on more than 40 years of motion picture industry experience:

1. Because the big majority of all of those occupied in production for the 10 or 12 major distribution outlets are conscientiously trying to maintain good taste and a high moral tone in the nation's movie entertainment, justice and good old American fair play should dictate that transgressors of Legion of Decency standards, or any other moral standards, should be specifically named by picture, by company, and by individual; and general charges such as made by Father Little recently should never be leveled against the whole industry—fringe opportunists and honorable citizens alike. By the Legion's own list of May 19, 1955, (after "Son Of Sinbad"), out of 245 domestic features in all categories of acceptability, there are only three releases (one per cent) by domestic major distributing outlets that have received the Legion's "C" or condemned rating. As a direct contrast, out of 82 listed foreign features, mostly from Europe, a total of 55 (67 per cent) have been condemned. But American producers have no connection whatsoever with these imports, and American major distributors don't distribute them. As a matter of fact they are competitors. So let's be fair about it, and let's not blanket the American industry with a condemnation or a scathing reference that is only guilt by association.

2. While the Legion of Decency is entitled to set up its own rules applying to its own membership, there is always a need for judgment and discretion in the application of rules that can only come with training and experience. We know that screening committees of Mrs. Looram's ladies can fluctuate from 3 to 73, dependent on the importance of, and the advance publicity given to, the particular picture. All, it seems, are members of the Legion of Decency; and, whether 3 or 73, all are entitled to express an opinion on the particular picture's moral values. Proof that these ladies, while possibly beautifully educated in the finest convent school and colleges, are neither trained nor experienced critics suitable to judge for mass intelligence, can be found in a current feature in which the producer chose to have some completely unnecessary and thoroughly vulgar gestures featured in camera closeups. Either the ladies didn't recognize the gutter significance of these gestures, or they were ashamed to admit that they did. For this picture, jockied by an "expert," enjoys a Legion of Decency "B."

We submit that a small compact committee of clergy, particularly if drawn from the intelligent parish mission and parish priest field, where they rub shoulders with and understand the moods and intelligence of the masses, would be much better qualified to begin with, and would stand a much better chance to gain the necessary training and experience, than Mrs. Looram's ladies. At least they would face problems as realists, and not as something to titter over and tell "the girls" at bridge club. Oh, for a Bishop Sheen to head a clerical group!

3. However good-intentioned may be the objectives of the Legion of Decency, it should be remembered that their "C" or condemned rating is not necessarily a box-office killer. If a feature is pretty poor entertainment to begin with, a "C" rating can kill it altogether, because the word gets around that it is a bad picture, and the "C" furnishes theatremen, who now don't want to live up to their contracts and play it anyway, with a reason for cancelling their contracts. But if a feature is well done, cleverly written, and entertaining, and if the same feature gets a "C" rating for its moral shortcomings, such a rating serves to add a promise of spice to its viewing, and furnishes a reference index for even such Catholics

Dear Jay:

Your editorial, "The Noose Hangs High," in your issue of April 27, 1955, left me as would the kick of a mule. It was several minutes before both my desk and chair stopped reverberating. Some way should be found to put this on a record for all to hear—preferably high fidelity and long-playing.

Dear Sir:

I received my Date Book and after careful inspection I would like to go on record as saying that it is the nicest and most well made note and date book I have had the pleasure of seeing. It is well worth every penny asked for it. I am enclosing a money-order for the amount of $4.60 as payment for my date book. I would like to know if it is possible to obtain date book sheets dating from the first of April as I am very anxious to put my book to work. Is there a service manual published for the staff of an indoor theatre? If so, I would appreciate your including six of these, no, make it eight, for my staff and myself.

who feel intellectually above being damaged, or who like to live dangerously.

We would therefore suggest that great care should be used in picking the victim of a "C" rating. Be sure the picture itself is weak and poor entertainment, and don't make the mistake of testing muscles against a picture like "The Moon Is Blue," that got lots more attention out of being condemned than it would ever have gotten as a regular release. Here again, a capable screening committee could prove invaluable.

4. It also seems to be a basic principle of fair play that the hand that spanks should also be willing to pat. If the Legion of Decency has a "C" or condemned classification for the products of the great American industry that brings so much pleasure to so many people, whether Catholic, Protestant, or Jew, then it also should have a "P" or praised classification for whatever its limited effect might have on the nation's boxoffice.

We agree that this thinking has a close relationship to the good old American fair play raised in our first point. We also agree that as a private group, all principles, American or otherwise, can be ignored if the Legion chooses to do so. But we do believe that the motion picture industry would try to be much more cooperative, and would try to police its own members with greater willingness, if it felt that the Legion of Decency had a friendly interest in its welfare. Down through the centuries, the man with the whip has never been a success at influencing people's minds and hearts. And the road to Calvary was an outstanding example of this.

5. And the last, but not least, of our observations deals with the leaks of information, the impressions of influence, and the "close friends" of certain individuals, that plant doubts in the minds of many sincere industry executives about the best method to use in Legion of Decency matters. Certain it is that many God-fearing men respect the Legion's objectives but have no confidence in it as a group. We agree that much of this could be attributed to the Legion through no fault or venality of its own. But the feeling does exist, and the "advance information" on Legion objections, and the "planned slip," keep it regularly well fed.

We don't think that the Legion of Decency, or the Catholic Archdiocese of New York that administers it, are in any way party to such shenanigans; but we do think that some wrong impressions have been born, and have been allowed to grow. Probably more than in any other walk of life, it seems necessary for all who are in any way connected with moral pressure groups such as the Legion to maintain themselves, like Caesar's wife, "above reproach." If they do, and if complete integrity, an "open door" policy toward the entire industry, and an understanding of its problems is maintained, we believe that mutual confidence will be established and a better working arrangement will eventuate.

These are the critical views, and the carefully considered suggestions, that have resulted from scores of conversations on the subject with executives from every facet of our industry, and over a long period of years. Should there be executives who disagree, our columns are always open to their views and suggestions as well. Certain it is that we have no quarrel with the objectives of the Legion of Decency. This we prove in the day in and day out operation of our own theatres. While not of the Catholic faith, ours is not a lip service alone—but a moral principle of our own.

Jay Emanuel

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

"Crockett" Crocks 'Em

NEW YORK—Aided by the arrival of important new product and the long Memorial Day weekend the overall picture of the Broadway first-runs indicated satisfactory business, although some of the hold-overs continued to lag.

According to usually reliable reports reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount held at an estimated $40,000 for the sixth week.

"Soldier Of Fortune" (20th-Fox). Roxy reported $49,288 for Friday through Monday, with the opening week sure to top $70,000.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, hit $133,500 for Thursday through Monday, with the opening week bound to top $170,000.

"The Far Horizons" (Paramount). Criterion dropped to $14,000 on the second session.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Globe jumped from $6,000 on the second week of U-I's "Revenge Of The Creature" to a sensational $41,500 opening week with this live-action Disney.

"Violent Saturday" (20th-Fox). Mayfair still dropped to $11,000 on 3rd week.

"The Magnificent Matador" (20th-Fox). Astor opened to $20,000 week.

"Strange Lady In Town" (Warners). Victoria dropped to $18,000 on 2nd week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol dropped to $22,000 on the third week.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State, on its 11th and last week, claimed $15,000.

Cellar Backs Treble Damages

WASHINGTON—House Judiciary committee chairman Cellar (D., N. Y.) revealed last fortnight that he will introduce to Congress a bill seeking to exclude from federal income tax two-thirds of the treble damages won by persons bringing private anti-trust suits. This would have the effect of upsetting a recent Supreme Court decision concerning the Goldman Theatres, Philadelphia, in which the court upheld the contention of the Internal Revenue Service that the entire amount recovered in such suits is subject to tax. Lower courts previously held that only the actual damages amount was taxable.

Cellar pointed out that treble damages are awarded now as an incentive to injured persons to undertake the long, complex, and expensive law suits involved to collect under the anti-trust laws, and to insure adequate compensation for the risks and costs involved.

Rylander Leaves Columbia

NEW YORK—It was learned last fortnight that Al Rylander, exploitation manager, Columbia, will leave the company to join NBC-TV as exploitation director, assuming that post as of June 6. Rylander joined Columbia in 1941 as supervisor of columns and special publicity. He has been in his current post two years.

Seymour Poe, well known U. S. distribution executive and producers' representative, was recently designated as new executive vice-president, IFE Releasing Corporation.

THE NEWEST and one of the finest drive-ins on Long Island was unveiled for the press at a special preview several days prior to its actual opening. We refer to the Bayshore Sunrise, Bayshore, another link in the chain of Prudential Theatres.

KONECOFF

Equipment people, newspaper and magazine representatives, as well as those from distributors, local citizenry, friends and well-wishers were on hand to inspect the marvels of the place and wonder at its equipment and installations. It also looked as if there were a convention of the Seider family, which is another way of saying Prudential. All the members we met are handsome, forceful, well-informed, and fine exhibitors (do we get the pass now, fellas), and we wish them well on this, their latest enterprise.

Fifteen hundred cars will be accommodated here and to aid in the attraction for children are such features as a power-driven carousel, a power-driven Ferris wheel, slides, swings, climbers, etc., all free of charge. For adults there are shuffleboards, horseshoe pitching areas, a picnic area with benches and chairs.

The refreshment pavilion takes up about 4500 square feet while a lounging and dancing patio is also to be found in the area with a free juke box for pre-show entertainment.

Equipment-wise, the screen consists of specially treated aluminum and is the second such installation by Manco-Vision. The sample picture that night in CinemaScope size was very good and should make patron viewing a pleasure on the 135 by 54 foot screen. The lamphouses are manufactured by Ashcraft, the projectors are Motiograph, the sound system is RCA capable of reproducing both optical and magnetic tracks. The in-car speakers are by Ballantyne.

With regard to the paving, it's claimed that this item is the latest development

Allied-TOA Discuss Woes With 20th-Fox

First Individual Meeting May Herald Similar Talks With Other Distributors; Other Avenues Also Open

NEW YORK—The day after an opening session last week of the joint committee meeting of Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association in the Sheraton Astor Hotel, called to discuss avenues of redress for exhibition's complaints about high film rentals, committee members met with a group of 20th-Fox executives, headed by president Spyros P. Skouras. The 20th-Fox meeting was the first of what may be a series of meetings with individual company heads as a compromise to the all-industry roundtable conference rejected by film executives recently, some of whom suggested the separate talks.

TOA president E. D. Martin revealed that TOA had come out openly for the first time in favor of arbitration of film rentals, further closing ranks with National Allied, which has been firm always in its demand that the rentals be included in any industry arbitration setup. The TOA-Allied committee asked that every theatre in the country have the opportunity to buy all of 20th-Fox product on an equitable basis so that "the greatest possible audience" could be retained. A 20th-Fox statement credited the meeting with bringing about a "closer understanding of common goals," particularly about the great difficulties facing the small exhibitor.

Observers said that one reason for the selection of 20th-Fox as the first of such possible individual conferences was because Al Lichtman, the company's distribution director, had made the original proposal for a roundtable conference, and later suggested making film rentals up to $50 an arbitratable item. Because of illness, Lichtman was unable to be here last week, and Skouras said that a statement of company policy would be issued at a later date after he had conferred with Lichtman, together with executive assistant general sales manager William C. Gehring, and others who were present at the meeting. Skouras announced that 20th-Fox was "elated" that it met with a "united group representing the two important exhibitors organizations. . . . We were greatly impressed with . . . the utmost sincerity demonstrated. . . . They seek a better industry . . . for all its integral parts. . . ." Other 20th-Fox executives participating were W. C. Michel, Arthur Silverman, Alex Harrison, Glenn Norris, and Rodney Bush.

The individual company approach was reported to be only one of many avenues explored by the exhibition committee in its private sessions. A non-cooperation policy, or boycott, against one or more distributors most responsible for exhibition's plight was discussed, as well as a bid for federal regulation of film rentals. Benjamin Berger, a member of the joint committee and president, North Central Allied, stated that the Emergency Defense Committee of National Allied will try to "spotlight" exhibition's plight with the Senate Small Business Committee.

The Central Allied executive, when queried about Theatre Owners of America joining with National Allied in the plan for federal regulation, said that the chances look "pretty good." TOA, with many of its big circuit members opposed in principle to the regulation issue, has been reluctant in the past to go along.

National Allied representatives on the committee, in addition to Berger, were president Rube Shor, Ben Marcus, and Jack Kirsch. The TOA delegates, besides Martin, were Alfred Starr, Walter Reade, Jr., and Myron Blank.

Salesmen, Film Companies Break Off Contract Talks

NEW YORK—Negotiations between the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen and major film companies collapsed last fortnight despite the efforts of Commissioner J. R. Mandelbaum, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who had urged the union representatives to present a new set of proposals.

The Colosseum negotiating committee, headed by general counsel David Bartell, presented a settlement package calling for a union shop, a $6 weekly salary increase, a wage minimum of $85 a week, a cutoff of $135 a week, and an increase in per diem expense allowance of $11 for country salesmen and 50 cents for city salesmen.

The distributors, who made certain exploratory moves in an effort to close the gap of disagreement, finally stayed with their last official offer of $4 weekly increase, a $120 a week cutoff, and an offer to better the present union security provision.

Exhibitors Seek Meet With Warners, Para.

NEW YORK—Rube Shor, president, and Abram Myers, board chairman and general counsel, National Allied, announced last week a press conference following a spring board meeting that the directors had authorized Allied representatives to join with Theatre Owners of America on the joint committee to seek meetings with the heads of Paramount and Warners, similar to the conference held recently with 20th-Fox executives, on the regulation of film prices.

The executives disclosed that a refusal on the part of the film companies to meet separately with the joint committee would result in National Allied turning to Congress to seek legislation regulating film prices, to which the organization has been committed for some time.

Myers explained that Paramount and Warners were singled out for the next meetings because they are the companies "most difficult to get along with," and that if nothing should be accomplished in getting them to modify their sales policy, there would be no point in going any further. However, should the projected talks be successful, Myers said that the joint committee would then try to arrange separate talks with all film company heads.

Other action by the board of directors placed them unanimously on record against consideration of a merger with TOA "at this time," which was prompted, according to Myers, by a desire to allay "anxiety" caused in Allied ranks by press stories dealing with the question of a single exhibitor organization. The directors also drafted and passed a resolution calling on the attorney general to insure exhibitors the right to protest to the Justice Department and federal courts in cases of new acquisitions by divorced circuits. Myers said exhibition must have the opportunity to be heard before a court rules on the acquisition. The board likewise approved a motion protesting exorbitant rentals on feature films produced with the cooperation of the armed services which limit the number of theatres in a financial position to show the pictures.

Co-chairman Trueman T. Rembusch, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, reported to the board that much progress has been made in the committee's fight against subscription television but that, in spite of this, there is a long road ahead.

Wage Action Postponed

WASHINGTON—The House Labor Committee voted last week to postpone consideration of extending minimum wage coverage to interstate theatre circuits and similar retail and service groups. At the same time, the committee decided to hold hearings "at a very early date" on the administration's proposal to increase the minimum wage itself from 75 cents to 90 cents an hour but, according to chairman Barden (D., N. C.), proposals for extension were a matter for further study.

Johnston Gives Boost To PCA Administration

HOLLYWOOD—Geoffrey Shurlock's administration of the Production Code received another boost last fortnight when Eric Johnston, MPAA president, said in a press conference that he has complete confidence in Shurlock, which is reflected throughout the industry, and that no changes are contemplated in the Code at this time. He referred specifically to an earlier meeting with industry leaders at which the PCA head was given a vote of confidence. Johnston said that films have been more "carefully attuned to family life than any other medium of expression."

When asked his views on the recent Legion of Decency attacks on PCA laxity about moral issues in the industry, Johnston said outside criticism is welcome, but that the Code is being administered in the same careful way it always has been, adding that what might appear to be an overabundance of violence and the like in pictures is actually only a cumulative impression, and that many of the films under fire were made prior to Shurlock's tenure of office. The MPAA head declined to comment on specific issues, but said that no concessions will be made because none are necessary.

Pointing out the effectiveness of the Code to date, Johnston said that since its inception, no states have passed censorship laws which did not already have them, and that some states have actually repealed existing censorship laws, feeling that the Code was adequate protection. Regarding the question of "objectionable" film advertising, he said that MPAA offices in New York in charge of the problem are "having less trouble now than in the past."

C'Scope Saturation Near

NEW YORK—20th-Fox disclosed last fortnight that all domestic sales possibilities for CinemaScope product will have been equipped by July 15 if the installation rate of the last five months is maintained. At the beginning of May, more than 13,700 theatres had been equipped, including 11,424 possibilities in the U. S. and Canada, the film company said, representing 73 per cent of total possibilities, although a number of branch areas have not yet reached the two-thirds mark in wide-angle installation.

The New York territory is the first with every CinemaScope possibility equipped, a total of 587, boasting the highest percentage of four-track stereophonic sound installations, too, 20th-Fox said. Official reports show that 47.7 per cent, or 347 theatres of the total 727 equipped use four-track magnetic stereophonic sound prints. Total New York single-track optional sound installations total 351, with 29 mixers also operating in the area, the company said.

"Mr. Roberts" Acclaimed

NEW YORK—Unanimous acclaim greeted the "in-the-theatre" showings of "Mister Roberts," a Leland Hayward production for Warners, held last week in the company's 32 exchange centers over the country. An estimated 17,000 to 18,000 exhibitors, press, radio, and TV representatives turned out for the screenings.

COMPO Names 40 Top Industryites To Audience Awards Poll Committee

SCTOA Commends Lichtman's Rental Arbitration Proposal

HOLLYWOOD—Harry C. Arthur, Jr., chairman, Southern California Theatre Owners Association, last week supported 20th-Fox vice-president Al Lichtman's proposal that arbitration be adopted for negotiations between exhibition and distribution where the film rental is $50 or less.

In a letter to Lichtman speaking for the entire association, Arthur said that a resolution had been unanimously passed at a board meeting expressing commendation for the suggestion, which was termed a "step in the right direction." It went on to say that it is a good beginning which, if adapted by the film companies, would be of material assistance in quieting the unrest in the industry.

ASCAP Sues Drive-In

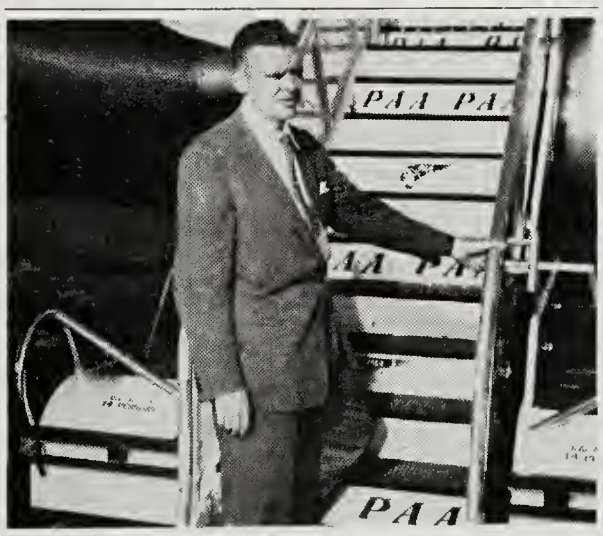
NEW YORK—Two members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Irving Berlin and Frank Music Corporation, have filed suit for copyright infringement against the Thrift Drive-In, Charlotte, alleging that their copyrighted songs were performed without authorization at the establishment.

The plaintiffs asked the Court to restrain the defendants from publicly performing the songs in the future, and to award statutory damages of not less than $250 for each of the unauthorized performances, together with court costs and attorney's fees.

Clifford H. Faw and Dorothy R. Faw, proprietors of the establishment, were named defendants.

Stock Notes

WASHINGTON—The Securities and Exchange Commission reported the following stock transactions last fortnight in the film companies during April: vice-president Joseph A. McConville, Columbia, sold 1000 shares common, decreasing his holding to 3,148 shares; Warners president Harry M. Warner made gifts of 2,350 shares of common stock to charities, decreasing his direct company holdings to 103,500.



Hazard E. Reeves, president, Cinerama, Inc., recently flew to Paris to supervise the opening of Cinerama at the Empire. The Parisian installation is the 19th theatre in the world showing Cinerama productions.

NEW YORK—Appointment of 40 top industry leaders to serve as a national committee, under the chairmanship of Elmer C. Rhoden, for the national Audience Awards poll to be held Nov. 17 to 27, was announced last week by the COMPO co-chairmen, Wilbur Snaper, Sam Pinanski, and Al Lichtman. All appointees have consented to serve.

They are Horace Adams, president, Allied Theatres of Ohio; Richard W. Altschuler, vice-president and world-wide director of sales, Republic; Governor Ellis G. Arnall, president, Society of Independent Motion Picture Produces; Harry C. Arthur, Jr., chairman of board, Southern California Theatre Owners Association; John Balaban, president, Balaban and Katz Corporation; Harry Brandt, president, Independent Theatre Owners Association; Walter E. Branson, world-wide sales manager, RKO; Col. H. A. Cole, chairman, Allied Theatre Owners of Texas; Will J. Conner, executive vice-president, John Hamrick Theatres, Inc.; Roy Cooper, president, Roy Cooper Theatre Company; Simon H. Fabian, president, Stanley Warner; Charles J. Feldman, vice-president and general sales manager, U-I; Emanuel Frisch, president, Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, Inc.; Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc.; William J. Heineman, vice-president in charge of distribution, United Artists; Harry Hendel, secretary-treasurer, Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania; Eric Johnston, president, Motion Picture Association of America, Inc.; Ben Kalmenson, vice-president, Warners; Jack Kirsch, president, Allied Theatres of Illinois, Inc.; Edward W. Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England; Ben D. Marcus, general manager, Marcus Theatres Management Company; E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, Inc.; Pat McGee, general manager, Cooper Foundation Theatres; Abe Montague, vice-president and general sales manager, Columbia; Martin J. Mullin, president, New England Theatres, Inc.; C. Elmer Nolte, Jr., president, Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, Inc.; Robert J. O'Donnell, general manager, Interstate Circuit, Inc.; Walter Reade, Jr., president, Walter Reade Theatres, Inc.; Charles M. Reagan, vice-president, and general sales manager, Loew's, Inc.; Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., president, Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres; Herman Robbins, chairman, National Screen Service; Sol A. Schwartz, president, RKO Theatres; Ruben Shor, president, National Allied; Spyros S. Skouras, president, Skouras Theatres Corporation; Joseph R. Vogel, president, Loew's Theatres; George Weltner, president, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation; Robert N. Wilby, president, Wilby-Kincey Service Corporation; Maurice R. Goldenstein, vice-president and general sales manager, Allied Artists; M. F. Gowthorpe, president, Butterfield Theatres.

In a statement written for a brochure being prepared by COMPO as an outline of plans for the poll. Shor urged every Allied exhibitor to ccoperate and participate in the effort.

Goldenson said that the poll would stimulate the development of new stars and help increase theatre patronage and promised the full cooperation of all theatres in his extensive circuit.

MPE Feature Editor Nonamaker Heads "Showmanship Sweepstakes"

PHILADELPHIA—Following on the heels of the recent announcement that MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR will inaugurate a $100 per week SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES in its Better Management department on July 6, comes the appointment of George Nonamaker, a member of the publication's editorial staff for 14 years, as head of the department.

NONAMAKER

Nonamaker brings a wealth of exploitation, publicity, advertising, and journalistic experience with him, and under his guidance, SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, with its payoff of a weekly prize for the best stunt sifted, selected, and awarded by a board of competent judges, should soon prove itself as the hottest idea for bettering business ever presented in a motion picture trade paper.

This is a brand new idea and part of a complete merchandising plan, but as far back as 1922 the publication realized that Better Management was an important department in each issue. In 1928, Nonamaker first took charge of all material for Better Management. In 1946, he again assumed charge of the department, and the current expansion also will be under his direction.

"A lot of the corn of yesteryear will be missing," said Nonamaker, "but, believe me, a lot will remain. There is a lot of truth in that old saying, 'There's little new under the sun' when applied to the advertising, publicity, and exploitation business. We'll do right by the new ideas, but we'll give plenty of attention to the old ones, too, when they crop up. Of course, the SWEEPSTAKES pay off is a new idea, and we hope as many as possible grab a piece of change. We promise to help with tips for tie-ups; a resuming of 'how to do' things; and, best of all, how to help YOU win some of that lovely money."

The judging committee is now being selected and will be announced just prior to the start of the contest.

AA Income Up

HOLLYWOOD—Allied Artists Pictures Corporation and subsidiaries rolled up a gross income of $9,134,458 for the 39-week period ending April 2, it was announced last fortnight by Steve Broidy, president, who said the figure included over $500,000 from the sale of old negatives. This compares with $8,290,681 for the corresponding period of the previous year.

Net profit before federal income taxes came to $648,868, compared with $585,289 for the same period last year. Net after taxes in the 1955 period amounted to $400,868, as compared with $281,289 in 1954. Broidy explained that because of the sale of capital assets, tax reserve for the period just ended was $244,000.

Castle Asks USIA Cut

WASHINGTON—Testifying last week before a Senate appropriating committee, Eugene W. Castle, formerly a documentary film producer who recently published a book attacking the U.S. Information Agency, renewed his fight for major reductions in the government's overseas information program, especially in film production.

In a budget of $80,000,000 already approved by the House, Castle urged a cutback of $27,800,000, saying that the film program earmarked at $3,000,000 should be reduced to $600,000. He believes the USIA should be abolished altogether, and its "essential functions" transferred to the State Department.

U-I's home office sales cabinet, division and district managers, and advertising and promotion executives recently gathered at the U-I studios for a mid-year conference and product preview. Seen, seated around the table, left to right, are F. J. A. McCarthy, southern and Canadian sales manager; Ray Moon, assistant general sales manager; Edward Muhl, vice-president in charge of production; Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president; Charles J. Feldman, vice-president and general sales manager; N. J. Blumberg, chairman of the board; David A. Lipton, vice-president; A. W. Perry, president, Empire-Universal, which distributes U-I's pictures in Canada; P. T. Dana, eastern sales manager; standing, left to right, Harry Fellerman, sales head, U-I special films division; Mark Plottel, Empire-Universal sales manager; Joseph Gins, district manager; David Levy, district manager; James Frew, district manager; Irving Sochin, short subjects sales manager; Lester Zucker, district manager; Foster M. Blake, western sales manager; P. F. Rosian, district manager; Clark Ramsay, executive assistant to Lipton; Charles Simonelli, eastern advertising and publicity department manager; Archie Herzoff, studio advertising and promotion manager; James J. Jordan, circuit sales manager; Henry H. Martin, district manager; and Barney Rose, district manager.

Golden Anniversary Of Nickelodeon Set

PITTSBURGH—Plans were underway last week for the nationwide June 19 celebration of the golden anniversary of the Nickelodeon, the world's first all-motion picture theatre, founded by the late John P. Harris in 1905. Independent exhibitors are joining the Stanley Warner and Harris Theatres in special observances and programs throughout June. The date was changed from June 5 to June 19 when the Historical Society of Pennsylvania informed John H. Harris that the former date was in error.

A plaque will be dedicated at the site of the old Nickelodeon on June 19 by a group led by Governor George M. Leader, Mayor David Lawrence, Allegheny County Commissioner John J. Kane, Harry W. Fowler, and John M. Walker, together with the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania. The world premiere of an important picture will be held, and the Variety Club of Pittsburgh is arranging a dinner for the occasion honoring Pittsburghers who attained fame in films and representatives of 15 area firms. Top executives expected to attend include Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox head; Bob O'Donnell, head, Interstate Circuit in Texas; and Walter Reade, Jr., Reade Circuit in New Jersey.

A trailer featuring background shots of an old-time Nickelodeon, a modern luxury theatre, and children and families enjoying a film show, together with a 40-by 60 developing a "We're Celebrating" theme, stressing the entertainment value of the theatre, are among the promotional items being distributed by National Screen Service.

The theme, "Every Man His Own Chairman," has been adopted for the celebration to permit the exhibitor to observe the occasion in the manner best suited to his situation.

Academy Nominees Set

HOLLYWOOD—A Slate of nominees from which the 13 members of the 1955-1956 Board of Governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will be elected was announced last fortnight by Academy president Charles Brackett.

Academy by-laws provide for the nomination of not less than four nor more than seven candidates in each of the 13 branches of the organization, from which one candidate from each branch will be elected to a two-year term. Members of the branches vote on their individual slate of nominees.

President Films Formed

NEW YORK—Recently returned from Europe, Joseph Green, independent film importer and distributor, announced last week that he had organized President Films, Inc., of which he is president, and that he has three productions ready for release over a period of the next four months. They are a British film, one made in Sweden, and a third which was originally produced in this country in Yiddish is equipped with American-language dialogue and songs, and stars Molly Picon. Titles are "Wishing Well Inn," "Unmarried Mother," and "Castles In The Air."

Exhibitors Gratified At Press Attention

TORONTO—Newspapers in this country have wised up to the importance of their amusement pages by adding features, stories, and columns on the industry. Affected have been journals in Toronto, London, and Ottawa, all of whom have spruced up their amusement pages. The newspaper officials chewed the matter over with leading members of the industry before changing formats.

Well-ordered layouts on Saturdays in Hamilton, Toronto, and Montreal were another result, with plenty of art and reading material, a sight for the sore eyes of exhibitors. More and more of the newspapers are using the Hollywood columnists, as well.

Columns of criticism and local comment by local staffers are also beginning to show on the amusement pages. These are always an attention getter in any newspaper. In Hamilton, John Robinson handled the movie column, but he switched to a general column and Jane Baker took over the reins. However, she is assisted by other staff members in reporting of the films on the local scene. In London, on the Free Press, Richard Newman took over the show-beat.

A habit of newspapers of reviewing a film under an office signature, like the Ottawa Citizen's "Cinefan," is fast disappearing. Canadian newspapers are even syndicating their columnists' work, like that of Clyde Gilmour whose home base is The Telegram, Toronto. His column appears in Vancouver, with other cities scheduled to take up Gilmour's column in time.

An interesting twist in Vancouver is the offering by newsreel companies as sponsored by the local newspapers, and the ads are framed with that in mind. Room for improvement in Windsor, the Maritimes, Edmontown, and Calgary is still believed possible by theatremen. The French-Canadian papers are most generous to the film industry.

Canadian Comment

Gradually more theatres in the country are accepting screen advertising, with one company in the business, Audio Pictures, Ltd., predicting that 1200 theatres will be carrying ads by the end of the year. Some 900 are now using the screen-ads, says David Coplan, managing director of Audio. Audio recently concluded a heavy advertising campaign to interest exhibitors in the idea of screen clips. At the present time, Audio, who has a tieup with Alexander Screen Service, has 20 salesmen throughout the country selling advertisers and theatres on the idea.

Winners in the Ballyhoo Contest of Ontario "B" Disctrict of the Famous Players organization was announced by supervisor Dan Krendel. The contest was divided into A and B sections. Top winners were Art Cauley, Paramount, Peterboro, and George Forhan, Jr., manager, Capitol, Welland, in A and B sections respectively. Second prize went to Mel Jolley, Century, Hamilton, for A section. In B section, second place was shared by Al Hartshorn and Charlie Perrie, the Regent, Ottawa. This was because Al had to depart for the TB sanitorium in the midst of the contest, and Charlie Perrie temporarily replaced him. Third prize was picked up by Bob Harvey, Capitol, North Bay, and Len Gouin, Capitol, Peterboro, in A and B sections respectively. Special prizes for campaign books were awarded to Mel Jolley and Paul Turnbull, while the three bookers, Harrison Patte, John Heggie, and Herb Black each picked up prize money.

In Odeon Theatres of Canada, Ltd., Better Management Contest, the Hyland, Toronto, under the management of Wannie Tyers is top ranker, followed by the Broadway, Saskatoon, and the Garrick, Halifax. For confections, the Roxy, Newmarket, is tops, followed by the McCarthy, Belleville, and the Oxford, Halifax. For proportionate standing, the Oxford, Halifax, stands at the top of the list, followed in order by the Champlain, Montreal, and the Broadway, Saskatoon.

Following an association of 34 years with the company, Joseph Huber, 20th-Fox Winnipeg branch manager, retired. Succeeding him will be Philip Geller, presently special representative in the Dominion.

CINE CHATTER: A theatre, to be completed by the end of the year, will be built by Odeon Theatres (Canada), Ltd., in the Don Mills Development at the edge of Toronto, it was announced by L. W. Brockington, president. This is the first theatre to be built in Toronto especially designed and planned from the beginning for wide-screen and the latest forms of sound transmission. It will seat 1,200, with adequate parking facilities. This is also the first theatre to be built by Odeon in eastern Canada in some years. . . . The adult classification was placed on six pictures during the month of April by the Ontario Board of Censors. . . . A special Sunday screening of "Strategic Air Command" was held at the Imperial, Toronto, by Famous Players and Paramount. . . . Civic authorities in Toronto were asked by a group of mothers to see what they could do about banning "Blackboard Jungle," which they described as a "picture without a moral lesson." . . . P. Bodnoff, operator of two Saskatchewan drive-ins, had his application for a radio station for Weyburn deferred by the CBC Board of Governors. . . . Cuba

Manuel Alonso, owner-director of a Cuban newsreel company, was named last fortnight by President Batista to head the newly created National Institute for the Development of a Cuban Movie Industry, which is to be an autonomous organization governed by an administrative council representing producers, distributors, exhibitors, and unions. The decree establishing the Institute provides a subsidy for the purchase of new equipment for Biltmore Studios.

Allied Artists' "An Annapolis Story" was promoted in Philadelphia by the personal appearance of star Kevin McCarthy, shown here on the film's opening day surrounded by fans and autograph seekers in the lobby of the Stanley Warner Mastbaum.

Zachary Scott, in town to help publicize his appearance in Allied Artists' "Shotgun," is beseiged by fans seeking autographed photos in the lobby of the Stanley Warner Stanley.

Miss Duval, president of the local Zachary Scott fan club, presented the "Shotgun" star with a scroll of 5,000 Philadelphia area members, during his visit in behalf of the film.

Welcome, Major

THE announcement that Allied Artists was embarking on a production schedule designed to lift the company into the ranks of the majors was greeted with enthusiasm by exhibitors throughout the country.

Top films are created by top people, and AA went out and rounded up names like William Wyler, Billy Wilder, and John Houston, associated for years with the best in movie-making.

President Steve Broidy and sales head "Razz" Goldstein embarked on a whirlwind tour carrying the exciting story of AA expansion to exhibitors all over the country and asking support in the form of playdates. Meanwhile, from the coast studios began the flow of product and increased advertising, promotion, and exploitation to sell same.

For "Shotgun," colorful western, the company arranged an extensive promotion tour for Zachary Scott, culminating in the Texas multiple premieres of the film, at which he was joined by co-star Yvonne DeCarlo. In cities such as Philadelphia, Baltimore, and others, Scott garnered plenty of newspaper, radio, and TV attention.

Next was "Annapolis Story," and Kevin McCarthy was designated to make the publicity swing. His co-star, Diana Lynn, was to accompany him, but TV committments made this impossible. What might have crimped the film's promotion was turned to advantage as contests were held in various cities to pick substitutes for Miss Lynn, creating additional interest in the McCarthy tour and the film itself.

Radio publicity for Kevin McCarthy came from Steve Allison of WPEN, shown in an interview.

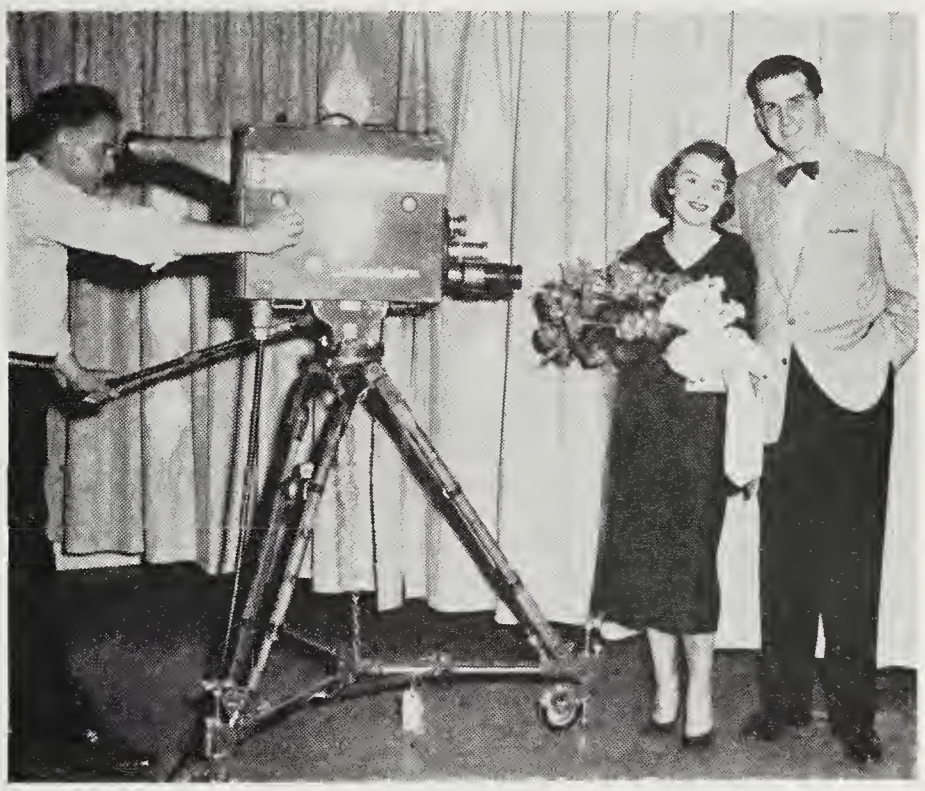
Philadelphia Stanley Warner zone manager Ted Schlanger, right, and Lester Krieger, his assistant, get together with Scott to talk over publicity.

Others attending the Bellevue-Stratford party for McCarthy were, left to right, Ralph Collier, WCAU-TV; Tom Volk, WPEN, and Jerry Gaghan, columnist, DAILY NEWS, all of whom helped in the campaign.



Ed McMahon, WCAU-TV, is shown with contest winner Carole Miller, "Miss Substitute for Dianna Lynn." She later was awarded a bond by Kevin McCarthy. Miss Lynn, star of "An Annapolis Story," was unable to come.

John Roach, manager, Stanley, stands by Scott as he signs autographs for the fans in the theatre's lobby.

Phone Confab To Aid Will Rogers Drive

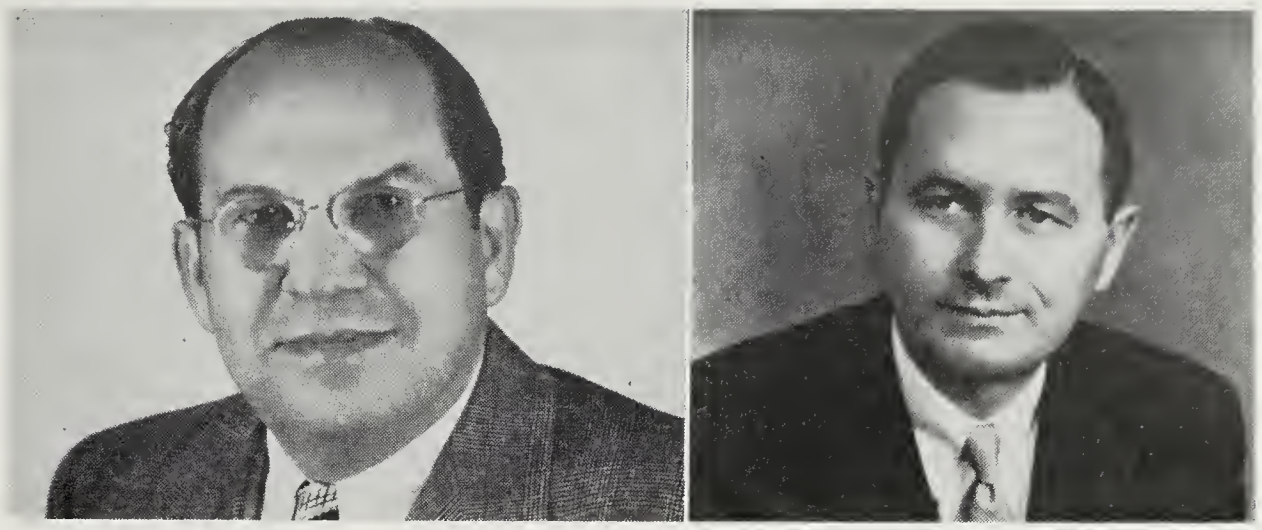
NEW YORK—Exhibitor-distributor Will Rogers Memorial Hospital collection drive committee chairmen in each exchange city will hold a closed circuit telephone conference on June 7 to discuss the hospital's needs and the objectives of the fund-raising campaign. Announcement was made last fortnight by S. H. Fabian, chairman of the drive.

Invitations have been forwarded to exhibitors throughout the country asking for their cooperation and attendance at the broadcast, which will be heard in the morning at the offices of exchange area distributor chairmen, or at places designated by them. Local telephone companies will install temporary amplifiers to accommodate the expected crowds. To speak from New York headquarters are A. Montague, vice-president, Columbia, and president of the hospital; Eugene Picker, vice-president, Loew's Theatres, fund-raising chairman; Charles J. Feldman, U-I general sales manager, distribution chairman; and Fabian, who is also treasurer of the hospital fund.

An audience collection one day during the week of August 15 designed to attract additional funds from outside the industry has been endorsed and supported by TOA, National Allied, ITOA, and MMPTA. The hospital must meet expenses for the care and treatment of industry tuberculosis patients, and requires additional funds to carry on research for an anti-tuberculosis vaccine. Theatres have been asked to run a special appeal trailer, to be distributed through National Screen Service, the facilities of which have been contributed by Herman Robbins, vice-president of the hospital board. The complete list of exchange area distributor chairmen is Albany, R. S. Smith, Warners; Atlanta, George Roscoe, Columbia; Boston, J. G. Moore, Paramount; Buffalo, Ben Felcher, Columbia; Charlotte, Grover Livingston, Warners; Chicago, Harry Goldman, United Artists; Cincinnati, J. S. Ambrose, Warners; Cleveland, David Rosenthal, United Artists; Dallas, Louis Weber, Loew's; Denver, Jack R. Felix, Allied; Des Moines, J. H. Conley, RKO; Detroit, Joseph B. Rosen, U-I; Indianapolis, R. L. Conn, 20th-Fox; Jacksonville, Buford Styles, U-I; Kansas City, Harry Hanburg, Paramount; Los Angeles, S. Borde, RKO; Memphis, Nat Wyse, Republic; Milwaukee, J. G. Kemptgen, Loew's; Minneapolis, Ralph W. Maw, Loew's; New Haven, Shepherd Bloom, 20th-Fox; New Orleans, C. J. Briant, Loew's; New York, D. A. Levy, U-I; Oklahoma City, Don Tullius, Warners; Omaha, M. M. Rosenblatt, RKO; Philadelphia, Sam E. Diamond, 20th-Fox; Pittsburgh, Lawrence Seidelman, Republic; Portland, Wayne Thiriat, Paramount; St. Louis, T. Williamson, RKO; Salt Lake City, Kenneth O. Lloyd, 20th-Fox; San Francisco, Mel Klein, Columbia; Seattle, Arthur Greenfield, U-I; and Washington, Phil Isaacs, Paramount.

TC Suit Dropped

NEW YORK—TC Theatres, Inc., operating the Biltmore, Mount Vernon, N. Y., consented last week to the dismissal of its anti-trust suit against major companies filed in the amount of $3,000,000.



Louis Phillips, left, was recently appointed general counsel, Paramount, and Louis A. Novins, right, was recently elected secretary of the same company.

Ed. Emanuel To Direct VCI '56 N. Y. Convention

NEW YORK—At a meeting of the Crew of New York's Variety Club Tent 35 last week at the Lambs Club, International Chief Barker George Hoover announced that Edward Emanuel, Philadelphia theatre executive who was re-elected international property master at the recent Los Angeles convention, will be director of the 20th annual VCI convention to be held here next year.

The meeting was presided over by Tent 35's first assistant chief barker, Ed Fabian, acting in the absence of William German, who is in Europe. A report on the Los Angeles convention was given by barkers Jack Hoffberg and Marty Levine.

Hoover told the Crew that the New York tent has the potential of being one of the great organizations in Variety's International system. "Furthermore," he said, "this convention can easily be the most successful international meeting in Variety's history if the planning is conceived and executed properly. You have all the ingredients for a wonderful project right here in this city."

After the announcement of Emanuel's appointment, Hoover said, "He is one of the hardest workers in Variety and I know he will be of great assistance in planning this convention."

Other officers attending the meeting were Ralph Pries, New York's international representative, and international press guy Robert Adelman. Tent 35 members present were Martin Kornbluth, Morton Sunshine, George Waldman, Jack Rosenfeld, Dave Snaper, Larry Morris, Leonard Gruenberg, Charles Okun, Harold Kline, Edward Lachman, Al Gorson, Sol Trauner, and Si Seymour. Preliminary convention plans were aired.

Anti-Toll TV Pamphlet Out

NEW YORK—Organizations for Free-TV distributed a 12-page pamphlet entitled "The Claims About Pay-To-See TV and the Facts" to delegates last week to the National Association of Radio and TV Broadcasters convention in Washington.

Stating the position of toll-TV opponents, the booklet contains a question-and-answer, claim-and-fact study of basic issues. It summarizes by saying that the subscription television proponents have not offered any plan for creating talent or producing entertainment, that essentially the proposed system is a method for charging money for TV, that it creates neither jobs nor adds inventiveness to the industry, and that it is certain to swallow the whole field of entertainment, which would decrease entertainment revenue and proportionally weaken the tax structure.

The publication, which will be sent out to newspapers, legislators, broadcasters, exhibitors, and other interested parties across the country, urges readers to protest against toll-TV by writing the Federal Communications Commission.

Vogel Elected

HOLLYWOOD—Robert Vogel, MGM international department head, was elected last week to the chairmanship of the AMPP international committee. He will succeed Luigi Luraschi, Paramount, who has served for the past year. Louis Blaine, U-I, was reinstated chairman of the international publicity committee.

LUNCHEON HONOR DEPARTMENT: More than 250 executives gathered last week at the Hotel Pierre for the annual kickoff luncheon of the Motion Picture and Amusement Division of the UJA which, this year, was a testimonial to Major Albert Warner, in recognition of his outstanding leadership in humanitarian affairs.

Adolph Schimel, vice-president and general counsel, U-I, division chairman, announced that the industry had raised about $400,000 in this year's campaign. He also announced that Si Fabian, who was to have presented a first-hand report on conditions in Israel, having just returned from there, was unable to be present due to illness, hut a message was read from him to the assemblage.

Major Warner was presented with a hand-made, silver-bound Bible by Barney Balaban, president, Paramount. Guest speaker was A. Harman, Israeli Consul-General in New York.

Aboard the dais were Fred Schwartz, Ned Depinet, Sam Rinzler, Harry M. Warner, Leonard Goldenson, Arthur Krim, Malcolm Kingsberg, Leopold Friedman, Henri Bernstein, Bob Benjamin, Herman Robbins, Jack Cohn, Schimel, Balaban, and Warner.

U-I Ends European Confab With Daff Talk

BARCELONA—"Seventy-three cents out of every dollar spent by U-I goes on the screen," declared Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president, and president, Universal International Films, at the concluding session of the U-I 1955 European sales conference here.

Fifty-three delegates representing 16 continental offices in addition to the Far East and Latin America were present at the European conference to learn about the U-I production and release plans for the next season. Present from the U. S. were president Milton R. Rackmil, vice-president and foreign general manager Americo Aboaf, and director of foreign publicity Fortunat Baronat.

NO COOKEE, NO TICKEE: We reprint herewith part of a communique received:

"As a gustatorial harbinger (what this mean, Sam) of 'Soldier Of Fortune' in CinemaScope, Clark Gable's first picture for 20th Century-Fox, the film company is distributing Chinese fortune cookies to newspaper editors, film writers, and critics, the trade press, and feature syndicate columnists.

"Obtained through the cooperation of the House of Chan, the cookies each contain a special message about the film whose locale is the Far East and call attention to its Roxy Theatre showcase engagement."

Someone must have been stuffing the cookie box with such items as: Do not cross Broadway without shoes . . . A hand in the till is worth two in empty pocket . . . Some press agent like drum—make loud noise, say nothing . . . He who hesitates, writes better review . . . "Soldier Of Fortune" like certain coffee—good to the last drop . . . "Seven Year Itch" like athlete's foot—good to the last scratch . . . Ho, ho—velly sollee.

Warners Net Up

NEW YORK—Warners and subsidiary companies last week reported, for the six months ending Feb. 26, 1955, a net profit of $2,081,000 after a provision of $2,100,000 for federal income taxes, and after a provision of $250,000 for contingent liabilities.

The net profit for the six months ending Feb. 27, 1954, amounted to $1,618,000 after a provision of $1,700,000 for federal income taxes, and after a provision of $250,000 for contingent liabilities.

The net profit for the six months ending Feb. 26, 1955, is equivalent to 84 cents per share on the 2,474,280 shares of common stock outstanding or reserved for exchange. The net profit for the corresponding period last year was equivalent to 65 cents per share on the 2,474,346 shares of common stock then outstanding or reserved for exchange.

Film rentals, sales, etc., for the six months ending Feb. 26, 1955, amounted to $35,079,000 as compared with $34,059,000 for the corresponding period last year.

Hughes-Odlum Talks On

NEW YORK—In a letter last week to RKO stockholders advising that a meeting had been scheduled for Aug. 3 in Dover, Del., James R. Grainger, president, said that board chairman Howard Hughes and Floyd B. Odlum, president, Atlas Corporation, were continuing their discussions on plans for RKO's future. Atlas is the largest stockholder outside of Hughes. Grainger said, however, that management cannot at present advise stockholders when the talks will end.

NT Convention Readied

LOS ANGELES—National Theatres, Inc., will hold its annual fall convention Sept. 12-15, Elmer C. Rhoden, president announced last week. Site of the meeting, to be attended by 100 delegates, has not yet been decided.

20th-Fox D-I Rentals Rise

NEW YORK—It was learned last week that 20th-Fox rentals from drive-ins during the first seven weeks of the present quarter, as of May 14, are averaging more than 78 per cent above the comparable period last year.

Two reasons offered for the increase are that there is considerably more bookable CinemaScope product this year to begin with and, second, that there are about 10 times more equipped drive-in sales possibilities than at this time last year. Eastern branches show the highest percentage of revenue gain, 160 per cent over the 1954 period.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

"Seven Year Itch" Gets Huge Book Campaign

NEW YORK—Full-page newspaper advertisements, TV and radio promotion, and point-of-sale exploitation among thousands of book and department stores in more than 300 cities highlight a comprehensive promotional campaign launched for "The Seven Year Itch" in CinemaScope by Bantam Books, which is issuing a special movie edition of George Axelrod's famed play.

Being published in conjunction with the June national release of the Charles K. Feldman Group Productions' presentation, the book will fully credit the 20th-Fox attraction through copy and cover art of stars Marilyn Monroe and Tom Ewell.

Bantam currently is scheduling a series of full-page newspaper ads in key cities across the country with copy underscoring the theme, "Read the book—see the movie." The publishing house also is preparing thousands of 22" x 28" posters for window, counter, and wall displays among its thousands of outlets.

Ten thousand tack cards are being readied to facilitate local book and department store tie-up activities. Spot announcements for Bantam Books are being lined-up on 350-400 radio and TV shows in conjunction with the Curtis Circulation Company, distributors of the popular priced book.

One of the largest field campaigns keyed to the point-of-theatre-playdate will be launched by Curtis. Having the largest field staff of its kind, more than 100,000 retail outlets for paper-bound book and magazines will be contacted and invited to participate in the mammoth program. The Curtis field force will also work with local theatre managers on cooperative promotions.

The company, in association with 20th-Fox, also will hold special theatre showings of "The Seven Year Itch" for department store promotion executives and leading book dealers to initiate regional and local campaigns.

The film company, in a move to facilitate activities as far in advance of playdates as possible, will supply to Bantam lists of theatre engagements as soon as they are set, and will mobilize its field exploitation staff to work out appropriate activities in many important situations.

Upon receipt of playdate lists, Bantam will notify its field force for exhibitor contact; and will write theatre managers, supplying names of the Curtisman in his area, and providing return postcards by which book-movie display material can be ordered.

As promotion for Columbia's "5 Against The House," Kim Novak recently contacted 100 newspaper columnists and motion picture editors coast-to-coast by long distance phone from the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas, and had them place a $5 bet on the roulette wheel there. All winnings went to the Crippled Children's Society of America.

Teasers Bally "Stranger"

NEW YORK—A record $113,000 advance newspaper advertising campaign heralding United Artists' "Not As A Stranger" with 450 big-space displays blanketing each of the 75 newspapers published in the 32 exchange cities got under way last week, it was announced by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for UA.

The pace-setting ad program, which is independent of later co-op insertions that will additionally spotlight the Stanley Kramer screen version of the runaway best seller, will drumbeat "Not As A Stranger" to the 53,000,000 readers of the 75 participating papers via series of six 300-line teaser ads.

The specially prepared copy in these ads will be aimed mainly at the type of audience reached by the book by Morton Thompson about the practice of modern medicine.

Exhibitors Contribute To "Sinbad" Pressbook

NEW YORK—Twenty-one active exhibitors from all sections of the country have contributed no cost or low cost promotion ideas to the king-size colored pressbook for Howard Hughes' "Son Of Sinbad," it was announced last week by Walter Branson, RKO's world-wide sales manager. The theatremen and women, whose photographs accompany their ideas, each received $10 from RKO. This sum is paid regularly to all contributors to the Do-It-Yourself section of RKO pressbooks, edited by Phil Gersdorf.

The Do-It-Yourself section, which has received enthusiastic praise and support from the nation's exhibitors, is described in the "Sinbad" pressbook by Dean Hyskell, Fox West Coast Theatres, as "one of the best pressbook ideas any company has come up with in a long time and it deserves the support of every theatreman who calls himself a showman."

Exhibitors whose showmanship ideas are included in the "Sinbad" pressbook are Jack McDougall, Fox, Oakland, Cal.; Tom Camarda, Keith's, Washington; Gus Nestle, Wintergarden, Jamestown, N. Y.; Ann Kelloff, Pine, Manassa, Colo.; June Wilson, Midway Drive-In, Tucson, Ariz.; Ed Linder, Gopher, Minneapolis; Sam George, Paramount, Atlanta; R. G. W. Frisbey, Southeast, Salt Lake City; G. E. Spaugh, James, Newport News, Va.; Dal Schuder, Circle, Indianapolis; Hal Cheatham, Interstate Theatres, Dallas; Herb Royster, Broadway, Portland; Alfred E. Sack, Coronet, Dallas; Ted Kirkmeyer, Fox Theatres, Ogden, Utah; Lou Sorensen, Utah, Salt Lake City; Bob Walker, Uintah, Fruita, Colo.; Gene F. Wade, James, Newport News, Va.; Phil Todaro, Century, Buffalo; Bill Burke, Capitol, Brantford, Ont.; Francis Barr, Interstate Theatres, Dallas; and Bob Moscow, Rialto, Atlanta.

RKO plans similar campaigns on other forthcoming top productions.

NSS Has Varied Trailers

NEW YORK—National Screen Service announced last fortnight that it has stock trailers available on a variety of summer promotions designed to draw audiences to both conventional houses and drive-ins in the hottest of weather.

In addition to "cool" messages anent your air conditioning, on which NSS has at least seven trailers to choose from, other stock trailers are available on such stunts as bathing beauty contests, pageant of beautiful children contests, weddings, movie vacations, lucky programs, etc.

For drive-ins, in particular, NSS has available a "free food night" trailer, and there are many more including specials on "Wild West Shows" and "Comedy Cavalcades"; midnight horror shows, etc. The company's special trailer department also will make up speedily any copy to meet your needs.

CANDYDLY SPEAKING

CONCESSION PURCHASES in theatres, both indoor and drive-in, result from patron impulse, stimulated by many factors, chief of which are the effectiveness of merchandising techniques, the attractiveness of the stand, and the variety of items offered.

RECENTLY, ice cream treats have been added to the menus of many theatre concession operations with gratifying results, particularly in the summer months, and keeping pace while the weather is hot are beverage sales. Experimentation has shown that sales can be appreciably increased through proper location of dispensing equipment, so as to attract the maximum flow of traffic, whether the items are automatically prepared by vending machines or manually dished out by concession employes.

THE INDOOR and outdoor operations present different problems. The drive-in patron, afforded the intermission break, is seeking refreshment. He may have decided that he wants a particular sandwich and a drink. Placing the ice cream vendor or stand where it confronts him as he leaves the concession area has been found a successful way to increase sales. Placement of the drink dispenser near the popcorn machine, a point of maximum traffic, reminds the patron that the two go together and sales of both items will benefit.

IN CONVENTIONAL THEATRES, many of the same hints are useful, but other factors must also be considered. The intermission break, if taken at all, is shorter, with patrons more inclined to remain in their seats. The place to hit them is on their entrance and exit. An ice cream machine, located so that traffic both ways passes near, is an excellent reminder that the heat outdoors after the cool comfort of an air-conditioned theatre can be combatted with a frozen treat.

THE THEATRE has increased in importance as a retail outlet for concession items. Supply and equipment dealers, realizing this, are glad to cooperate with exhibitors, offering hints based on years of experience.

—AL ERLICK

One item will sell another, and careful placement of the refreshment stand unit makes for more sales of everything. Popcorn and cold drinks, for example, are naturals together. By putting the popcorn machine and beverage dispensing equipment at the same station, more sales of both will result.

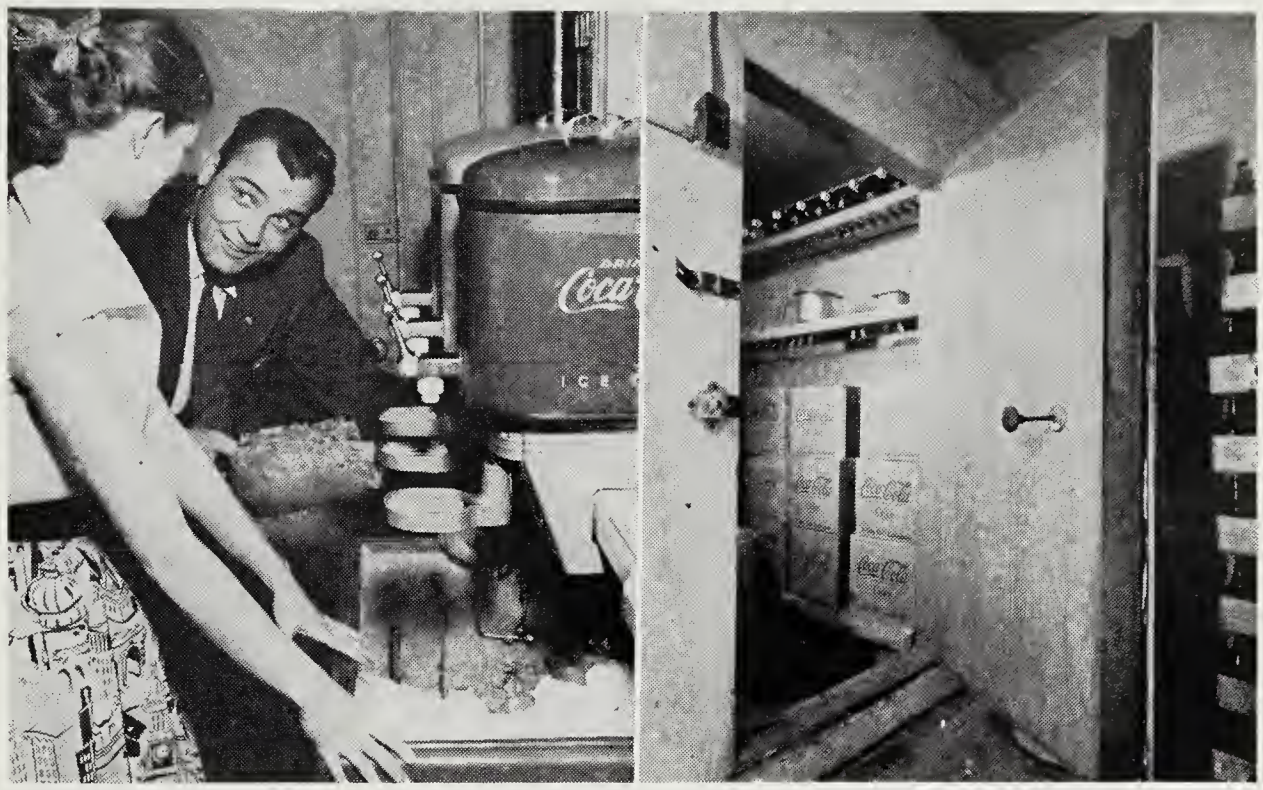
Theatres Become An Important Beverage Outlet

Ever increasing number of experienced theatremen discover that effective drink merchandising can greatly increase extra profits returns in all types of houses.



Proper cooling and storage of beverage syrups and dispensers is an important part of extra profits operations. At right, a dispenser is iced up awaiting the intermission rush, and at right, syrup is stored, protected from spoilage by a heavy door and temperature control.

NOTHING AT THE concession stand of the theatre today plays a bigger part than the beverage, and more than 70 per cent of all houses now offer some kind of refreshing drink to the public in the knowledge that it is a significant moneymaker. From elaborate dispensing sections as part of a stand, to automatic vending machines, to supplementary push-cart service from the drive-in concession, theatre-goers are showing their approval by buying more and more.

In the years before the war, theatre refreshment service was largely limited to cigarette and candy bar vending machines, plus popcorn machines operated by ticket-takers. Public demand and the alert exhibitor has now made a trip to the theatre a complete entertainment experience by offering not only a satisfying film program but also a variety of quality refreshment items attractively merchandised. That the concession operation is a tremendous dollar value, annual business proves the theatre-going public wants refreshment with its entertainment. In locations where the exhibitor has reacted aggressively to the demand, the rewards have been gratifying, to say the least.

On an industry-wide basis, six out of every 10 patrons make a purchase at the concession stand in the conventional theatre, while the drive-in snack stand sells to seven out of every 10 customers who come to see the show.

Customer preference at the concession stand or refreshment counter points to cold drinks. Hot drinks are only just now beginning to make an impression in the beverage business, especially in the more temperate, or cooler, sections of the country, and they are limited almost exclusively to the drive-in. Over 80 per cent of circuit indoor houses and 60 per cent of independently operated theatres sell beverages, and outdoors, almost 100 per cent make drinks available to their patrons. Cola drinks are featured in 50 per cent of all theatres, indoors and out. Root beer is in second place, offered in about a third of all houses, and fruit-flavored drinks appeal to about one-fifth of the patrons. After these come milk drinks, still-water fruit drinks, and frozen fruit concentrates.

The basic beverage business gravitates to the refreshment stand in all kinds of theatres. However, the multiple-cup machine, dispensing a variety of beverages, is extremely popular, particularly in the indoor house, and is to be found in secondary locations throughout, and sometimes tied-in with the snack stand. At larger stands, and increasingly in drive-ins, the self-contained unit is widely accepted. Some of the larger units, of course, offer complete soda fountains. The amount and type of business done by the refreshment stand in the drive-in and first-run indoor theatre of mammoth proportions makes it advisable to use the most efficient equipment available. Service with speed in one efficient operation increases profit. When the single-drink dispenser is inadequate, the multiple beverage dispenser does an equally good job. Best-quality equipment is usually easy to clean and maintain and with the application of the manufacturer's instructions, maximum service, profit, and durability can be expected.

Recently, two trends in the beverage operation of the concession have become prominent. One is the definite trend toward larger unit sales, i.e., the 10, 15, 25, and 30-cent cup, and the increasing demand for thorough refrigeration of the drink. Many exhibitors report that the larger drinks often outsell the small when in direct competition. In the case of refrigeration, beverage manufacturers have long advised serving their products at 40 degrees or colder; but in 1953, concessions operators reported a sales increase of from 20 to 50 per cent after they had started to put ice in the cup, which keeps the drink cold until it has been consumed. A drink intended to be ice-cold obviously becomes more desirable when it is served that way.

Aggressive merchandising also increases business and profit at refreshment stands. Many of the larger suppliers furnish elaborate promotional material free of charge, running from film intermission trailers to display pieces and reminder signs. Clean, well-groomed attendants add tremendously to the promotion of certain items by suggesting them to the customer. In many instances, merely placing the beverage dispensing equipment adjacent, or in the close proximity, to the hot dog grill and popcorn machine increases the sale of both items. Locations near washrooms can sell also those theatre patrons usually oblivious to the pleasure of refreshment.

Seen is an example of the popular multi-flavor dispenser, widely used in both conventional theatres and outdoor spots to boost sales.

Many operators buy beverage syrups in large quantities in the belief that slight savings effected thereby make the practice worthwhile. However, quite the contrary is true. Beverage syrups should be purchased in lots sufficient to supply a week's demand, on the same day each week. Syrups, like any fine food, should be protected and kept fresh from the hazards of heat and storage. When delivered to the theatre, beverage syrups should be stored in a clean, dry place, away from steam pipes, hot water pipes, and the like. Those bearing the oldest date of manufacture should be so arranged in the storage room so that they automatically will be used first. In this way the consumer is assured of fresh syrup and a concomitantly fresh drink.

When the cold beverage is properly stocked and stored, and when it is correctly priced, promoted, and merchandized, it can play a very important role in the financial picture of the alert exhibitor. On past performance, the theatre-going public has proven it wants refreshment with entertainment or, perhaps more accurately, a complete relaxation experience: enjoying not only the film but also gastronomical pleasures that are not necessarily available in the home, either. The average theatre in the United States today does more than 500 gallons worth of business annually.

The Saga Of The Family-Style Pizza Shows That "Selling Up" Can Work

(Philip Lowe, executive, Theatre Candy Company, Inc., Boston and Pittsburgh, drive-in owner and concession operator, comments on newest addition)

How to increase your Extra Profits by the sale at drive-ins of pizza pies is illustrated above. From top to bottom, left to right, are shown how the Mozzarella cheese goes on the Italian delicacy. First the crust, then the sauce that you mix yourself from finest spices and California tomatoes. After the Mozzarella comes the grated cheese, oregano, and imported olive oil. The finest ingredients available insure top quality. Note the specially-designed work table; the attendant smiles as he places pie in oven. Ovens may be had in gas or electricity. It's a cinch to bake pizzas. The capacity of this bank of four ovens is 200 pies during an average 20-minute intermission; the baked pie is cut in four pieces; but sold only as a whole pie at 60 cents. Roller-type knife simplifies and speeds up operations. Note the generous amount of ingredients, you don't have to skimp to make a 70 per cent profit. The Meadow Glen Drive-In, Medford, Mass., uses pizza-shaped signs over the four cafeteria lanes plus wall signs to augment screen trailer. Sales are claimed to run at one pie for each five cars.

ANYONE WHO DEALS wtih drive-in theatre operators or concessionaires who run their own refreshment stands will tell you that when they talked about selling a Pizza for 60 cents the usually received an answer like this, "We can't sell an item at our theatres for that price. We are in a depressed area. Our patrons haven't got that kind of money. It's all right for big drive-ins in big towns, but not for us." This doesn't sound very progressive, does it? And there, but for the grace of some forward-looking pioneers, go you and all others in the Pizza Belt who haven't tried the new Family Style Pizza for 60 cents which was introduced by Irv Rosenblum, Savon Candy Company, Paterson, N. J. First used in the Smith Management Company's midwest theatres, it is gaining momentum like a hurricane and is literally sweeping the northeast in small and large ozoners alike.

THERE IS REALLY a sound reason for this rush to get on the Pizza Bandwagon and that reason is RESULTS. As soon as one whole year's operating figures became available it took a really conservative operator to resist the lure of what is now a proven money-maker. These figures showed increased gross business, increased per person sales, and lower over-all food costs. The Family Style Pizza for 60 cents has a food cost of only 30 per cent; imagine it, 70 per cent profit on a 60 cent sale. That means 42 beautiful copper pennies profit every time a customer bought a pie. And they bought them—the average was one pie to each five cars, and in some theatres one pie in every 2.2 cars. Here is a golden opportunity to "sell up." And even the most conservative (I use this word rather than "backward" out of sheer politeness only) agreed that the last great "selling up" stunt had paid off beyond their wildest dreams. Namely, the jumbo drink for 20 or 25 cents. It worked for drinks and it works for Pizza!

Making your own pies and making good ones with good value, good quality, and good-tasting was the problem that was solved. Equipment that makes pie-baking easy is now available. The top quality sauces, spices, and cheeses which you blend yourself right before the customer's eyes are one the market. A prepared crust which comes out of the specially-designed and beautified ovens crisp and tasty is as near as your trucking company. Yes, the bars are down for refreshment stand operators. The ingredients and equipment are easily available, the secret of making these good pies is yours for the asking; your patrons are ready and willing to put 60 cents on the line because the Family Style Pizza is as good a food value as you offer, and the profit margin is wondrous to behold!

You can "sell up" to a new level—the 60 cent level—just as you sold up to a new level on drinks, and your customers will thank you. This is no fairy tale. The facts have been placed before the judge and jury and the verdict has been handed down in favor of the 60 cent Family Style Pizzas.

Nickle Popcorn Returns For Nickelodeon Week

CHICAGO—The old-fashioned nickle bag of popcorn will be featured by America's theatres during Nickelodeon Week. The period of June 5-11 has been designated by the Variety Clubs of America as Nickelodeon Week celebrating the Golden Anniversary of the motion picture theatre and honoring the late Senator John P. Harris, the founder of the first Nickelodeon.

A feature of the national celebration is the Popcorn Institute's concerted promotion with exhibitors featuring an old-fashioned five-cent bag of popcorn. It was the nickle product that built the theatre's high-profit popcorn business. A recent mailing to numerous exhibitors throughout the country has invoked an enthusiastic response to the unusual promotion idea, according to William E. Smith, executive director, The Popcorn Institute. "Many exhibitors," Smith stated, "are tying-in with the promotion in order to create additional popcorn eaters and thus insure an expanded market for the theaters' top profit concession item."

To assist exhibitors in merchandising during the national event, The Popcorn Institute is working with a leading bag manufacturer, producing an especially designed nickle popcorn bag. The novel container will soon be made available to the trade.

The Popcorn Institute is boosting Nickelodeon Week and the nickle popcorn promotion with merchandising aids and an intensive barrage of publicity. Exhibitors throughout the country are urged to tie-in on the unique promotion to build future popcorn sales and profits.

NCA Exhibits Set

CHICAGO—More than 100 exhibitors, the largest number in 15 years, will be ready and waiting when the National Confection Association starts its 29th exposition and 72nd annual convention, June 6 at the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

According to David P. O'Connor, exposition chairman, new exhibits and new exhibitors promise a stimulating show.

Burger-Mat Offered For Infra-Red Broiling

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—A revolutionary new hamburger broiler, which provides for smokeless, odorless, infra-red broiling of hamburgers, and up to one-third less meat shrinkage, has been introduced by Burger-Mat Corporation.

The unit, called the Burger-Mat, broils four hamburgers and toasts four buns in two minutes, without handling, turning or danger of burning. The unit controls broiling to the customer's individual taste, and is provided with an automatic timer and indicator light for each of its four broiling compartments to signal when the hamburger is done. The Burger-Mat needs no exhaust system; features easy plug-in installation; and uses current only when actually in operation.

The Burger-Mat prevents contamination by foreign odors or taste from foods cooked previously and renders fat into an easy-to-clean pan.

The unit is constructed of polished cast aluminum with a control board of glossy gray baked Hammertone. .

In answer to the growing demand for a high quality ice-cooled dispenser for non-carbonated beverages, Frigidrink Dispenser Company, Chicago, has introduced the Ice-Cader. The new dispenser should have wide appeal to those who prefer the convenience of economy of an ice-cooled unit.

Popcorn Institute's Smith Hails Value Of Concession Stand Tieins

ATLANTA—"Merchandising and promotion is the key to increased concession profits," William E. Smith, executive director, The Popcorn Institute, told the exhibitors of Georgia, Florida, and Alabama, meeting here recently for the kick-off session of the Southeastern Movie Festival. "Exhibitors can learn from grocery super-market operators merchandising techniques that have paid off handsomely in terms of increased sales.

"Exhibitors," Smith added, "should closely analyze their concession items for their top profit commodities and push the sale of these items. The super-market has learned to sell tie-in commodities where multiple sales can be made, in place of a transaction involving a single item. Exhibitors have two natural top profit items in popcorn and beverages. It is sound merchandising," Smith stated, "to feature popcorn, and request the concession attendant to push the sale of a beverage simultaneously. The adoption of tie-in merchandising of popcorn and drinks has developed substantially increased profits in all theatre operations where it is practiced."

Smith also described to the representatives of the three southeastern states the many point-of-purchase pieces available from The Popcorn Institute to stimulate popcorn sales. These pieces are available from popcorn suppliers at a nominal cost, below actual cost of production.

Attendance at the theatre and sales at the concession stand are all based on the same factors, a good product with public acceptance and aggressive and intelligent merchandising and promotion. Movie producers are currently making top flight pictures. Exhibitors are urged to use only the finest popcorn procured from reputable sources.

"The Southeastern Movie Festival is an outstanding promotional event which should be used as a pattern by regional groups throughout America. Such national exploitation will insure the future of the movie theatre industry," Smith concluded.

Beverage Promotion Discussed

CHICAGO—Midwest DAD's Root Beer bottlers recently concluded a regional sales meeting at the parent company's plant. The underlying theme was "A New Dynamic Approach to Advertising and Promotion for 1955."

Considerable research has been directed towards the root beer market and suitable copy themes. New plans call for emphasis on the "kids' market." A new jingle has been developed with "kids' appeal" and is tied in with self-liquidating premium promotions. Emphasis at present will be on radio—with short spots that will allow the DAD's bottler to develolp impact and high frequency in his territory.

Each DAD's bottler has received a tailor-made promotion for the territory he serves. At the close of the meeting, a complete kit containing details on promotions, local radio programs and merchandising plans, properly timed and geared with his sales curve, was presented to every bottler.

Concession Plans Are Set For Combined Convention

CHICAGO—At the Morrison Hotel on Nov. 6-9, the International Popcorn Association will join with National Allied, TESMA, and TEDA to present Popcorn-Candy and Concession Hall, occupying the entire third floor exhibition area with 117 booths offered to exhibiting supply firms. The popcorn and concession industries will have their "greatest show." Exhibition chairman is Carl Siegel, Stanley Warner Management Corporation, who put on the similar show last year in the Conrad Hilton Hotel, Chicago.

A special exhibition committee will assist Siegel. Serving are Bert Nathan, Theatre Popcorn Vending Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., and president, IPA; Lee Koken, RKO Theatres, New York; Lester Grand, Confection Cabinet Corporation, Chicago; Melvin Berman, Tri-States Automatic Candy Company, Buffalo; Leo Beresin, Berlo Vending Company, Philadelphia; Joe Kernell, ABC Vending Corporation, New York; Nat Buchman, Theatre Merchandising Corporation, Cambridge, Mass.; and Lloyd Haight, W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Detroit.

Advance requests for booth space by supply companies has taken up 80 per cent of the 117 available locations. Following the distribution of exhibit brochures, booth reservations are accepted in the order in which they are received, the postmark on the envelope being the controlling factor. Firms interested in exhibiting at the IPA 1955 show were advised to write Carl Siegel, exhibit chairman, International Popcorn Association, 201 North Wells Street, Chicago 6.

FST Names McCollum

JACKSONVILLE—Norris McCollum has been appointed to the executive staff, Florida State Theatres, one of the south's largest theatre circuits, as assistant to Bob Harris, manager, confection sales department.

McCollum is working on the formulation of sales policies at FST theatres and generally assisting Harris in conducting an accelerated merchandising program.

McCOLLUM

Candy Sales Changes Benefit Customer

"CANDY MANUFACTURERS are expending every effort to make it convenient for the consumer to purchase candy when and where he wants it," Philip P. Gott, president, National Confectioners' Association, Chicago, recently said at meeting of Association of Manufacturers of Confectionery and Chocolate in New York, in honor of John D. Hayes, president, Fanny Farmer Candy Shops, Inc., nationally known confectionery chain, and one of the originators of manufacturer-to-consumer selling through chain retail stores.

In paying tribute to Hayes, Gott said, "The recent announcement by Mr. Hayes of his plan to build roadside candy factory-stores where the public can watch the candy which it wishes to buy being made is evidence of the industry's desire to please the consumer by making candy available to them at all times. Roadside stores will join with one million other candy outlets such as vending machines, department, drug, and food stores, newsstands, theatres, 5 and 10 cent stores and others in distributing this scientifically prepared, delicious energy food."

According to Gott, consumers purchase their candy from the different types of distributors in the following amounts: from candy, nut, and confectionery stores, 26.2 per cent; from food stores, 20.7 per cent, from 5 and 10 cent stores, 10.1 per cent, drug stores, 10 per cent, department stores, 9.7 per cent, theatres, 9 per cent, with the remaining 14.3 per cent about equally divided between restaurants and lunch counters, and cigar stands, newsstands, and vending machines.

"Distribution as well as production techniques are changing rapidly." said Gott.

Charlotte

At a recent meeting of the Theatre Equipment and Supply Dealers of Charlotte, Charles Dudley, executive vice-president, Charlotte Merchants Association, spoke about the benefits of credit and at the same time pointed out the need for a supply dealers credit association, which would benefit both the customers and the dealers. A committee reported back their approval and the dealers voted unanimously to join the Theatre Equipment Dealers Credit Association Division of Credit Bureau of Charlotte, affiliated with the Credit Association throughout North and South Carolina. Through this medium, theatre and drive-in owners can establish credit with whomever they deal with and approval of contracts can be obtained in a

Harold Spears, chief barker, Atlanta, Ga., Variety Club, recently sponsored an old newspaper boys' day in cooperation with the Atlanta Journal and $85,000 was collected for the benefit of the Tent's Cerebral Palsy School Fund. Jacksonville

James L. Cartwright, Daytona Beach, Fla., district supervisor of Florida State Theatres, came in from Orlando where he attended the southeastern premiere of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command" at the Beacham. He said that the officers and enlisted men of Pinecastle Air Base of SAC, near Orlando, gave their complete cooperation in turning the premiere into a major public event. Orlando newspapers devoted several pages of publicity and pictures to the opening.

About 75 persons from the FST home office and theatres and from Film Row offices attended an enjoyable midnight dinner-dance held on the grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heekin's home on the Southside. Out-of-towners there included Bob Corbit, Orlando, and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Skaggs, St. Augustine. . . . Jessie Green, FST secretary, was ill for a week at St. Vincent's Hospital. . . . The massive Saenger was packed to capacity for the invitational preview of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command," filmed in VistaVision and Technicolor. Pre-screening ceremonies on stage were under the direction of Henry G. Plitt, and presented by The Air Force Association and Paramount Gulf Theatres. Major General Frank A. Armstrong, Jr., Barksdale Air Force Base, La., commander of the Strategic Air Command's Second Air Force, appeared on the stage along with the bomb crew from his base which recently set a new transcontinental speed record in a B-47 Stratojet bomber, who were presented special awards by General Armstrong in behalf of the Air Force, and by city councilman James B. Fitzmorris for New Orleans. General Armstrong also presented certificates of Air Force achievement to Plitt, vice-president, Paramount Gulf, and to manager Holland Smith, Saenger. Earlier, a luncheon was held at the International House by Paramount Gulf Theatres, Inc., with president Gaston J. Dureau, Jr., presiding. The honored guest was Brigadier General H. K. Mooney, commander of the 806th Air Force Division, Lake Charles, La., who told the luncheon group of press, radio, and television representatives about the Strategic Air Command's role if war breaks. With Dureau, the hosts were Plitt, Maurice Barr, secretary in charge of public relations, and William Holliday, branch manager, Paramount.

Construction Starts For UA New Orleans Branch Office

NEW ORLEANS—Construction of a one story air-conditioned brick building for United Artists new quarters on South Liberty Street in the heart of Film Row is underway. Leo Fellman and Company, represented by Stanley Lemarie and George Pabst, southern district manager, jointly announced the signing of a long term lease for the new building which will house the New Orleans branch office and serve as southern district headquarters. Designed by architects Goldstein, Parham, and Labouisse, the structure, occupying about 44,000 square feet of space, will boast aluminum trim and wide expanses of glass. The project will represent an expenditure of about $200,000, including the lease. Gervais F. Favrot Company, Inc., are handling the construction, with completion expected by Oct. 1.

Local industryites, amusement operators, and a legion of friends joined the family and relatives of Walter Albert Bonura in their great sorrow at his death at the age of 35. He had suffered since childhood from heart trouble which developed after an attack of rheumatic fever. Bonura was a native of New Orleans and since 1947 was widely-known in amusement and advertising circles handling the amusement advertising for The Item. His father was a New Orleans policeman. Surviving are his widow, their daughter, his mother, and a half brother. Funeral services, largely attended by urban and suburban theatre owners and managers, were held, with interment in Greenwood Cemetery.

Sympathy was extended to Eddie Stern, Wometco booker, in the death of his father. . . . Vacationers included Frances Myers, secretary to Elmer Hecht, Wometco district manager. Lanette Saxton is replacing her during the three weeks she is gone. . . . The Wometco Circuit sick list included Frank Myers, purchasing agent. . . . Managerial shifts included Krag Collins from the Strand to the Center, replacing Jim Frazier, resigned. Bill Cosper is now manager, Strand. He was formerly assistant, Tower. Howard De Bold has been assigned as assistant, Rosetta.

Greater Miamians and a number of out-of-town boosters of Variety Children's Hospital have swelled the 1955 fund campaign to $65,000, Committee of 1,000 Chairman Leo Adeeb reported. . . . Ethyl Gubernick, secretary, Wometco personnel department, represented the theatre and television industry on the WAC Recruiting Committee of Greater Miami at a recent luncheon at the Fontainebleau Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla. . . . Forty copies of the pocket book edition of "Blackboard Jungle" were given to the first 40 people in line at the boxoffice when that picture played at the Florida. Al Glick, Florida State publicist, arranged for a teen-age panel on WGBS-TV to discuss juvenile delinquency and give their opinions on the picture. This should be an extremely interesting and informative method for boosting the film.

"Miss Warner Brothers of 1955," Little Rock model Vanna Keepers, recently presented K. K. King, retiring president, and Jim Carberry, newly-elected president, Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas, with their invitations to attend a special trade screening of Warners' "Mister Roberts" at the Warner, Memphis.

Members of the Wometco Old Guard organization were guests at a banquet at the Fontainebleau Hotel, Miami Beach. Hosts, co-owners Sidney Meyer and Mitchell Wolfson, presented Patek Philippe watches to 20-year employees Walter Klements, manager, Mayfair Art, and Claude Norton, assistant art director. At the banquet, new officers of the Old Guard took over, with Burton Clark, new chairman, Board of Governors, one of the speakers. Harvey Fleischman, district manager, was master of ceremonies. The banquet was also the occasion to announce additional benefits to be granted to employees of the Wometco Circuit. In addition to being presented with the 20 years' service watch, all 20-year employees who do not presently receive four weeks vacation with pay, will now enjoy this added benefit. Employees who have been with the company continuously for 15 years will now be presented a bonus of two weeks pay at the Old Guard banquet in the year this period has been accomplished. In addition to these benefits, when an employee has completed 25 years of service, he will receive, at the annual banquet of the Old Guard, another bonus amounting to five weeks pay; after 30 years, six weeks pay; it shall be the policy of the company to add a week's bonus at each succeeding five-year period. Those who received their 25-year bonus at the affair were Hal Kopplin, art director; Sonny Shepherd, district manager; Mark Chartrand, public relations director; Frank Myers, purchasing agent, and Walter Toemmes, manager, Ace.

Noah Schechter, "Mr. Show Business" of this city, was honored by several hundred friends at a party on the 50th anniversary of his successful career. The affair was at the Variety Club, of which he is a charter member. Starting at 17 as a spear carrier in a local stock company, he has worked in every branch of the entertainment field, including regional publicity director for various film companies. For many recent years, he has been local manager for the Shubert interests, while frequently helping promote city-wide activities in which the film industry has participated. All who know Schechter wish him many more successful years in entertaining the public and contributing to community life.

Local film executives are watching with keen interest efforts being made in the state legislature to put over a new censorship bill. Representative Gilbert Bettman of this city fought the bill vigorously in committee, expressing doubt that members could vote for the bill and still uphold their oaths to support the U. S. Constitution. Fines up to $5,000 and six months in jail are provided in the bill for possession of films which the board of censors declare obscene or tending to incite public disorder.

Robert C. McNabb, 20th-Fox branch manager, and his many friends got a big kick out of a classified ad in a local newspaper, in which it was stated that "the fastidious and discriminating will appreciate the find hand ironing done by R. C. McNabb," and offering pickup and delivery service. Several weeks earlier, McNabb and Sol Gordon, 20th-Fox branch manager in Detroit, shared a room in a Dayton, O., hotel, where Gordon found a hand iron left behind by a previous occupant. McNabb borrowed the iron and forgot to return it to Gordon, who "retaliated" with the amusing ad. The kicker is that McNabb had phone calls from several prospective "customers."

Realart, headed by Jay M. Goldberg and his sister, Mrs. Mitchell Blachschleger, is observing its 40th anniversary this summer. It is the oldest independent film exchange in the nation. . . . Richard Rosenfield, president, Standard Concessions, is treasurer of Cincinnati Summer Playhouse, Inc., which plans a 15-week run of Broadway plays with guest stars, opening June 14 in a suburban location. . . . E. M. Booth, MGM branch manager, was in Columbus, O., on business; while P. K. Wessel, treasurer, States Film Service, was in Cleveland to work on SFS shipping service for RKO in that area. He was accompanied by Meyer Adelman, Philadelphia, SFS president.

"Sinbad" Banning Stirs Controversy

COLUMBUS, O.—Ohio exhibitors were advised by Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, to play all pictures which have the Production Code seal, even though some of them may be condemned by the Legion of Decency. His statement, caused by the "C" rating given Howard Hughes' "Son Of Sinbad," followed an announcement by Catholic Bishop George J. Rehring of Toledo, O., calling for a boycott of theatres which show films condemned by the Legion of Decency.

"There must be a point beyond which any theatre owner must decide that he will not bow to pressure groups," said Wile. "If a picture has the Production Code seal and you refuse to show it because it is condemned, you are saying in effect, 'Let's forget about the Production Code and use the Legion of Decency ratings.' A rating by a group of people, who may have valid reasons in their own minds for condemning a picture, should apply to that group alone. We recommend using the line for such pictures, 'This picture has the seal of approval of the Production Code authority'."

Wile said that "Son Of Sinbad" was cleared by the Dec. 4 decision of the Ohio Supreme Court. Eight Columbus neighborhoods are scheduled for first-run showing of the picture in mid-June.

Bishop Rehring said attendance at theatres showing "C" rated pictures is a "proximate occasion of mortal sin." He said "respectable people" will shun such theatres and not allow their children to attend them. He said the movie industry has shown in the past that it can provide "healthy entertainment" but that "some persons in the industry" refuse to supply the public with unobjectionable films.

T. O. McCleaster, 20th-Fox division manager, and Bob Cohan, Indianapolis branch manager, were in to help promote the company's "Clean Sweep Drive," while Tiny Turner, New York, and Douglas Beck, Chicago, were here to help promote "Gang Busters," distributed in this area by Realart, with 50 houses in the area being the saturation goal. . . . Also in were Mark Goodman, IFE district manager, and Morris Lefko, RKO district manager.

Fess Parker, star of Disney's "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier," is slated for personal appearances here when the film opens June 15 at the downtown Palace. . . . Carl Gentzel, MGM salesman, has moved into a new home in suburban Fort Wright, Ky. . . . Jack Berger, promising young dancer, and son of Mike Berger, MGM office manager, won a watch in a recent TV show. . . . Bill Settos, Springfield, O., exhibitor, is recovering from rib fractures suffered in an auto accident. . . . Mary Hogan is a new Paramount clerk. . . . Vacationing were Thelma Ilhardt, secretary to H J. Gilles, Paramount branch manager; Louise Vinson, Paramount assistant cashier; and John Duff, Realart booker.

Cleveland

Exhibitors are crying the summer blues. Attendance at indoor theatres has dropped to the vanishing point, many theatre owners report. But there are occasional breaks in the clouds. One is the local engagement of "To Paris with Love," which is doing such good business at the Heights Art that manager Edward Shulman has announced it will continue "indefinitely." "Strategic Air Command" had a tremendous opening at the Hippodrome, proving again the old adage, "Give 'em what they want and they'll buy it."

Leonard Mishkind and Sam P. Gorrel, who own a circuit operated as General Theatres, added another link in the chain with the purchase of the Olympia, 1750-seat local neighborhood house. The property, including the entire building containing stores and suites, was purchased from L. C. Glaab.

The Salesmen's Club of Cleveland will hold it's annual summer baseball contest and picnic on June 25 at the home of 20th-Fox salesman Sam Lichter, as usual. Arrangements for the affair are in the hands of Irving Marcus, National Screen Service. Jim Levitt, president, also announces that its meeting place has been shifted from the 20th-Fox screen room to

Burlesque Films Hurt Censor Fight

COLUMBUS, O.—Showing of "burlesque pictures" in several northern Ohio drive-ins has been jeopardizing the cause of anti-censorship as a crucial vote on censorship bills looms. House of Representatives is expected to vote soon on two censorship measures recommended by the judiciary committee.

Senator Charles A. Mosher, Republican, Oberlin, leader in the anti-censorship fight in the Ohio Senate, declared that he will drop his repeal measure and support the House proposals unless such pictures cease to be shown in Ohio.

Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, said agreement has been obtained from several distributors of these pictures not to take future bookings for Ohio drive-ins and other theatres. Those who have agreed to drop such bookings include Jack Safer, Harold Hoffert, Archie Rose, and the Times Film Corporation.

Governor Frank Lausche, in a letter to The Catholic Chronicle, Toledo, said that he will do "everything possible to get a new movie censorship law." He denounced "indecent" films and said they are "only a mild forerunner of what can be expected unless a stronger censorship law is enacted." He said it is "folly" to expect that the movie industry will censor itself. He said movies will become more and more "a morally disintegrating influence upon youth" unless they are curbed by law.

Bob Lavell, the new sales representative for the Falls City Theatre Equipment Company has returned from a complete tour of southern Indiana, getting acquainted with the exhibitors and other members of the industry in his newly acquired territory.

According to Floyd Morrow, Morrow Theatre Service, a buying and booking service for drive-in theatres, he will handle the buying and booking for Noah Campbell's Lycinda Drive-In, Fusonia, Ky., which was scheduled to open on May 27. . . . Ed McIntosh's Sunset Drive-In, Booneville, Ky., should be open around the latter part of June.

Over 60 theatres were represented at the organization meeting of the new Kentucky Exhibitors Association being formed as an affiliate of National Allied, held at the Falls City Theatre Equipment Company. On hand to explain the aims, purposes, and aids of National Allied to the local group were Abram F. Myers, general counsel; Rube Shor, president; Wilbur Snaper, vice-president; Chris Pfister, former president, Ohio Allied, and W. A. Carroll, executive secretary, Indiana Allied. The Kentucky group was established, and an executive board was set up immediately to handle affairs of the new organization until such time that a regular election of officers and board members could be held. Appointed to the executive board were E. L. Ornstein, Louis A. Arru, Anna Bell Ward, J. M. Reiss, Floyd Morrow, and Bob Enoch. Ornstein was appointed a temporary national director by the executive board to be sent to the National Allied board meeting held in New York last week.

Denver

The convention of Allied Rocky Mountain Independent Theatres in Denver passed resolutions asking that toll television be denied rights to the airways, claiming it would drive many theatres out of business that are now making a little money. They also asked the presidents of film companies to reconsider their refusal to attend a top level round table with heads of Allied and TOA. Bennie Berger, Central Allied president, and Reuben Shor, Allied States president, were present and talked on industry problems, labeling high film rentals perhaps the most acute, especially when it applies to the smaller situations. They urged a different sales policy for the smaller spots so that they can live and still give the film companies some income. Directors elected include Neil Beezley, Fred Hall, Gus Ibold, J. H. George McCool, office manager, United Artists, and Valborg H. Anderson, were married. . . . Southwestern Film Service was forced to make detours of 300 miles to deliver some film, because of floods. We don't know if any heroism was involved, but the incident brings to mind the self-dedication of the U. S. Postal Service.

Des Moines

Gene Bradley leased the Dows, Dows, Ia., and reopened the house which was shuttered for several months. . . . Lewis Lebovitz closed the Iowa, Madrid, Ia., for lack of business. Equipment will be shipped to Onawa, where it will be used at a drive-in. . . . The Corral Drive-In, Perry, Ia., literally got a wagon load of customers at a recent buck night. A total of 30 young people arrived on a hayrack and got in for a dollar. Carl Schwanebeck, manager, simply waved in the group of Rippe high school students on it when they decided to stop to see the show. . . . Hal Barnes, Central States, appeared on the MGM workshop held in Atlanta. His topic was "Building of Public Relations." . . . Myron Blank, head, Central States, and his wife have returned from a trip to the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Los Angeles

Paramount's multiple first-run releasing plan in the metropolitan area, which the company pioneered and developed three years ago, is being expanded to take in 10 districts instead of the usual seven. The plans' extension started with "The Far Horizons." This multiple booking gave "The Far Horizons" a seating capacity of almost 27,000, the largest for any Paramount simultaneous first-run in any metropolitan area. The theatres are the Orpheum, downtown; Vogue, Hollywood; Picwood, West Los Angeles, and Crown, Pasadena, plus six drive-ins, including the Rosecrans, Century, Pickwick, Whittier, El Monte, and Van Nuys.

Attorney Ezra Stern and Mrs. Stern are enjoying a two weeks rest in the Hawaiian Islands, guests of showman Kroger Babb and Hallmark Productions, Inc. Stern was chairman of the recent Variety Clubs International convention, being chief barker of tent 25. He needs a rest, no doubt, and we are wishing them a good vacation in the Pacific.

Milwaukee

Portland

One hundred members of the Oregon Theatre Owners Association met at the Benson Hotel for the second of a series of meetings being conducted by TOA affiliated units. Alfred Starr discussed toll television, Exhibitors' Film Financial Group, and the critical situation brought on by the film distributors' failure to recognize the general plight of theatres. Portland representatives of press, TV and radio attended the portion of the meeting devoted to toll-TV, and their immediate reaction was excellent. Several articles appeared immediately endorsing the stand taken by the Organizations for Free TV, with one of the largest dailies completely reversing its previous stand. Albert F. Forman of Portland, President of the Oregon Group, presided.

St. Louis

James H. Arthur, president, Fanchon and Marco Service Corporation, asked support in the fight against toll-TV in a talk to the members of the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis, Inc., at a luncheon meeting in the Sheraton Hotel in connection with the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Council and the installation of its 1955-56 officers. Mrs. Arretus Franklin Burt, founder and honorary president, was especially honored at the luncheon meeting by the presentation of a pageant depicting the highlights of the founding of the first Better Film Council at her home on Oct. 6, 1929. The pageant text had been prepared by Mrs. Gustav F. Goetsch, retiring president, who also designed the emblem of the Federation of Motion Picture Councils, Inc., which held its first national meeting at Cleveland last month.

In Canton, Mo., the 500-seat Canton has been sold by William Collins, DeSoto, Mo., to Lawrence J. Walter, South Dakota. Walter will also take over the lease of R. L. Adkins, who has been operating the theatre. Walter plans to take over the management on June 1.

In Bridgeport, Ill., the Allison Drive-In recently switched its program schedule to daylight saving time because of the large patronage from Indiana that use the fast time. The shows continue to start at dusk but the main feature is shown first instead of after the intermission. Lester Lucas manages the drive-in.

A crew of 25, members of Stuart Reynolds Productions, Los Angeles, are here at Lackland Air Force Base filming the first of a TV series entitled "Skip Taylor, United States Air Force." . . . An angry local minister voiced his objections to three "adult only" movies being shown here. The Reverend J. T. Morrow, an adviser to the Motion Picture Reviewing Board of the Councils of Churches, decried the showing of "Garden Of Eden" at the Texas and the twin bill of "Violated" and "Miss Body Beautiful" at the Empire. The minister has called on the city's vice squad to check the films for an official opinion by the police department. The vice squad objected to the pictures of nude women in the marquee. The vice squad head said that he was following a "hands off" policy unless the film in question is "downright lewd" or unless the Chief of Police orders police intervention. Tommie Powers, manager, Texas, said that "Garden Of Eden" was attracting more movie goers than any recent film at the Texas. George Kaczman, manager, Empire, claimed movies like the two showing at his theare are an economic must in the movie industry from time to time. "We get class A movies here and we can't even meet expenses. This is the kind of thing that movie goers want every once in a while," said Kaczmar.

Lee J. Cobb was hospitalized in Houston, Tex., with a heart ailment. He suffered a heart attack while there on location for Columbia's "The Houston Story." . . . Seattle

The board of Theatre Owners of Washington, Northern Idaho and Alaska met with Alfred Starr and passed two resolutions of support for the actions and policies of TOA. The first was an expression of confidence in TOA leadership and complete approval of the efforts that they are making to solve industry problems. The second provided for the immediate creation of a local action committee prepared to implement immediately any remedial program that may be recommended by the officers of TOA. The first project of this committee will be theatre-by-theatre contact on behalf of E.F.F.G. Starr outlined in detail the activities of Organizations for Free-TV and the tremendous job that has been accomplished in alerting the general public to the menace of slot machine TV. Joseph J. Rosenfield, Spokane, Wash., presided, and also made an eloquent plea for the support of Exhibitor's Film Financial group. Altogether, it has been gratifying to find so many exhibition groups endorsing action against the toll plan.

The publisher and staff of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR deeply appreciate the many expressions of sympathy extended upon the passing of Herbert M. Miller, who had been editor for over 25 years.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Boston Crosstown

The gates of the new Tri-Town Drive-In, Lunenberg, were formally opened by the owners, Fred Fedeli and his son, Edwin. This is the first drive-in to be operated by the Fedelis, who own the Rialto, Worcester. The theatre attracted a crowd of 650 cars on the opening night. The entire project was engineered, designed, and supervised by Richard Rubin, local drive-in builder. The flat screen, slightly tilted, was built on the premises, is 116 feet wide, and can show CinemaScope films. The concession building has four identical lanes and serves all the popular foodstuffs, including the 60-cent Family Style pizza pies, hamburgers, hot dogs, French fries, shrimp rolls, popcorn, a variety of ice creams and hot and cold drinks. The Tri-Town has a drawing population of about 100,000 persons. Among the many Boston industryites who journeyed the 45 miles to Lunenberg to wish the Fedelis success were Harry Germaine, Price Premium; Joe Schmuck, Drive-In Theatre Associates of New England, Inc.; Joe Rahilly, MGM salesman; Bill Kumins, Warners manager, and others. Ernie Comi, general manager, Capitol Theatre Supply, was present, as was Charlie Fish, chief engineer for the company who supervised the installation of the RCA projectors in the booth. The Lowe brothers, Junior and Phil, Theatre Candy Company, who designed and equipped the concession building, were busily engaged in training the help and putting things in order for the big intermission break. Neil Barbarrie, chief engineer, RCA, was also on hand. The chief projectionist is Paul A. Lakutis.

The board of selectmen of Winthrop, Mass., has refused to license MGM's "Blackboard Jungle" to the Winthrop, owned by the Snider circuit. The film was booked and advertised to be shown on May 20-21. In explaining the reasons, the board stated that they had received several telephone calls from parents who objected to the showing of the film on a weekend when many youngsters would view it on the grounds that it might have a detrimental effect on juveniles. Officials of the circuit asked for and received an opportunity to address the three-man board at a special meeting on May 19. Larry Herman, general manager of the circuit, and his attorney, Meyer Israel, argued that the film has a PCA seal, it is rated in Legion of Decency class B, and that it had played in all the surrounding towns and cities, including drive-ins. They also maintained that it is against the First and 14th amendments to arbitrarily refuse to grant the license. The board stated that it was told that the Reverend William C. Bruckhart urged parishioners of the St. John Evangelist Catholic Church not to see the film or let their children see it. In McKay, died at the Rutland, Vt., hospital. She was a partner with New England Theatres, Inc., in the Paramount, Rutland.

After 35 years service in the MGM sales department, Harry Worden has retired, effective May 21. For 30 years he has been a salesman in the New England territory where he has made a host of friends. He has covered every state and nook and cranny in this area. After a vacation with Mrs. Worden, Harry claims he is to remain in show business. He started in the industry with the old General Film Company and for a time sold film for Goldwyn Pictures. He was hired by Marcus Loew, himself, in 1920 when he joined Loew's, Inc. An old vaudevillian, he has been in skits with Jack Benny, Will Rogers, Chic Sale, Burns and Allen, and many others. He and Mrs. Worden have two daughters and five grandchildren.

Jack Markle, Columbia publicist, effected an unusual tie-in in the classified section of The Boston Post with the Columbia feature "Five Against The House," playing the Pilgrim. Each day in the classified ad section of the Post there appeared 10 names and addresses taken at random from the telephone book. The lucky ones mentioned were entitled to free passes. The Post ran an eight-column streamer each day heading the ad section which mentioned the contest, the name of the film, the name of the theatre, and a two-column still from the film. Also, the Post used a two-column box stating the rules of the contest. The plug ran one week in advance of the playdate with different names each day, resulting in excellent boxoffice.

Arthur Stein has been promoted to district manager for all the Levine-Yanofsky drive-ins by president Joseph E. Levine. Stein has been connected with the circuit since 1948. Ray McNamara, Allyn, promoted "Strategic Air Command" and "To Paris With Love" newspaper contests. For "SAC," he offered model airplane kits and theatre passes to writers of first 25 essays on topic, "The Strategic Air Command is important to our nation because . . ." He offered bottles of perfume and theatre passes for first five correct answers to question, "How many pictures has Alec Guinness appeared in?" as part of "To Paris" campaign.

George E. Landers, Hartford division manager, E. M. Loew's Theatres, spotted a pigeonhole parking garage prominently used in Columbia's "Five Against The House," and promptly tied up with the builders of the first such garage erected along the eastern seaboard for newspaper co-op ads. Opening of the garage, in downtown Hartford, happened to follow the picture's opening by three days, and Landers was able to land sizable display boards, etc., at the garage. Landers, meanwhile, is keeping an eye on construction of the circuit's latest project, the $250,000, 500-car capacity Candlelight Drive-In, Bridgeport, Conn. Opening has been changed from early June to approximately July 1.

New screen, measuring 119 feet wide and 44 feet high, has been installed at the E. M. Loew's Hartford Drive-In, Newington, Conn. Former unit measured 72 feet wide and 44 feet high. Ramps have been regraded, and playground equipment increased. Concession building now has a pizza oven. Manager John Silverwatch gave away Davy Crockett fur caps to lucky stub holders during a revival of "Davy Crockett, Indian Scout." The new ozoner, one of the most modern in this area, is looking forward to record summer business in this beautiful region.

Latest development in the long-projected George LeWitt Drive-In for nearby Berlin, Conn., had the State Traffic Commission granting provisional approval of the application to construct an outdoor theatre at the intersetcion of Route 5 and Deming Road. Approval, it was pointed out, is contingent upon LeWitt's compliance with five recommendations made by the Commission concerning traffic conditions in the area.

Quick thinking on the part of Harold Lancaster, manager, Strand, and a softly-spoken request that calm prevail, recently averted what might have been a serious situation, as some 500 patrons attending an evening performance remained in their seats as police and theatre attendants searched for a bomb reportedly placed under a seat. The Saturday evening performance was just about getting underway, when a telephone call was received at police headquarters, stating that a bomb had been set in the Strand and was due to go off any minute. A squad of police were rushed to the theatre; nearby policemen were called off their beats; and Lancaster, who was home to supper, was summoned. The grim half hour the police spent peering anxiously under every seat, and into every corner of the theatre had more suspense than the film being shown. As the 500 patrons changed seats on police orders, unaware of the seriousness of the situation, Lancaster's coolness had apparently charmed them. Failing to find any suspicious object in the auditorium proper, the police made a thorough search of the boiler room, all closets, and all other logical spots where a bomb might be concealed. When the search proved fruitless, the lights were lowered, and normal operations were continued.

In New Haven, United Artists' branch manager Irving Mendelson, center, recently discussed multiple deals with Morton Katz, left, buyer and booker, Connecticut Theatre Circuit; and Elmer Hirth, buyer-booker, Stanley Warner. The UA branch was one of the winners in the recent Bob Benjamin drive.

Something of an innovation, and a stunt that attracted widespread attention, recently was inaugurated by Joe Jarvis, genial owner-manager, Gilbert Stuart, nearby Riverside neighborhood house. Already much discussed for his unusual and unique type of advertising, Jarvis prevailed on one of his patrons to write a newspaper advertisement. The copy, presaging "Hit The Deck," was so highly complimentary that it was used in its entirety in local newspapers. Appended was a note from Jarvis, explaining the situation, together with a breezy comment that he, Jarvis, would have to latch on to other patrons to write his newspaper advertising. . . . This city suffered the loss of another downtown first-run house when the Westminster Playhouse recently closed for good. The Westminster Street house, operating under Lockwood-Gordon management, had been featuring mostly foreign imports and art films. This shuttering leaves the downtown area with only four active houses, Loew's State, the Majestic, Strand, and RKO Albee. . . . Dave Levin, RKO Albee manager, staged a special midnight 3-D horror show, offering "Revenge Of The Creature" and "Cult Of The Cobra."

For the second time in less than a month, a motion-picture world premiere was held in this city. Columbia's "A Prize Of Gold" attracted the attention of the world's jewelry industry. In conjunction with the first Jewelry Festival ever held, William J. Trambukis, manager, Loew's State, cooperating with the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Association, arranged an unusually interesting, and for him and his theatre, a highly productive promotion. Hundreds of representatives of the jewelry industry from all parts of the country, and several foreign nations, converged on this city for the festival. They were treated to an elaborate display and considerable entertainment. Hollywood actresses Hildy Parks and Georgia Landau, together with several officials of Columbia, including Al Rylander and George Ettinger, were guests of the jewelry industry. The starlets appeared on the famous "Breakfast-At-The-Sheraton" TV show, toured the world-famous Speidel plant, and visited several other jewelry establishments. Following this, they were guests at several dinners and buffet luncheons. Festivities reached a climax when the Hollywood lovelies were escorted to Loew's State, where a section of that area was roped off by police officials. At ceremonies held in the lobby of the popular Weybosset Street house, Governor Dennis J. Roberts, of Rhode Island, and mayors of several surrounding cities, briefly addressed the throngs.

A change of film buyers for the Stanley Warner Corporation in the New Haven zone, which includes the Albany district, brought Harry Kaplowitz from the Philadelphia territory as successor to Larry Lapidus, new buyer for the Frank Damis string of New Jersey drive-ins. Honored by colleagues and friends at a farewell dinner in New Haven, Lapidus came here later

SW Spring Drive Winners Named

NEWARK — George Kemp, manager, Montauk, Passaic, N. J., was awarded a $100 bond for best series of promotions during the first month of the Spring Movie Festival, it was announced by Charles A. Smakwitz, zone manager, Stanley Warner in New Jersey.

Second prize, a $50 bond, was won by Diane Gordon, Central, Jersey City. Adolph Finkelstein, manager, Embassy, Orange, received third place honors and a $25 bond.

In addition to Smakwitz, the judging committee consisted of district managers Anthony Williams, Harold Widenhorn, and Bernard Silverman. Also, Edgar Goth, director of advertising and publicity; John McKenna, film buyer; and bookers Arnold Michelson and Bill Clark; plus Louis Dennis, manager, contact department.

Highlights of Kemp's promotions were a series of stage "attendance-building" stunts. These included a "He-Man" Contest with northern New Jersey's handsomest, most muscular males vying for honors, and a giant Mambo Festival which featured a dance contest to pick New Jersey's Mambo champions.

A Dixieland Jazz Concert with "all time jazz greats" and a Tee Top 'n Shorts Pin-up Girl Contest rounded out Kemp's special stage events on successive weeks of the drive's first month. All of the stage events were sponsored with promoted money from the cooperating merchant who in each instance defrayed cost of advertising, talent, and music. Consistent well-rounded feature picture selling was also an important factor in the selection of Kemp as winner.

Diane Gordon's activities included a beauty contest, circus ticket promotion, an Aunt Jemima tie-up, plus TV and radio tie-ins. Adolph Finkelstein's top stunt was a promoted world premiere of "Murder In The Villa Capri."

Among those attending a recent press screening of RKO-Pathe's short subject, "Devil Take Us," at the RCA Johnny Victor theatre, New York City, were, front row, left to right, Sidney Kramer, short subjects sales manager; Herbert H. Hawkinson, assistant foreign manager; William H. Seymour, vice-president, Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, who took the opportunity to present to Greenblatt for RKO and the producer of the subject, Herbert Morgan, the Liberty Mutual trophy which is awarded annually for the best theatrical motion picture of the year pertaining to traffic safety.

with his replacement for introductions of the latter and a break-in rountine. His former local boss, Charles A. Smakwitz, now Stanley Warner zone manager in Newark, toast-mastered the New Haven farewell. A group including managers Dan Houlihan, Paramount; Ray Smith, Warners; Norman Jackter, Columbia; and Norman Weitman, U-I, attended the dinner. SW managers in Albany, Al La Flamme, Strand; Al Swett, Ritz; Oscar J. Perrin, Sr., Madison; and John Brousseau, Delaware; Troy, Sid Summers, Troy; and Utica, Andy Roy, Stanley, and Mrs. Ottilie Fearing, Avon, sent a present to Lapidus, via district manager Joseph Liss.

Fabian's Palace arranged a strong tie-up and promotion campaign for "Strategic Air Command." The theatre had a former sergeant in the Eighth Air Force upon whom to turn for suggestions, assistant manager Eugene Ganott. Ganott served 25 months in England with a bomb group and while there saw the dynamic Curtis LeMay, SAC chief. Incidentally, the Paramount picture received tremendous plugging in this area, via Arthur Godfrey's radio and television programs.

A sign in Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel lobby indicates the work being done on the old Rose Lounge quarters for the Variety Club's new rooms, and for another rental project. Chief Barker George H. Schenck conferred with the Sheraton chain's head housekeeper about furnishings for the quarters. A meeting at which Jack Goldberg, second assistant chief barker and delegate to the recent Variety International convention in Los Angeles, will report, is the last scheduled in the present rooms. . . . Butterfield and Wolf, Inc., has been authorized to conduct a motion picture business in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par. Attorneys are Danneberg, Hazen, and Lake.

The present screen at John and Peter Marotta's Carman Drive-In, Guilderland, N. Y., is reported to be almost as wide as that at Fabian's Mohawk Drive-In, Colonie. It is around 120 feet.

"Mister Roberts" amused and moved, relaxed and gripped a group of industry people and Navy-Marine recruiting personnel at a morning preview in the Strand. The screening, arranged by Warners' manager Ray S. Smith, preceded by several months the scheduled release of the picture in the exchange district. One of those attending, Phil Rapp, manager, Fabian's Plaza, Schenectady, N. Y., had been concerned with the first presentation hereabouts, of the smash stage play, more than four years ago. A lobby sign read, "Mr. Exhibitor, Meet Mister Roberts." Taking a look at the opposition's product, and strongly commending it, were Norman Jackter, Columbia manager; Norman Weitman, Universal-International manager; and U-I salesman Eugene Vogel. Earle Rooney, assistant manager, Strand, also was on hand.

Mrs. Frances Faughnan, wife of former Warner Theatres zone contact manager James P. Faughnan, was one of 30 Albany public school teachers honored at a "Teacher Recognition Day" banquet in ballrom of Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel. The Day, May 23, was proclaimed by Governor Averell Harriman. Fourteen local civic organizations cooperated in arranging the testimonial. Dr. Frederick J. Moffitt, associate state commissioner of education, headed the speakers. . . . Woodrow Campbell, one-time assistant contact man, Warners up-state zone offices, and later an RKO booker, is now serving as stage hand at a Fabian drive-in outside Albany.

Plans for the Albany end of a closed circuit telephone conference, on June 7, with the distributor and exhibitor chairmen of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital collection drive, went forward under the direction of Ray S. Smith, Warners' manager. The conference, which Film Row managers and exhibitor leaders have been invited to hear at the Warners' branch, will get underway at 10:30 a.m. Saul J .Ullman, Fabian division manager, is expected to serve as exhibitor chairman.

Another item of increased operating costs for theatres is the hike in advertising rates for The Albany Times-Union. The former charge of 18½ cents per inch for Monday through Saturday morning insertions was cancelled and a new one of 20 cents was put into effect. For the Sunday edition, the jump was from 24 to 26 cents. Distributors are also affected where they share the advertising expenditure for a picture with the theatre.

Jane Wyman is greeted by producer Frank P. Rosenberg upon her recent arrival at Idlewild Airport from Hollywood to begin her starring role in Warners' "Miracle in the Rain," to be filmed on location in New York City.

Times-Union is a Hearst morning publication. The afternoon Knickerbocker News, a Gannett daily, charges 22 cents an inch for theatre copy. It no longer reviews films at the Palace and Strand, but prints two-paragraph summaries not by-lined. Following the transfer of critic Cliff Bradt to the editorial-writing department, Harold Henderson caught pictures for the K-N, but he was given another assignment last summer. Some industry observers believe the no-criticism policy is a bad break for the top first-run houses. Edgar S. Van Olinda reviews for T-U. C. R. Roseberry does likewise for a paper at Delaware, art spot. Schenectady is the only other city in the exchange territory whose papers regularly review screen attractions.

The Marciano-Cockell telecast churned up a mild boxoffice action in the 1500-seat Grand, which sold 400 tickets (at $3.30). It was the smallest number for a Theatre Network Television origination in the five years such closed-circuits have been seen here. It generated livelier enthusiasm within; the predominantly male audience whooped and hollered as Marciano clobbered Cockell. They appeared to be satisfied, even surprised, that the bout went almost nine rounds. Lessee Paul Wallen, who suffered a sharp financial reversal in his first TNT presentation, the second Marciano-Charles fight, forced to refund some 1200 admissions at $3.30, because the picture was lost for several rounds, took a whipping on the Marciano-Cockell origination. He hoped for better results the next time, with more evenly matched contestants. Many fans doubtlessly remained home to hear the broadcast of the fracas. The same forces apparently worked against a substantial take on the telecast in the 2460-seat Proctor's at Troy.

The Very Rev. Msgr. Edward S. Schwegler, diocesan director of the Legion of Decency, discussed the condemned classification given, RKO's "Son of Sinbad," in the Union and Echo, Catholic Weekly, rapping the producers. . . . Nat Marcus, branch manager, Warners, is greatly pleased over praise given "Mister Roberts," following its special preview in the Center. Top personalities of press, radio, and TV were present.

Application to build a drive-in theatre in Brighton has met with opposition from property owners. The town's Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals have taken the proposal under advisement after a public hearing Option on the land has been taken by Philip Cohen and Morris Slotnick, operators of Cinema Theatres in Buffalo and Rochester.

The World, Rochester, has temporarily suspended operations. Opened last fall as a first-run theatre after an overhaul job, the World abandoned its first-run policy within a few weeks and operated as a neighborhood house.

About 1500 TV patrons of the Center were victims of a technical knockout before Marciano ever threw a punch at Cockell. Picture reception of the closed-circuit telecast was kayoed by technical troubles before the bell rang for the first round. . . . Dewey Michaels booked the films of the fight in the Palace, downtown burlesque house, and did big business with them. . . . The Eastman, Rochester, re-opened. Closed after four panels of the ceiling fell last December, the upper portion has been entirely renovated. . . . Plans to establish an historical collection of 16mm. films "that depict the great steps in the technological and cultural progress of the United States," have been announced by Syracuse University, which declares this will be "the first attempt to locate, collect, and evaluate documentary films which are at present scattered throughout the nation." . . . After two years as personal manager of Margaret O'Brien, Joseph Chomyn, Rochester, has embarked on a summer enterprise as associate director of the Starlite, Indianapolis. However, he is not deserting Miss O'Brien, and if tentative plans materialize for her to make a picture in Hollywood, Joe will join her as manager.

The Eastman Kodak Company will sponsor a new filmed TV series beginning in October. The half-hour programs, to be produced by Hal Roach Studios in association with the Screen Directors Guild, will include drama, travel, musicals, westerns and comedy, and be known as "Screen Directors Playhouse." George Sidney, president of the Guild, said that the series will introduce many outstanding directors to television. Hal Roach, Jr., president and executive producer, Hal Roach Studios, said the series will bring to television films men with proven ability to entertain the mass audience. All revenue received by the Guild will be turned over to the Guild's Educational and Benevolent Foundation Treasury.

Sam Geffen, formerly associated with the Buffalo National Screen Service sales staff, returned from a year's stay on the west coast, and now is city salesman for Warners, according to an announcement by Nat Marcus, exchange manager. . . . For the third season, services are to be conducted this summer at the Empire Drive-In, West Webster, each Sunday morning at 8:30, starting June 19, and continuing until Labor Day. The Empire is operated by Mr. and Mrs. H. Graden Hodges.

Paramount's "Strategic Air Command" received an exciting send-off at the Paramount, with a big advance campaign put on by Arthur Krolick, Charlie Taylor, and Edward Miller, and an assist from E. J. Wall, field representative, Paramount. The campaign started with a roto section preview in The Sunday Courier-Express three weeks in advance. There was also a lobby display giving the highlights of the New York newspaper reviews of the premiere. Cross plug trailers in all four of the Buffalo UPT theatres were used two weeks in advance, fifty taxi-cabs in Buffalo carried posters constantly on the move, and there was saturation radio and TV spot promotion. On opening night there were impressive ceremonies on stage, and Paramount presented a plaque to Lawrence D. Bell, president, Bell Aircraft Corporation.

Dr. Dan Poling, editor, Christian Herald, recently presented to Leo F. Samuels, president, Walt Disney's Buena Vista Film Distribution Company, a plaque, in association with the Protestant Motion Picture Council, naming "The Living Desert" and "The Vanishing Prairie" award winners of 1955.

Buffalo, has been elected president of the new North Main Street Business Association, organized primarily "to furnish assistance and advice to young boys and girls in the University Heights area." Levitch declares merchants realize teen-agers have many problems and that they will be customers of tomorrow.

Mrs. Elmer F. Lux was installed as president of the Democratic Club at ceremonies in the Park Lane. She is the wife of the head of Elmart Theatres, Inc. . . . Frank L. Smith is a Rochesterian for whom the Eastman Theatre really has memories. Frank has been with the theatre since its opening in 1922, first as treasurer, more recently as house manager. Before Smith was hired by the late George Eastman for the theatre post, he worked for a time in the old National theatre.

Robert T. Murphy, managing director, Century, got good publicity in The Courier-Express when the newspaper arranged a party in the theatre to pay tribute to a group of carriers for their outstanding records. The presentations were made at the theatre party, some 1,500 carriers attending, and Bob received good space in the sheet for his current show.

The Women's League of Tent 7, Variety Club, staged a rummage sale to raise money for the club's Cerebral Palsy Clinic in the Children's Hospital. . . . Dr. Philip Liebig, of Granville, is the owner of the Northside Drive-In recently reopened near Watertown. . . . The Rochester Club, Rochester, is installing CinemaScope and Arthur Krolick, UPT district manager, Jay Golden, RKO Theatres district manager, and Lester Pollock held a meeting with the club's officers to give them the advantage of their technical knowledge of the new equipment. . . . Rochester's Police Chief William Winfield is making up an honorary chief's badge for George Murphy, MGM public relations executive, who was a guest of honor at the recent Rochester Police Ball. It will be the 97th badge in Murphy's honorary collection. Lester Pollock, manager, Loew's, Rochester, has received word from Hollywood that Murphy went back with glowing reports of his visit and of the police dance.

Arthur Treacher, comedy star of screen and stage, was the particular attraction of the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club's annual Ladies' Day celebration. . . . Richard T. Kemper, zone manager, Dipson Theatres, and resident manager, Buffalo Erlanger, was in a group of Buffalo Saints and Sinners who journeyed to the Open House Party, Bradford, Pa., staged by the Bradford tent of Saints and Sinners. . . . When Keefe Brasselle was in the other day to do some advance promotion for his newest starring vehicle, Filmaker's "Mad At The World," current at the Paramount, he was interviewed by press, radio, and TV, and was guest of honor at a party staged in Club 31 by Lou Lieser, head, Lieser Film Distributing Company, Inc., which is handling the picture in upper New York. Among those at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Art Krolick, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gross Adams, Edward Miller, Richard Smyth, William Sweitzer, and Mrs. Lieser.

Germain Germain, manager, Palace, a Dipson house in Jamestown, is back on the job after taking three months to recuperate from injuries suffered in an auto accident. Gary was in recently to attend the MGM Workshop and the Dave Miller testimonial dinner. . . . Congrats to Edmund C. DeBerry, manager, Paramount exchange, which won the Paramount "A Salute to the Future" sales contest held in conjunction with the celebration of the company's 40th anniversary.

Crystal Beach opened for its 57th season on May 28 and Earl Hubbard, who has been handling publicity and advertising for Cinerama at the Teck, is also doing the same for the beach. His son is working on special parties for Cinerama, and is really lining up a pretentious schedule of special sell-out performances.

Stanley Weber, former Buffalo exhibitor, is back for the summer with Mrs. Weber.

Theatre Inspection Demands Bring Exhibitor Protests

PHILADELPHIA — It was reported last week that Walter S. Pytko, City of Philadelphia Department of Licenses and Fire Housing Inspection, is causing all sorts of annoyances by the rigidity of theatre inspections with the theatre men feeling they are being harassed.

Theatres are said to have been ordered to take seats out that have been approved for up to 25 years. Fire doors that are never used on stages because the stages are no longer used are being ordered equipped with self-closers.

Suddenly, theatremen are being put to extra expense, despite the fact that boxoffice receipts have been dwindling. With the present day use of non-inflammable film, some of the demands are said to be entirely out of line. Smoke detection devices are being required for air conditioning plants that haven't had them since their installation.

According to the law, all such mandatory rules are subject to review by a board. Theatreman view is that, while every conscientious exhibitor wishes to maintain his theatre in a fool proof, fire proof manner for his patrons' protection, it has recently seemed apparent that Pytko's inspection crews have been overly zealous, adding extra expenses to theatres that can ill afford the questionable outlay at this particular time.

SW Spring Drive Prizes Awarded

PHILADELPHIA — Showmanship and enthusiasm were the keynotes of a series of two managers' meetings held by Ted Schlanger, zone chief, Stanley Warner Theatres. The first included all out-of-town managers and the Philadelphia first-run theatre managers, then came a repeat for the in-town Philadelphia neighborhod theatre managers.

Schlanger set the keynote when he told his men, "Observe the simple facts of basic showmanship. We must squarely face our problems." The meetings, first since the start of the Stanley Warner Spring Movie Festival on April 1, were to announce the local winners for the first month of the three-month showmanship contest, and to discuss plans for the balance of the drive. Winners were: first prize, $100 Bond, Ben Blumberg, 69th Street; second prize, $50 Bonds, Dave Fishman, Manor; Syd Poppay, Strand, York, Pa.; Lew Black, Warner, Wilmington, Del.; and Helen Bortz, Warner, Reading, Pa.; third prize, $25 Bonds, Chet Woerner, Fairmount; John Purtell, Leader; Bob Kessler, Benn; Jim McHugh, Midway; Domenic Lucente, Broadway; and Tony DeCarlo, Family.

Following his idea of attention to basic showmanship, Schlanger first presented Bob Mills, head of engineering and maintenance, who discussed important factors of physical operation with emphasis on proper handling of air conditioning equipment during the coming summer months. Also speaking was Henry Eberle, sound and projection chief.

The meeting was addressed by Ted Minsky, head buyer, who gave a resume and evaluation of all new product coming up in the next few months. Next, Birk Binnard, new ad chief, discussed basic fundamentals of advertising, which he summarized with four words, communicate, illustrate, motivate, and activate. Activities of managers during the Stanley Warner Spring Movie Festival were brought out and plans were developed for the balance of the drive.

hoping to win are district manager Johnny Turner; branch manager Gene Tunick; office manager Elizabeth McCaffrey Ziegler; salesmen Bill Doyle, Jack Zamsky, John Bergen; and bookers Mickey Marrandino, Janet Lewis, and Irving Buono. All exhibitor friends are urged to lend their support as this UA crew are certainly deserving of support.

Caught by the camera's lens last week at the peak of the general alarm fire at the Hipp Building, Allentown, Pa., was the above shot. The $100,000 blaze severely damaged the Midway, Joseph B. Rossheim theatre.

Eddie Gabriel, Capital, mighty enthused over "The Green Scarf" being in its 12th week at the Green Hill.

"Desperate Women," produced in Hollywood by Louis Newman Productions, opened to turn away business last fortnight at the Starlite Drive-In, Gloucester, N. J., according to Dave Rosen, area distributor. Filmed in black and white and with no wide-screen features, the picture nevertheless broke all mid-week opening day records at the drive-in, according to Max Chapman, owner.

luncheon was attended by local Stanley Warner executives and branch and district managers of the local film exchanges. Also from the Stanley Warner New York home office were Nat Feldman, head film buyer, and Danny Triester and Frank Marshall, home office buying department. Ted Minsky acted as toastmaster, and presented Bill Mansell, Warners district manager, who expressed the sentiments of the film distributors. Nat Feldman, who first eulogized Ted Schlanger for his wonderful quality of leadership, and congratulated Kaplowitz on his promotion, told the group of the high esteem in which Kaplowitz is held by the Stanley Warner home office. The final speaker was Stanley Warner zone manager Ted Schlanger, who expressed the farewell sentiments of the Stanley Warner organization to Kaplowitz, and pointed out that this is another example of the policy of moving up from within the company, mentioned the new assignments of Bill Yurasko and Elmer Hirth, and presented a travelling bag to Kaplowitz from all those attending the luncheon.

Allentown

A general alarm fire in the early morning damaged the Hipp Building, which houses the Midway, to the extent of an estimated $100,000. The blaze was discovered shortly after 4:30 a.m. in a room on the third floor of the four story structure, and flames were soon shooting through the roof. The building is owned by the 608 Hamilton Street Corporation, of which Joseph B. Rossheim is president. He and his wife occupy a second floor apartment and it was above this that the fire is believed to have started. Mrs. Rossheim, who has not occupied the apartment for a week because her husband is in Florida, stated that the living quarters were a total loss from the flood of water that cascaded from the upper floors. Damaged in the same manner was the theatre office, equipment and supplies in the projection room, the lobby, and about one third of the rear section of the theatre proper. Sections of plaster and acoustical blocks fell from the theatre ceiling. Adjoining stores also suffered water damage. Hampering firemen in fighting the blaze was a false ceiling built over the theatre some years ago, eight or ten feet under the second floor ceiling. Built before the turn of the century, the building was originally constructed to house The Allentown Evening Item. It was subsequently purchased by George Bonnethum, Reading, who built the auditorium, which from 1912 on was operated as the Hippodrome. In 1922, the theatre was purchased by Wilmer and Vincent interests and leased to Nicas Brothers, who converted it into a restaurant, operating it until 1936, when it was taken over by Rossheim and converted into the Midway. This was the fifth fire to have swept the building.

William D. Hendley, Atlanta, Ga., is now managing the Majestic for Stanley Warner. A veteran of 14 years in the business, he succeeds Lee Snook, who had been acting manager. Hendley has managed theatres in Atlanta, Miami and Tampa, and came here from the management of the Fox and Paramount, Atlanta. This is his first assignment with SW.

Harrisburg

Lemoyne's manager David R. Jones made many friends in his community when he made available the lobby of his theatre as a hospitality center during Lemoyne's Golden Jubilee celebration. The doors were open each afternoon and extra furniture was installed to accommodate the visitors. Radio station WHGB broadcast interviews from the lobby each afternoon during the week.

Petitions are being circulated in Lemoyne and Camp Hill, Pa., for a Sunday movie referendum at the November election.

Reading

Schad Theatres, Inc., was given a permit for electrical work in the Strand Theatre Building, to cost $1,600. . . . The new drive-in west of Sinking Spring Borough, on the Reading-Lebanon highway, is to be finished by July 4, it is expected. Leo Katz, Buffalo, will be proprietor of the drive-in, which will accommodate 1,054 cars. A swimming pool and a dance portico are to be part of the operation. The screen will be 74 feet high, 140 feet wide. . . . Richard Luck, former theatreman here, was the winner of the Republican nomination for the county office of register of wills of Berks, in the May primary election.

J. Lester Stallman, Astor, was the first exhibitor here to show the Marciano-Cockell fight film. A portion was repeated in slow motion. Only a few fans from Reading bought tickets to see the fight-night television pictures shown in an Allentown theatre.

Churches who buy their own motion picture projectors, here and in other cities, for church events, will do well to keep them in locked quarters. A 50-year-old Philadelphia man was arrested on a Reading street, carryinga valuable motion picture projector which he admitted stealing from a large Lutheran Church in Lebanon, Pa. The same man was wanted in Reading for a similar theft of an adding machine from the office of a Reading church. The man was sent to the Berks County jail in lieu of $1,500 bail. Police here say many similar thefts, of motion picture machines from churches, clubs and other private owners, have been reported. As a rule the stolen machines are pawned or resold for a fraction of their value.

Rodney Collier, manager, Stanley, Baltimore, Md., recently received a solid gold watch from Fred McMillan, managing director, Warner, Washington, where Cinerama is playing, for his outstanding job on selling tickets in Baltimore for the Washington engagement of the film. George A. Crouch, general zone manager, SW Theatres, Washington, adds his congratulations to Collier.

Scottish Rite Masons here are moving their offices into the Rajah Theatre building and held their May semi-annual reunion, with more than 2,000 members attending, in the Rajah. This leaves the Plaza, where the Scottish Rite sessions were held for many years, with one less regular renter.

Green Hills Lake summer theatre, Mike Kesdekian, director, has started an advance sale drive of season tickets, $18 for 10 shows. Regular single tickets range in price from $1 to $2.20.

For the first time in Reading's theatrical history, a women has been named the regular manager of a major Penn Street theatre. She is Helen Bortz, recently acting manager, Warner, and for the past two and one-half years assistant manager of the house, under Birk Binnard. Miss Bortz, daughter of

These Navy wives representing clubs at the U. S. Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent River, Md., were recent guests of the Park, Lexington Park, Md., at a screening of Republic's "The Eternal Sea."

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Bortz, this city, is no newcomer to the theatre business. She started 12 years ago at the Broadway, a Wilbur and Kincey chain house in Charlotte, N. C., getting a thorough training there, after starting as a cashier. Four years ago she came back to her home town, as a cashier at the Warner. After 18 months in that job, she undertook a course of training under Binnard for the post of assistant manager and made good. Her promotion to the managership came in considerably less time than is customary in major theatre circuits.

City amusements tax receipts in April took another nose dive, City Treasurer John L. Hoch's monthly report showed. The total, including collections at Bingo and sports events, was $10,673, as against $11,092 in March, $12,136 in February and $10,683 in January. Widespread unemployment here is blamed for the recent slump in this tax collection item. On the other hand, real estate tax collections in 1955 to date are almost exactly the same as 1954's same period.

Mike Keskedian, director, Green Hills summer stock theatre, Green Hills Lake, last summer, has announced that he will again operate a company there this season, starting a 10 or 12-week season on June 17. George Snell, formerly operating the theatre, and later connected with a Reading broadcasting station, has gone to a new position in a Lexington, Ky., broadcasting station.

"Jalopy Night" was sponsored at the Warner, showing a double horror combination of "Dracula" and "Frankenstein," by the Nick Ciliberti Motors, a Kutztown, Pa., dealers' firm. A good used car was the grand prize. The winner was not required to be present in person.

Exeter Township, east of Reading, in which are located the Mt. Penn Drive-In and a medium-sized high school sports stadium, has levied a 10 per cent amusements tax for the school year starting July 1. Estimated revenue from the tax, as named in the budget, is $12,000.

Muhlenberg Township, in which are located the Reading Fair Grounds, a commercial swimming pool, and the Laurel, the latter in Laureldale Borough, but part of the Muhlenberg school district, has again levied its 10 per cent amusements ticket tax for the new school year starting July 1. The estimated income, from the amusements ticket taxes, is $33,000, and may exceed that amount.

BUENA VISTA

Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier

OUTDOOR DRAMA 95M.

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Headed for higher returns.

CAST: Fess Parker, Buddy Ebsen, Basil Ruysdael, Hans Conreid, William Bakewell, Kenneth Tobey, Pat Hogan, Helene Stanley, Nick Cravat, Don Megowan, Mike Mazurki, Jeff Thompson, Henry Joyner, Benjamin Hornbuckle, Hal Youngblood. Produced by Bill Walsh; directed by Norman Foster.

STORY: In 1813 hostility between the Indians and the white settlers in the south erupts into warfare, and General Basil Ruysdael (Andrew Jackson) and his troops try to quell the Indians. Among the volunteers is Fess Parker (Davy Crockett), who with his friend and fellow scout, Buddy Ebsen, assists the soldiers in finding and fighting the Indians led by chief Pat Hogan. The latter and many of his chiefs escape, and a lengthy hit-and-run battle follows. Parker and Ebsen track him down, but Ebsen is captured. As he is about to be tortured and killed, Parker challenges Hogan to a hand-to-hand battle and wins. Instead of taking the Indian's life, he offers friendship and a chance to make an honorable peace. They go home, but the wanderlust hits Parker and he and Ebsen file for land further west in territory dominated by local bully Mike Mazurki. Parker takes on the title of magistrate, beating Mazurki in a fight. He receives word that his wife, Helene Stanley, has died. He is drafted into politics. Ruysdael, aiming for the presidency, endorses Parker for Congressman and they both win. Parker is lured away on a cross-country tour whereupon opponents try to push through a bill to deprive Indians of certain rights. He rushes back in time to defeat it. Through with Washington, he and Ebsen join the fight Texas is waging for her freedom from Mexico. They are joined at the Alamo by gambler Hans Conreid and Indian Nick Cravat. As all are killed around him when a charge overwhelms the small force, Parker is last seen fighting off a horde of enemy soldiers.

X-RAY: Despite the fact that the various episodes have been seen on television not once but twice, this should do highly attractive business not only with the youngsters, but with much of the adult population in many situations. Davy Crockett has captured American imaginations as have few heroes in such a short period of time, and this is evidenced by the tremendous sales of records and other associated items. The story is an interesting one that moves at a good pace. Parker and Ebsen make a fine team. Were it not for the furor and hullabaloo surrounding the Davy Crockett character, this might be an ordinary frontiersman vs. Indian action entry, but in view of the public reaction, much weightier consideration must be given and exhibitors would be wise to use all promotional aspects. There are immense possibilities for extra revenue in lobby and stand sales of related items. Two songs, "The Ballad Of Davy Crockett" and "Farewell," are heard. The screen play is by Tom Blackburn.

AD LINES: "Rough . . . Tough . . . Battlin' . . . Fightin' . . . Shootin'. He's 'Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier'"; "He Would Fight A Fierce Bear, A Savage Indian Or A Murderous Crook At The Drop Of A Hat"; "One Of The Greatest Fighters The Wild West Has Ever Seen."

Love Me Or Leave Me (527)

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA WITH MUSIC 122M.

(CinemaScope)
(Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: High rating musical should hit the better money.

STORY: Doris Day as Ruth Etting refuses to let a customer get fresh in a dime-a-dance hall and is fired. James Cagney, small-time Chicago racketeer of the 1920's, offers to introduce her around. She knows his motives but agrees to permit him to get her a job. She is hired as a dancer but her real desire is to sing, and Cagney hires pianist Cameron Mitchell to coach her and make special arrangements. She goes far and Mitchell finds he is falling for her but is unable to break the hold Cagney has on her. Her debut is impressive and her climb up the ladder is assured, at which point Cagney is impressed and really becomes an active manager. His dictatorial attitude and manner cause nothing but dislike. With Robert Keith to help, she goes into the Ziegfeld Follies. Mitchell refuses to string along. She is a hit, but Cagney incensed at being thrown out of the theatre when he tries to horn in backstage, breaks her contract and gets her out. Day can no longer fight Cagney when he insists on her becoming his wife. She gets bigger although the old enthusiasm is no longer there. She is signed to make a film and is reunited in Hollywood with Mitchell. They try to minimize their feelings, but Cagney knows. He tries to open a lavish night club and when Day asks for a divorce in the midst of everything else, he shoots Cameron. He is bailed out of jail in time to see Day open his club on debut night in return for his past favors, but he is also convinced that she will never return to him.

X-RAY: Drama, situations and scenes that touch the heart, high quality performances, fine direction and production, a story that holds interest on high throughout with its off-beat characters and plot, and lots of tunes that are still popular today or that have a familiar ring, along with pretty gals, colorful settings, etc., are to be found in this highly entertaining entry. It should garner better reaction from adult audiences and must be sold so that the impression is created that this is not just another musical. It has infinitely more to offer. Doris Day is lovely to look at and can really sell a song as well as a dramatic situation, while James Cagney comes through with a performance that will be considered when awards are handed out. The screen play is by Daniel Fuchs and Isobel Lennart, based on a story by Fuchs. Music includes "I'll Never Stop Loving You," "Never Look Back," "Stay On The Right Side Of The Road," "You Made Me Love You," "Everybody Loves My Baby," "Mean To Me," "Sam, The Old Accordion Man," "Love Me Or Leave Me," "At Sundown," "Shaking The Blues Away," "It All Depends On You," "Ten Cents A Dance."

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "She Had A Way With A Song Or With A Man"; "The Story Of Ruth Etting . . . Lots Of Drama, Heart-touching Emotion, Beautiful Gals, Tuneful Songs"; "An Entertainment Gem In Color And In CinemaScope Guaranteed To Please."

PARAMOUNT

The Far Horizons (5412)

MELODRAMA 108M.

(VistaVision)
(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Interesting programmer.

CAST: Fred MacMurray, Charlton Heston, Donna Reed, Barbara Hale, William Demarest, Alan Reed, Eduardo Noriega, Larry Pennell. Produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas; directed by Rudolph Mate.

STORY: In 1804, Fred MacMurray, secretary to President Thomas Jefferson, is assigned to explore and map the newly-purchased Louisiana Territory and to reach the Pacific Coast if possible. MacMurray picks Charlton Heston to share command with him. MacMurray is in love with Barbara Hale, but she falls for Heston. The friendship between the two men is unaffected, however. They come across an Indian chief who proves hostile. When he orders an attack, captive Indian maiden Donna Reed reaches them in time to save them from ambush. She guides them to the land of her people and also falls in love with Heston. The latter eventually finds himself torn between his feelings for Reed and Hale. They are welcomed by her brother, chief Eduardo Noriega, who arranges for their safe conduct, only to have his plans altered by jealous Larry Pennell, to whom Reed was promised before her capture. An ambush takes some men, and Pennell is killed, with the expedition pushing on. MacMurray cannot stand the relationship that develops between Heston and Reed, knowing that Hale is waiting at home, and he orders her home. They refuse separation and MacMurray promises to prefer charges upon their return. After further hardships, they finally reach the Pacific and all the territory is claimed for the U. S. In Washington, they are honored for their services and Reed sees that she would be out of place in the white man's world. MacMurray forgets the charges and Heston weds Hale.

X-RAY: Based on the historical Lewis and Clark expedition, this entry shapes up as an attractive film for the program with lots of action and excitement. The release should prove a draw to youngsters who come across this portion of history in their classrooms. The pace is good and interest is held on high pretty much throughout. Performances by the cast are okeh and the direction and production are good. The screen play is by Winston Miller and Edmund H. North, based on the novel "Sacajawea of the Shoshones," by Della Gould Emmons.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "History In The Making Brings A New Excitement To The Screen In VistaVision And In Technicolor"; "An Exciting Tale Of Adventure In Early America"; "An Indian Maiden Was Responsible For The Success Of The Lewis And Clark Expedition—Don't Miss Her Exciting Story Of Love And Adventure."

20TH-FOX

The Adventures Of Sadie (508)

COMEDY 88M.

(English-made) (Eastman color)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory comedy for the art spots.

CAST: Joan Collins, George Cole, Kenneth More, Robertson Hare, Hermione Gingold, Walter Fitzgerald, Hattie Jacques, Felix Felton, Lionel Felton, Anthony Tancred, Michael Meacham. Produced by George Minter; directed by Noel Langley.

STORY: Aboard a passenger steamer somewhere in the Pacific are Joan Collins, cynical George Cole, who hates the sight of Collins, professor Robertson Hare, and Irish stoker Kenneth More. The ship is rammed by a freighter, and Collins, Cole, Hare, and More find themselves alone in a lifeboat and soon land on a deserted island. Hare suggests that the three men agree to be perfect gentlemen where Collins is concerned. As time passes, both Cole and Hare attempt to romance Collins. They meet with little success and occupy most of their time by jealously quibbing with each other. More sits around enjoying the feuding and keeps his distance with Collins. A year passes, and the group is finally rescued by a schooner. Collins now insists that she marry More, but he refuses. A sudden crash takes place, this being followed by scenes showing Cole in a lifeboat with a Chinese cook, Hare trapped on an island by an elderly spinster, and Collins finding More strumming a guitar in a hut on the island.

X-RAY: This British entry takes the form of a well-made and highly amusing farce that will best serve in art and specialty spots. Its desert island theme, in adition to being a laugh inducer, can be used for maximum exploitation. Individual character portrayals are well handled, as is direction and production. Color photography adds. Adapted for the screen by Noel Langley.

TIP ON BIDDING: Depends on situation.

AD LINES: "Three Men And A Girl Alone On A Desert Island . . . Need We Say More"; "You've Never Seen A Gal Like Sadie"; "Sadie Was Cold And Aloof . . . But A Desert Island And Three Men Changed That."

That Lady (504)

MELODRAMA 100M.

(Filmed in Spain) (CinemaScope)
(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Costume meller will need plenty of push.

CAST: Olivia de Haviland, Gilbert Roland, Paul Scofield, Francoise Rosay, Dennis Price, Anthony Dawson, Robert Harris, Peter Illing, Pepe Nieto, Christopher Lee, Andy Shine, Angel Peralta. Produced by Sy Bartlett; directed by Terence Young.

STORY: In 1570, King of Spain Paul Scofield pays a visit to the country palace where princess Olivia de Haviland is staying with her seven-year-old son, Andy Shine, still in mourning for her husband, who died three years before. It is evident that Scofield and de Haviland are friends from childhood, and he asks her to come to Madrid to help minister Gilbert Roland overcome objections of the royalty to accepting him, a commoner. She agrees reluctantly. She encounters Roland first at a bullfight, where he saves the life of her cousin, Anthony Dawson. Roland spies Pepe Nieto leaving her palace and warns her that he is disloyal to Scofield and supports his exiled princely brother. Politics give way to romance. Scofield signs Nieto's death warrant, but Roland pleads for postponement. He and Nieto have a fight and, later, Nieto is killed by mysterious assassins with Roland being blamed. The latter demands a trial intending to use the warrant to force a decision in his favor, but torture of a faithful servant brings about its recovery by Scofield. De Haviland intercedes with Scofield but he, jealous over her love for Roland, has her confined in protective custody, which causes her to become very ill. The Cardinal informs Scofield another has confessed the crime, and he releases de Haviland. He is about to release Roland, but others help him escape, which infuriates Scofield. Scofield overhears minister Dennis Price confess the killing and has him imprisoned: Roland sees de Haviland and agrees to take Shine with him to safety, not knowing she is dying.

X-RAY: Attractive and impressive settings, colorful costumes, and a sense of authenticity are in the film's favor. However, on the other side of the ledger is a slow-moving, over-long story that depends on conversation to get across its points. The cast is good, but a quickening of pace would have benefited the entry as a whole. The screen play is by Anthony Veiller and Sy Bartlett, based on the novel by Kate O'Brien.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "She Had A Reputation For The Unusual . . . In Romance . . . In Her Relations With The King Of Spain And His Officials"; "A Drama Of Intrigue And Romance Filmed In Glamorous Spain In Color And In CinemaScope"; "Adventure And Romance Walked In The Night With 'That Lady'."

The Magnificent Matador (513)

DRAMA 94M.

(CinemaScope) (Eastman color)
(Filmed in Mexico)

ESTIMATE: Entry has angles.

STORY: Famous bullfighter Anthony Quinn faces his next fight with trepidation since it marks the debut of his protege, 18-year-old Manuel Rojas, who he feels is too young. At the last minute he runs away and is followed by American Maureen O'Hara, who has been attracted to him since she first saw him in the bull ring a few years back. She offers him refuge in her country home, promising him peace and quiet. Jealous suitor Richard Denning makes a scene and informs reporters and Rojas of Quinn's whereabouts, but they take off before they can be trapped. At the ranch of Thomas Gomez, they realize they are in love, and he informs O'Hara that the reason he refused to enter the ring with Rojas was that he is his son born out of wedlock, which resulted in the death of his mother. O'Hara persuades him to reveal his identity to Rojas, and he learns that the boy knew it all along. Realizing it is futile to keep him from the bull ring since it is in his blood, they go into the arena and put on a show of exceptional daring. It is apparent that Quinn will soon retire to be with O'Hara and that Rojas will take over the family mantle.

X-RAY: There are some good bull fight sequences to be found here, impressive surroundings and settings not seen too often, romance, a fairly interesting story, and good performances, along with efficient direction and production. With a little extra selling, this should do okeh as part of the program. A song, "Magnificent Matador," is heard. The screen play is by Charles Lang based on a story by Budd Boetticher.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "I Killed His Mother . . . I Can't Kill My Son"; "It Was Kill Or Be Killed . . . His Decision Was A Hard One To Make"; "She Gave Her Love Without Any Strings Attached."

Soldier Of Fortune (514)

MELODRAMA 96M.

(CinemaScope) (Color by DeLuxe)
(Partially filmed in Hong Kong)

ESTIMATE: Adventure yarn has high potential.

CAST: Clark Gable, Susan Hayward, Michael Rennie, Gene Barry, Alex D'Arcy, Tom Tully, Anna Sten, Russell Collins, Leo Gordon, Richard Loo, Mel Welles, Soo Young. Produced by Buddy Adler; directed by Edward Dmytryk.

STORY: Susan Hayward, wife of photographer-correspondent Gene Barry, arrives in Hong Kong to find out what has happened to her husband, who disappeared on the Chinese mainland. She asks police inspector Michael Rennie for a lead, and he suggests that perhaps Clark Gable might be able to help her since his contacts are many and varied, and he often deals outside the law. She meets him and they are attracted to each other, but she refuses to grant him any favors to enlist his aid and leaves. She tries on her own but gets nowhere and returns to Gable, who agrees to help her with no strings attached. They get better acquainted and he states that he wants Barry out of China so that he might stand a chance with her. She gets a lead to Mel Welles, who saw Barry last and she goes to Macao to talk to him. He takes her money and keeps her a prisoner. Word gets back to Gable that Barry is alive and in a Commie jail and that Hayward went to see Welles. He readies his boat as Rennie decides to inspect it. Rennie is made a prisoner as it sails off. At Macao, he rescues Hayward, and they set off for the mainland after he sends her back to Hong Kong. Rennie helps and they rescue Barry under cover of darkness and fog. A patrol boat pursues and Gable holds them off with a hidden gun until they reach safety. Hayward and Barry prepare to leave although the latter senses her feelings for Gable. At last minute she returns to Gable after Barry confesses that marriage is not for him and that he'll be off again shortly seeking other actions and events. Gable and Hayward plan to leave for the states eventually and a life together.

X-RAY: Smacking of adventure, intrigue, and villains in up-to-date dress, this entry should satisfy most seekers of melodramatic and exciting film fare. Clark Gable is fine in the lead, as is Hayward, while the balance of the cast backs them well. It moves at a good pace, and though the ending is a shade too pat, it is still satisfying. The authenticity of scenes filmed in and around Hong Kong in CinemaScope adds considerably to the film's value. Direction and production are in the better category. The screen play is by Ernest K. Gann, who also wrote the novel.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates:

AD LINES: "High Adventure In Mysterious Hong Kong"; "He Risked His Life So That He Could Stand A Chance With Another Man's Wife"; "Thrills . . . Adventure . . . Action . . . Follow The 'Soldier Of Fortune' And His Lady In Far Away Hong Kong."

UNITED ARTISTS

The Sea Shall Not Have Them

MELODRAMA 91M.

(Angel)
(English-made)

ESTIMATE: Fair entry for the art and specialty spots.

CAST: Michael Redgrave, Dirk Bogarde, Anthony Steel, Nigel Patrick, Bonar Colleano, Jack Watling, James Kenney, Sydney Tafler, Ian Whittaker, George Rose, Victor Maddern, Michael Ripper, Glyn Houston, Jack Taylor, Michael Balfour, Paul Carpenter, Eddie Byrne, Anton Diffring, Griffeth Jones, Guy Middleton, Jack Lambert. Produced by Daniel M. Angel; directed by Lewis Gilbert.

STORY: In 1944, a British plane carrying Michael Redgrave and his briefcase filled with vital secret documents, is shot down in the North Sea. Redgrave and the crew, which consists of Dirk Bogarde, Jack Watling, and Bonar Colleano, climb into a rubber raft. When British intelligence learns of the downed plane, an air-sea rescue launch, commanded by Anthony Steel, sets out from the British coast in search of survivors. The raft drifts with the wind and a storm takes shape. The men are plagued by weariness, cold, and injuries, but no help seems in sight since the raft's exact location is not known. The launch commanded by Steel is joined by another one, and a seaplane also aids in the search. As the storm increases, conditions aboard the raft worsen. The four weakened men find themselves drifting into a mine-field near enemy held territory. The rescue launch commanded by Steel breaks down. After repairs are made, the launch continues its search and finally locates the raft. Enemy coastal batteries begin to fire, but the rescue is made and the launch speeds homeward.

X-RAY: This British action meller contains elements of suspense and interest, but it is uneven in makeup and sometimes slow moving. Performances are good, as is direction. Screen play is by Lewis Gilbert and Vernon Harris, from the novel by John Harris. It probably is best suited for art and specialty spots or the lower half in some situations.

AD LINES: "They Fought The Sea For Human Lives"; "The True Story Of A Daring Band Of Men Who Snatched Fliers From The Jaws Of Death"; "Their Reward Was Not Glory, But The Gratitude Of The Men They Saved."

U-International

Ain't Misbehavin' (529)

COMEDY WITH MUSIC 81½M.

(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Fair programmer.

CAST: Rory Calhoun, Piper Laurie, Jack Carson, Mamie Van Doren, Reginald Gardiner, Barbara Britton, Dani Crayne, Harris Brown. Produced by Samuel Marx; directed by Edward Buzzell.

STORY: Wealthy young executive Rory Calhoun is impressed with Piper Laurie during a TV demonstration, and they become better acquainted when he meets her at the night club where she dances. His public relations expert, Jack Carson, tries to dissuade him, figuring she is another gold digger, but they fall in love and marry. His high place in society and friends convince her that she is out of place, and she is determined to learn what is expected of a girl in her position. With friend Reginald Gardiner coaching her, she falls into the stuffed shirt pattern, and Calhoun is left to seek fun by himself. They arrange to part and she surprises Carson and everyone else by refusing any of his money. Carson realizes that they are in love and he fixes things so that they are reunited, with Laurie realizing she needn't change to hold Calhoun. They decide to try again.

X-RAY: This should round out the program in okeh fashion with a familiar yarn, average performances, and okeh direction and production. There are several cute musical numbers to liven things up as well as some attractive girls in the background. Music heard includes "Ain't Misbehavin'," "A Little Love Can Go A Long Way," "The Dixie Mambo," "I Love That Rickey Tickey Tickey." Edward Buzzell, Philip Rapp, and Devery Freeman are responsible for the screen play, based on the story "Third Girl From The Right" by Robert Carson. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "She Had A Way With Men And Music"; "Fun For All Along With Cute Gals And Lively Music"; "Start The Day Off Right With A Fast-Moving Comedy Of A Guy And A Gal In Love."

WARNERS

Mister Roberts (418)

COMEDY 123M.

(CinemaScope) (WarnerColor)

ESTIMATE: High rating.

CAST: Henry Fonda, James Cagney, William Powell, Jack Lemmon, Betsy Palmer, Ward Bond, Phil Carey. Produced by Leland Hayward. Directed by John Ford and Mervyn LeRoy.

STORY: During the second World War, most ships of the U. S. Navy have fighting the enemy on their agenda, but not the cargo vessel commanded by James Cagney which ventures from one supply port to another rearranging cargo. Everybody on board hates Cagney. They also hate a beaten up palm tree, his pride and joy, given him by the admiral. Foremost among the haters is Henry Fonda, second officer, who wants a transfer into the fighting, repeatedly turned down by Cagney because of his efficiency and ability to run the ship. Doctor William Powell, ensign Jack Lemmon, and chief Ward Bond share his feelings. Things are enlivened in port when Lemmon interests a group of nurses to visit aboard ship, but the visit is brief and non-satisfying. At the next port, the crew is still denied shore leave by Cagney, and when Fonda objects, Cagney agrees to a deal allowing them ashore if Fonda will stop putting in for transfer and if he shows him the proper respect. Fonda agrees for the sake of the men and they have a rip-roaring time almost taking the place apart. At sea, they learn the war in Europe is over and Fonda celebrates by throwing Cagney's plant overboard. Life becomes miserable again. The crew learn of Fonda's deal, and in thanks, forge Cagney's approval on transfer papers. Lemmon is moved up to take his place as cargo officer, and the existence is routine until a letter is received from Fonda, who tells them it takes real courage to serve as they are serving. In the same mail comes notice of the death of Fonda in action. Lemmon, enraged, throws the new palm overboard and thunders into Cagney to confess at the top of his lungs, and Cagney realizes he has another Fonda-type on his hands all over again.

X-RAY: It's hard to see how this film unreels at such a high level from start to finish without letdown. The entry is without a doubt one of the funniest seen in many years and one of the best as well. Audiences will be entertained thoroughly by the filmization of the hit Broadway play, and word of mouth will spread its acclaim far and wide, resulting in higher returns at boxoffices everywhere. It's difficult to determine what to praise first, whether it be the outstanding direction and fine production, or the excellent characterizations by the entire cast, or the high calibre performances turned in by the top four stars, Fonda, Cagney, Powell, and Lemmon, or the rapid-fire, entertaining pace that insures fun and laughter from start to finish. A sneak preview audience had a wonderful time. The screen play is by Frank Nugent and Joshua Logan, based on the play by Thomas Heggen and Logan, based on the novel by Heggen. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Highest rates.

AD LINES: "Over Two Hours Of Solid Fun And You'll Be Begging For More"; "Everybody Agrees That This Is One Of The Funniest Films In Years"; "A Stage Hit Is Made Into An Even Bigger And Better Film Hit. This One Must Be Seen By Everyone."

MYSTERY COMEDY
78M.

(Fine Arts)

ESTIMATE: Entertaining entry for the art spots.

CAST: Stanley Holloway, Leslie Dwyer, Reginal Tade, Meredith Edwards, Wilfrid Hyde White, Joy Shelton, Natasha Parry, Raymond Young, Leslie Perrins, Sebastian Cabot, Campbell Copelin. Produced by Theo Lageard; directed by Gordon Parry.

STORY: London tramp Stanley Holloway opens a car door and finds an apparently lifeless driver. Holloway rushes to get help and returns to find the car gone. He discovers a wallet containing 200 Pounds which he hides in a cafe. Holloway takes the money to the police, with a concocted story, hoping that it would not be claimed and thus be his property. Following up a clue he finds in the wallet, Holloway meets the wife of man he saw in the automobile. The newspapers have reported as missing the owner of a night club. The tramp goes to the club and meets the club owner's daughter, Natasha Parry, and Raymond Young, club manager. The police arrive and take Holloway to the morgue where he identifies the body of Harris. An attack is made on the tramp by someone searching for the wallet. Holloway is hospitalized, and upon his release he is kidnapped by the murderer. The murderer believes that Holloway is in possession of the wallet which contains the murderer's counterfeit money. The police have obtained the wallet, and from it trace the whereabouts of the killer. They arrive at a strategic moment and save Holloway's life.

X-RAY: With Stanley Holloway supplying most of the laughs in his role of a scholarly tramp, this entry contains both amusement and interest. The mystery plot has elements of mild suspense. Best suited for art and specialty audiences, the film is well made and includes good performances and direction. Adapted for the screen by Reeve Taylor and Rita Barisse, from the novel "Monsieur La Souris," by Georges Simenon.

AD LINES: "Just A London Tramp, But What He Knew Could Mean His Life"; "When A London Tramp Is Pursued By A Band Of Killers, Anything Can Happen . . . And Anything Does!"; "For Laughs, Mystery, And Just Plain Enjoyment—This Is A Must."

COMEDY DRAMA MUSICAL

(Continental)
(Italian-made) (English titles)
(Color)

CAST: Vittorio De Sica, Lea Padovani, Delia Scala, Carlo Croccolo, Lily Granado, Alberti Sordi, Lauretta Masiero, Maria Fiore, Nico Pepe, Mario Siletti, Renato Malavasi, Carlo Mazzarella, Giuseppe Porelli. Produced by Carlo Infascelli; directed by Domenico Paolella.

STORY: The film is in five parts, each a complete episode centering around the theme of Italian vaudeville from 1900 to the First World War. The first episode takes place in a music hall of Rome around the turn of the century. Juggler Nico Pepe obtains for his act the goat of country girl Maria Fiore. Fiore manages to get into the act and makes an unexpected hit, her success bringing a number of suitors. Fiore marries a big game hunter. The second episode deals with quick-change-artist Alberto Sordi. In order to be alone with beauty Lauretta Masiero, Sordi must get rid of her admirers. He accomplishes this by luring them away through the use of various impersonations. Carlo Croccolo, a comedian famous for his satires on military life, is the principal character in the third episode. He is drafted into the army and forced to leave his partner-sweetheart Lily Granado. In the army, he is considered a clown, but he proves himself by giving his life in order to get a message through enemy lines. The next episode deals with Vittorio De Sica and partner Lea Padovani. De Sica is declining in popularity and blames it on Padovani. He replaces her with singer Delia Scala. Scala clicks with the public and De Sica continues to flop. He contemplates suicide, but Padovani returns and talks him out of it. The final episode deals with the production of a show that is continually being disrupted by the intervention of a theatrical censor. The film ends with a brief review of types of shows popular in Italy during and after World War Two.

X-RAY: This film has a varied supply of entertaining features. The entry's five independent yet smoothly connected episodes are saturated with good comedy, light drama, and an abundant amount of song, dance, and music. Performances and direction are well handled, while production and settings are ideally geared to the film's music hall theme. Screen play is by Dino Falconi, Oreste Biancoli, Vinicio Marinucci, Michele Gualdieri, D. Paolella.

AD LINES: "Great International Stars Tell The Story Of Italy's Finest Performers"; "The Story Of The Music Halls Of Rome . . . And The Great Performers That Made Them Famous"; "Guaranteed To Entertain And Delight."

(David Gould)
(Egyptian-made) (English titles)

ESTIMATE: Import has selling angles as novelty.

CAST: Hoda Soultan, Farid Chawky, Tahia Carioca, Mahmoud Meligui. Produced by Farid Chawky; directed by Niazi Moustapha.

STORY: Farid Chawky, poor but ambitious fisherman, supplements his income by engaging in opium smuggling. He gets the dope from other countries and smuggles it into Egypt by dumping it into the sea in tin cans and then picking it up at night. Chawky is known as a peaceful man, but when a fellow fisherman tries to molest his girl, Hoda Soultan, he fights it out with him and wins. On one of his night recovery missions, Chawky escapes police arrest by giving the opium tin to Soultan. Chawky must deliver an opium shipment to an unknown gang. He enlists Soultan's aid and avoids police detection. Arriving at the cafe where the dope is to be delivered, Chawky instructs Soultan to make the contact while he sits down and waits. The gangleader becomes suspicious of Chawky and instructs his men to rough him up. A battle ensues, with Chawky emerging the victor. The leader is pleased and convinces Chawky to join the gang. The leader's girl, Tahia Carioca, becomes too attached to Chawky. The jealous gangleader tips off the police that Chawky is carrying dope. He, however, escapes arrest and returns to battle the leader. Again Chawky is victorious and is acknowledged as the new gangleader. Chawky has made Soultan pregnant but he ignores her and decides to marry Carioca. On the wedding day, the former gang leader gathers a new gang and proceeds to break up the wedding. The police arrive and Chawky flees to his fishing boat where he is confronted by Soultan. He attempts to shoot her, but is himself cut down by a police machine-gun.

X-RAY: This Egyptian entry should make interesting and unusual fare for art and specialty houses. Although the picture is primarily a vehicle for action, violence, and intrigue, it has also an exotic flavor, captured through the use of location filming, authentic chants, and suggestive dances, the latter occupying a good portion of the footage.

AD LINES: "A Tale Of Brutality, Intrigue, And Romance"; "A New Kind Of Thrill"; "She Was Willing To Give Her Life For Him . . . Yet She Took His."

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory for burlesque spots.

CAST: Rita Ravell, Misty Ayers, Mitzi Doerre, Deena Prince, Rhea Walker, Lee Barry, Bobby Cruz, Harry Keaton, Snuffy Smith. Produced by Harry Wald; directed by Phil Tucker.

STORY: Two penniless men enter a small Mexican night spot. The stage show consists of various girls doing dance and strip numbers, most of them dressed in Latin outfits and stripping to Latin American music. The men are joined by girls. When the properietor announces that he will sing, the men begin to heckle him in a comedy routine. A girl puts knock-out drops in one of the drinks. The girls order everything in the place. When it comes time to pay the bill, the men argue about who is to pay, each one insisting on paying. Finally, the men give the proprietor hard luck stories as an explanation for why they cannot pay.

X-RAY: This film is adequate for burlesque houses. It liberally displays the talents of the dancing girls, and has a sufficient supply of low comedy which will be familiar to all burlesque patrons.

AD LINES: "Burlesque, As You Like It"; "Loaded With Gals Who Strip Latin Style"; "Just The Thing To Pep You Up."

TWO REEL

Musical

WEBB PIERCE AND HIS WONDERIN' BOYS. U-I—Musical Featurettes. 16m. Sue Thompson and Hank Penny harmonize in "Tater Pie." Next Marion Colby is heard in "If It Weren't For Girls." Sue Thompson continues the songfest with "I'm Not That Kind Of A Girl." Webb Pierce solos in "Slowly" and "I'm Gonna Fall Out Of Love With You," and then joins Red Sovine in "In The Jailhouse Now." Marion Colby and Red Sovine do a duet to the tune of "Are You Mine." FAIR. (1308).

Sports

ROCKY MARCIANO VS. DON COCKELL. UA. 21m. Filmed in San Francisco under the production guidance of Leslie Winik, this championship fight has much to offer in the way of excitement and savagery. Nine rounds are shown, at which time the referee gave the bout to Marciano on a technical knockout. The eighth and ninth rounds are the climactic ones, with Cockell taking his worst beatings. Since this was not on TV, except closed circuits, there may be more interest in it for fight fans. GOOD.

ONE REEL

Color Cartoons

BEDTIME BEDLAM. U-I—Walter Lantz Cartunes. 6m. Woody Woodpecker agrees to baby sit for $50. When he arrives at the home, he discovers the parents gone and that his charge is a baby gorilla. Woody now attempts to put the gorilla to sleep, and after numerous failures he succeeds by dropping a rock on his head. When he discovers that the parents have boarded a plane bound for Africa, Woody shoots it down, wakes up the gorilla, and leaves the premises. GOOD. (1328).

DIXIELAND DROOPY. MGM—Cartoons. 7m. Droopy, musical genius, lives on the city dump, conducts "dixieland" music via phonograph record. He is stopped by many unappreciative neighbors, others, but always manages to save the record, until finally it breaks. He wanders into a flea circus where the fleas play his favorite "dixieland" tune, and walks out with the act. He proves a sensation after leading the owner of the fleas a merry chase, is booked for an appearance at Hollywood Bowl, where he is acclaimed, with no one able to fathom the mystery of the invisible "dixieland band" coming from the dog conductor. EXCELLENT. (W-640).

DOWNHEARTED DUCKLING. MGM—Cartoons. 7m. Jerry meets up with the "ugly duckling," bent upon committing suicide by offering himself to Tom, the cat, to eat. Jerry thwarts this at all turns, tries to convince the duckling that she is not really ugly, pretties her up with beauty preparations, mud packs, etc. This scares Tom silly, with the windup having the duckling meeting a male duck, who says he thinks she is cute. GOOD. (W-639).

EL GAUCHO GOOFY. RKO—Walt Disney Re-Releases. 8m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION as part of "Saludos, Amigos" in December, 1942, it was said: "Goofy, a lazy Texas cowboy, is whisked to the pampas where he learns gaucho customs, habits, how to use Argentine riding equipment, swing a bolas, etc., is also introduced to Argentine dances, meets Caballo, a love-smitten horse, and is finally transported back to Texas, still amazed at what he's seen. GOOD." (54110).

FIELD AND SCREAM. MGM—Cartoons. 7m. Ed decides to go fishing. He tries lakes, streams, and ponds but always runs into competition from other fishermen. He tests different types of unique reels and lures, but only manages to catch a minnow. When Ed goes hunting he tries out different types of guns with no success. His dog is continually outwitted by wild ducks, and Ed winds up being captured by a deer. GOOD. (W-641).

MOUSE FOR SALE. MGM—Cartoons. 7m. Tom captures Jerry, paints him white, and sells him as a white mouse. The money that the cat receives happens to get into the hands of the mistress of the house. She buys back Jerry, thinking him to be a white mouse. Tom tries to betray Jerry's identity by revealing his true color, but everytime Tom manages to wipe off the mouse's coloring, Jerry immediately assumes his former disguise with shoe polish and flour. Finally Tom turns himself into a white cat which delights the mistress. FAIR. (W-642).

PEDRO. RKO—Walt Disney Cartoon Re-Releases. 8m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION as part of "Saludos, Amigos" in December, 1942, it was said: "This is the story of a baby plane at a Chilean flying field, which endeavors to take his father's place on a mail run to Argentine when the latter is indisposed with a cold in his cylinder head. After thrilling experiences with the elements, he finally reaches his frantic parents. GOOD." (54109).

CinemaScope Color Novelty

TEARS OF THE MOON. 20th Century-Fox—CinemaScope Specials. Color. 10m. When a Japanese learned how to artificially stimulate the growth of pearls, he was on the way to untold riches and the world benefitted with more beauty. Seeds are planted in oysters and women divers plant them on the ocean's bottom with the occupation being passed on from generation to generation. On land, too, the oysters grow pearls by artificial insemination in special oyster farms where special equipment is used to produce a pearl over a three-year period. During that time, they are frequently counted, cleaned, and inspected after which they are returned to their watery containers to mature. The end results are polished, graded, strung, and otherwise made ready for a waiting market. EXCELLENT. (7507).

Color Novelty

THIRD AVENUE EL. Ardee. Color. 12m. This is an interesting attempt at experimental photography affording an el's-eye view of New York in rather poor color. The most interesting segments are those of the el hurtling along rails, shown in negative form. FAIR.

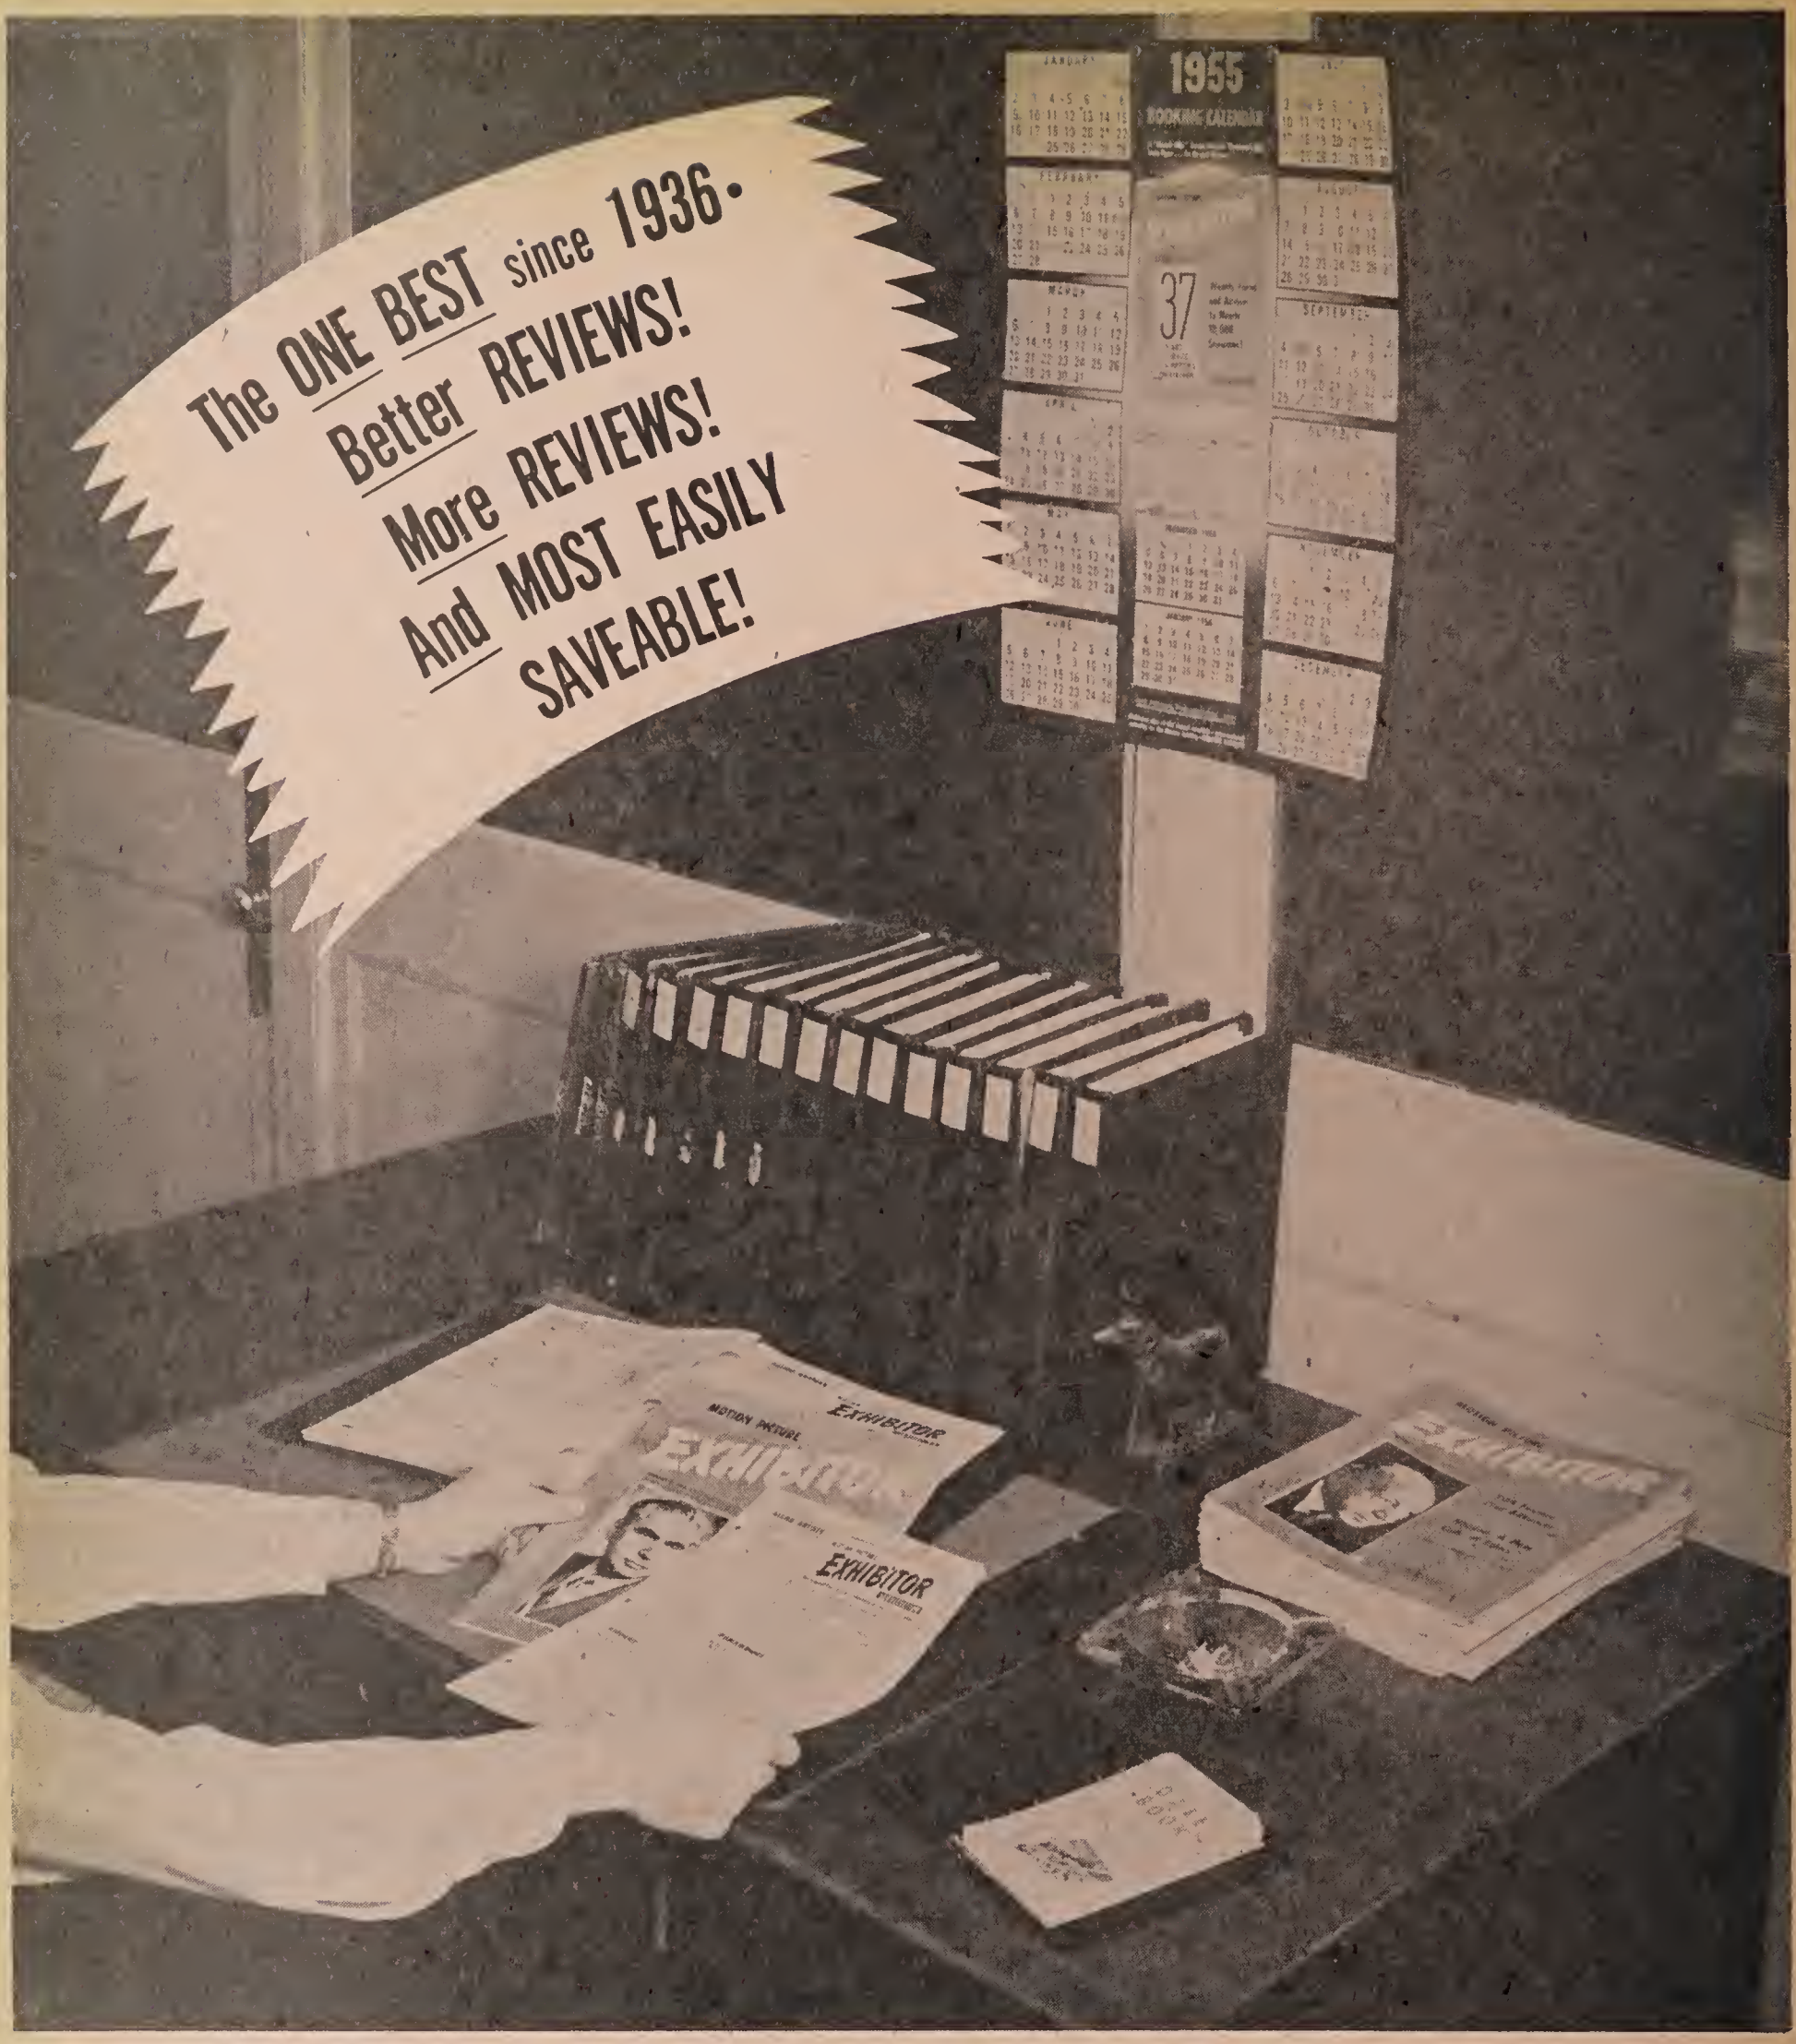
THAILAND. Republic—This World Of Ours. 10m. Seen is Thailand, formerly known as Siam. The Asiatic land contains exotic sights such as ornamental temples, Buddhist statues, and the grand palace. These ancient landmarks can be contrasted with modern avenues and buildings which are seen in Thailand's large cities. The people of the country are shown farming, herding elephants that work in the forests, dancing in native costumes, and engaging in traditional sports. This is in Trucolor. GOOD. (5386).



SAVEABLE REVIEW SERVICES were an innovation by MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR in 1936. Prior to that year many Trade Papers reviewed features and shorts, or at least listed them for reference purposes;—but none followed any uniform style or method that permitted saving in other than a heterogeneous glob in a scissors and paste pot scrapbook.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR changed all this! In 1936 it introduced a separate, saveable section, in which all reviews and indexes relating to any particular year were carefully brought to the executive theatreman for his current and future knowledge. Now imitated or adapted by most other Trade Papers, the basic method has never been improved.

But MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR went further than this! ONLY MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, down through the years, has maintained a 100% Review Coverage of ALL features and of ALL shorts, whether foreign or domestic, that were available to Executive Theatreman consideration. ONLY in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has continued to appear the MOST COMPLETE of all Reviewing Services. The record speaks for itself!

$2.00 per year (52 issues) IN THE U.S.A. AND CANADA

ANOTHER BOX-OFFICE
HOTFOOT!

A hitherto forbidden subject, M-G-M has dared to dramatize the revealing best-seller, "THE COBWEB." It will blast the nation just as "Blackboard Jungle" did.

The secrets of the psychiatrist's couch are bared in the strange mansion on the hill whose occupants are caught in the Cobweb of human emotions.

This is the Strange Mansion on the Hill.

A GREAT SUBJECT FOR PUBLICITY!

A complete condensation of the best-selling novel in Woman's Home Companion, out June 23rd. A natural for publicity. AND WATCH FOR THE DARING, OUTSPOKEN TRAILER, A TICKET-SELLER.

JUNE 8, 1955
VOLUME 54 NUMBER 6

REDUCED TO ABSURDITY

A NEW LOW, either in journalism or in theatre management, was noted recently in a contemporary trade paper.

Purporting to be drawn from a national survey of drive-in confection vending, the writer reached certain conclusions that can only be described as "nutty as a fruit cake!" Certain it is that he is either completely misinformed on drive-in operations, or has fallen for some of the the "tall stories" with which drive-in operators regale one another. In either event, we can't let it remain, without comment, as creditable recorded fact about this industry.

Among five conclusions, some of the "nuttiest" are:

(1) North Carolina, California, and Florida are considered the best for building a new drive-in because (in this survey) they top the nation in confection sales. We just wonder how many experienced drive-in theatremen would let that consideration sway their judgment?

(2) If you aren't satisfied with your drink sales, add hot tamales, chilli, or barbeque sandwiches, because (in this survey) down in the great southwest, where such foods are common, beverage sales are the highest. It is also hotter down that-a-way, so doesn't the writer think that a careful analyst would consider the sweat factor? We don't question that the best place for Coke sales would be the bottom of Death Valley. That is if there were any people there! And, by the way, why not serve dried salt mackerel free?

(3) And here is the gem of gems! To increase refreshment sales while the show is on (in this survey), try booking a dull class "B" picture as one half of your entertainment bill. It seems that "many smart showmen" recommend this policy as a "tonic which has perked up their snack-bar receipts while the picture is being screened." We-e-e-e-l-l-l! For the benefit of the writer, those "smart showmen" aren't "trying"! What really takes effort is not to book two "dull class B pictures as both halves of your entertainment bill. And, when you play those one or two "dull class B pictures," just who is it that "perks up" the confection sales? Mosquitoes?

Try again, old boy!

But this time, try to take your eyes off that 1⅛ cashier which is "the national average" (in this survey), and see what the inside of a drive-in looks like. By the way, which ⅛ of the girl did they use?

HOW ONE CIRCUIT PROTECTS ITSELF

WE ARE TOLD that one of the large, and still important, theatre circuits of the east coast has supplied its film buyers and bookers with large rubber stamps, and has ordered that no film contract is to leave their offices without having this rubber stamped message imprinted across its face:

"Do not confirm booking herein if the picture designated does not have a Johnston Office (MPA) Code Seal or has been classified as a 'C' by the Legion of Decency. In either case we will not play the picture."

While several of the major distributors have protested, and have advised the circuit that they do not recognize this alteration to the film contract, it paid a dividend just recently and saved all concerned from possible embarrassment.

IT'S GETTING so that you can hardly tell when a sneak is really a sneak—preview that is.

Take the other night, for instance. 20th-Fox decided that in order to garner the proper reaction, "The Seven Year Itch" must be shown in a full-fledged theatre, and everybody on the press list was told that there would be no home office showings and that the film must be caught in a theatre, in this case Loew's State.

KONECOFF

This has been done before, of course, by other companies who are anxious to impress the critics with the praise of the public (sometimes there is a reverseroo and then are faces red), but rarely have they gone and advertised and publicized their sneaks to the extent that this was. By the time announcements and news stories had made their rounds, the thing developed into a sort of unofficial world premiere, which is alright with the staff boys at 20th-Fox because they didn't have to climb into their monkey suits. They did alright spacewise, too.

Since the thing was highly successful, it can be assumed that others might be interested in the procedure. For details and plan, we suggest that the esteemed Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation at 20th-Fox, be contacted. He's always dreaming up new attention getters that seem to pay off in one way or another.

MORE ON ABOVE: Incidentally, Marilyn Monroe showed up on the arm of Joe DiMaggio and the way this was done might in itself make an interesting feature sometime. It seems that everyone

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

"Itch" Makes Scratch

NEW YORK—The opening of 20th-Fox's "Seven Year Itch," Loew's State, and the continuing steady business of MGM's "Love Me Or Leave Me," Radio City Music Hall, were the big items among Broadway grosses over the weekend. Business elsewhere was pretty much in the doldrums.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount was down to $31,000 on the seventh, and last week.

"Soldier Of Fortune" (20th-Fox). Roxy claimed $19,122 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the second week dropping to $47,000.

"Love Me Or Leave Me" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, reported $97,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the second session holding well at $150,000.

"The Far Horizons" (Paramount). Criterion held steady with $13,500 anticipated for the third week.

"Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" (Disney-Buena Vista). Globe, after a sensational $41,500 opening week, dropped to $20,000 for the second session.

"Violent Saturday" (20th-Fox). Mayfair was still dropping, with $8,000 claimed for the fourth week.

"The Magnificent Matador" (20th-Fox). Astor was down to $13,000 on the second week.

"Strange Lady In Town" (Warners). Victoria continued to drop with $14,000 expected on the third week.

"The Prodigal" (MGM). Capitol slipped to $17,000 on the fourth week.

"The Seven Year Itch" (20th-Fox). Loew's State announced $44,671 for the first three days, and with a sensational $85,000 in sight for the opening week. The 11th week of "Blackboard Jungle" was under $15,000.

Erlick Named MPE Editor

PHILADELPHIA—Jay Emanuel, publisher, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, and Paul Greenhalgh, general manager, announced last week the appointment of Albert Erlick as editor of the publication.

ERLICK

Erlick, a graduate of Temple University School of Journalism, has had newspaper experience as well as being associate editor of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR under the late Herbert M. Miller for several years. The Extra Profits department of the magazine will continue under Erlick's editorship.

As previously announced, former associate editor George Nonamaker now becomes feature editor. Associate editor Mel Konecoff becomes New York representative and news bureau editor. Arnold Farber, Theatre Catalog and Physical Theatre editor, remains in this post, while Paul Manning continues as west coast representative and editor of Studio Survey.

Doob Leaves Loew's For "Semi-Retirement"

NEW YORK—After serving for 26 years as an executive in the Loew organization, Oscar A. Doob last week confirmed reports that he has tendered his resignation to take effect Sept. 1. Mr. and Mrs. Doob will make their home in Palm Beach, Fla. Doob described his move as an experiment in semi-retirement. "I am taking my typewriter with me," he said. He has plans to do writing and otherwise keep occupied.

DOOB

Doob joined Loew's theatres in October, 1929, as head of the advertising and publicity department. In 1945 he was promoted to special theatre executive with Joseph R. Vogel. Two years ago he switched from the theatre division to MGM advertising department, to handle promotions for special pictures.

Doob began his career as a newspaperman and publicist for Libson theatres in Cincinnati. During World War II, he launched the plan of selling war bonds in movie theatres and was loaned by Loew's to the U. S. Treasury Department as a dollar-a-year man. For a number of years he was publicity head of the industry's March of Dimes drives which raised more than $20,000,000 for the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis. As a member of COMPO's public relations committee, Doob proposed the idea of using industry ads in Editor and Publisher. He was chairman of the executive committee of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association until he joined MGM. He took an active part in the industry's fight against the admissions tax, in the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital campaigns, and in many other industry movements.

USIA Funds Approved

WASHINGTON—The Senate Appropriations Committee approved last fortnight the full $4,484,000 budget request of the U. S. Information Agency for its motion picture program in the fiscal year beginning July 1. For the past year, the USIA film service operated on $3,087,000, and the House had cut the new request to $3,000,000.

It was expected that the bill would be approved by the full Senate last week, in which case the final figure for the coming year would be set by a House-Senate conference. The Senate committee's approval of the full request, however, makes it likely that that the total will be close to, if not the actual figure sought.

For the USIA as a whole, the Senate committee voted $88,350,000; the House approved only $80,500,000 of the $88,500,000 requested. The comparable figure for this year is $77,114,000.

Martin Illness Stymies Sessions With Distributors

NEW YORK—Because of the illness last week of E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, plans recently approved for the joint TOA-National Allied committee, of which Martin is a member, to press for separate talks with the heads of Warners and Paramount, were disrupted. The meetings to discuss alleged distribution abuses were to be held, it had been hoped, within a week after a National Allied board meeting gave its approval on May 25 for its representatives to join the TOA spokesmen. The proposed sessions have been deferred until Martin recovers.

Film Dividends Rise

WASHINGTON—The Department of Commerce announced last week that publicly reported cash dividends paid by film industry firms in April amounted to $2,313,000, representing an increase of more than $1,000,000 over April of last year, when the total stood at $1,241,000. The notable jump was due to an April dividend by Chesapeake Industries, which had not previously reported dividend payments.

Copeland Quits AA

KANSAS CITY—Roy M. Copeland, for the past three years Allied Artists' branch manager here, last week announced his retirement from the film industry.

Following Copeland's announcement, Harold Wirthwein, the company's western division sales manager, disclosed that Frank Thomas has been named as Copeland's successor. Thomas has been a member of the sales staff in Kansas City for five years.

Palsy Fund Names AB-PT Execs

NEW YORK — American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres vice-presidents Edward L. Hyman and Sidney M. Markley were appointed last fortnight to head the theatre collections committee of the United Cerebral Palsy Campaign, it was announced by the Campaigns' chairman, Leonard Goldenson, president, AB-PT. The drive seeks to raise $10 million to aid more than 500,000 cerebral palsy victims throughout the country.

Decision Was Anticipated; Theatres Must Turn Over To City Some $600,000 Plus Additional Breakage

ALBANY—The New York Court of Appeals unanimously upheld the legality and constitutionality of New York City's "five per cent" amusement tax last fortnight, reversing an Appellate Division ruling last February in favor of exhibition's contention that the Enabling Act of 1947 imposed a limit of five per cent, and that the new tax, effective last July 1, exceeded that limit because of the manner in which breakage was collected. The breakage amounted to a high fraction of the tax, which exhibition maintained was actually levied against the theatreman, inasmuch as it increased admission.

The opinion, written by Associate Judge John Van Voorhis, held that the municipal revenue at stake in the handling of breakage was substantial and that the breakage constitutes more than a minimal proportion of the admission tax. The ticket buyer, the justices decided, is not concerned with what fraction of the extra cent he pays is actually part of the tax, and the city is empowered to collect "major fractions."

The decision was an academic one, anticipated by exhibitors because of an amendment to the Enabling Act of 1947 passed in March by the state legislature while the Court of Appeals was considering the case, which validated the collection of major fractions.

New York City exhibitors who applied to the Special Term Court, Queens County, last fall, to become intervenors in the suit against the city brought by RKO-Keith-Orpheum Theatres, Inc., were given permission to hold tax breakage by the posting of bonds. Later, the Supreme Court allowed theatremen to do so without the posting of bonds until final determination of the suit, with the result that $600,000 has now accumulated in a separate "tax breakage" fund, according to a representative of the Tax Collector's Office, as of the end of the third quarter in February. This fund must be turned over to the municipality, together with any additional monies owed for the fourth quarter. The tax office spokesman said that the method of collection will be determined later.

A top exhibitor attorney stated that the circuits and independent owners' lawyers would meet shortly to consider the next step in combatting the tax, which would mean either reargument of the entire case, or appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Republic Shifts Gebstaedt

NEW YORK—Andy Gebstaedt, Republic production manager for the past 11 years, was appointed the film company's advertising manager last fortnight, it was announced by Steve Edwards, director of advertising and publicity.

Paramount Conducts Canadian Meeting

TORONTO—A meeting of the Canadian section of Paramount Pictures, presided over by Gordon Lightstone, Canadian general manager, was held here. The meeting followed a similar session in Hollywood of Paramount executives.

Bookers and managers from across the country attended the sessions, which were also attended by a delegation from the Paramount New York office headed by George Weltner, head of the company's world-wide sales. Also from the New York office were Jerry Pickman, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity; Oscar Morgan, general manager in charge of short subjects and newsreels; and Robert J. Rubin, administrative executive.

Among those attending the sessions were Lightstone, W. J. O'Neill, and Win Barron, home office; Al Iscove, Ted Dowbiggin, Len Herberman, and A. Theurer, Toronto; Bob Murphy, Tom Dowbiggin, R. Goudreau, and Bill Young, Montreal; P. J. Hogan and R. A. Thorne, St. John; Syl Gunn, N. Simpson, and A. Glass, Winnipeg; W. O. Kelly, J. P. Rea, and W. L. Gibson, Calgary; and Bob Lightstone and Mickey Stevenson, Vancouver.

Canadian Comment

To bring him closer to the development of the Chromatic Picture Tube and Telemeter, John J. Fitzgibbons, president and managing director, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, has purchased a home in California. Fitzgibbons has denied that the shift to the west coast from Toronto meant he would be getting into the production end of things at Paramount as rumored earlier. His home will be in Arcadia, near Pasadena, and he will have an office at the Paramount studio. There are no changes planned in the executive structure of the company through the move by Fitzgibbons; rather the move is intended to give Mrs. Fitzgibbons and me a chance to soak up a little more sun." Fitzgibbons indicated he will be in and out of Toronto continually, and when he returns he will help set the scene for a series of intensive meetings early in August.

These lines at two adjoining English theatres attest to the popularity of CinemaScope in the British Isles, since its introduction there in connection with the showing of top 20th Century-Fox films.

The Hamilton, Ontario, newspapers are carrying ads relative to a dispute between the Dydzak Drive-Ins, operating units at London, Chatham, Windsor, and Clappison's Corners, as well as a recently-opened ozoner at Hamilton, and the projectionists' union. The ads in the Hamilton papers concern the operation of the Hamilton, advising the public that the ozoner was non-union. Local 303, IATSE, is picketing the Hamilton Drive-In as non-union and the Dydzak Brothers ad says, "This brings up a nice question!" The proprietor, "himself a projectionist fully licensed under the Ontario Theatre Act," is not eligible to join a union of employes, it claims. There are no employes, union or non-union. The ad heading says, "Has a proprietor the right to operate his own projector?" The Dydzak operation is a family one. Joe and John Dydzak, brothers, originated it, and Joe and John, Jr., are active in it, as well as other members of the family.

CINE CHATTER: Parade to the Imperial, Toronto, for the opening of "Strategic Air Command" tied up traffic on the city's main street. The parade was headed by a 60-piece band from the RCAF, and before moving inside to be guests of manager Russ McKibbin, an inspection was held. . . . Promotion of Ralph Bartlett to the management of Odeon's important Hamilton house, the Capitol, was announced by the company. Bartlett was manager, Odeon Sarnia, where he has been for the last seven years. An old-timer in the business, he began at the Tivoli, Windsor, in 1935. . . . Fotonite was given a test case on Saskatoon City Police Court, a preliminary hearing without a decision being reached.

Gordon Praises British For Arbitration Setup

LONDON—At a press conference last week in the offices of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, Julius Gordon, secretary, Allied States Association, showed great interest in the machinery here of the joint CEA-Cinematograph Renters Society committee to which any exhibitor, with the full force of CEA behind him, can take his grievances about film rentals and trade practices. Gordon felt that such a system is exactly what the American exhibitor is looking for, and said that his visit was to note British exhibition trade problems and the methods employed in solving them. He also sought closer liaison between Allied and CEA.

Gordon blamed the competitive bidding procedure in the United States for higher rentals which, together with the product shortage and the longer playing time demanded now, was slowly strangling the exhibitor. He added that if U. S. distributors persist in refusing to meet with exhibitors on the rental problem that the latter may be forced to resort to federal legislation regulating rentals. In spite of the product shortage at home, however, Gordon was forced to admit to questioners that the British product could not satisfy American audiences by and large.

The Allied executive attended the semi-annual meeting of CEA's London branch, which was followed by a luncheon at which he was a guest. Later in the week, he went to Paris to sit in at the European conference of exhibitors, before taking several weeks vacation prior to his return to the U. S.

EFFG Aims For Fall "Go-Ahead"—Pinanski

NEW YORK—Exhibitors Film Finance Group president Samuel Pinanski said last fortnight, following a board meeting, that hopes are high that by early fall enough stock in the company will have been subscribed to permit the organization, created by Theatre Owners of America to back independent production, to go ahead with "active operations."

When questioned why an initial stockholders' meeting scheduled for May 15 had been postponed, Pinanski said the EFFG was operating on "no time schedule," and expressed his satisfaction with progress to date in advancing the group's objectives. Small exhibitors, he said, have supported the company in substantial numbers, while leading exchange area exhibitors are assuming definite stock subscription quotas which in many regions "are already over the top." EFFG stock is now registered in all states except Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, the executive reported, adding that regional meetings will be held shortly to acquaint all exhibitors with facts and details about the EFFG operation.

Pinanski said also that no divorced circuits have acquired EFFG stock and that none have been approached. He expressed optimism that some way would be found by the Justice Department to permit divorced circuits to invest legally in the stock.

According to the EFFG president, if exhibition is forced to seek government regulation of film rentals it must be ready to accept government regulation of admission prices as well. The only alternative being a discussion between exhibitors and distributors of their difficulties from which, he said, more good would result than from government action. He indicated that a merger of all exhibition forces into one all-powerful organization would compel distribution to be more sympathetic toward the theatre owners plight.

At the board meeting, in addition to Pinanski, were E. D. Martin, Myron N. Blank, Walter Reade, Jr., and Herman M. Levy, TOA general counsel.

RKO Circuit Retires Stock

WASHINGTON—The Securities and Exchange Commission was advised last week that RKO Theatres has retired 583,977 shares of its common stock already held by the company. The report to the SEC stated that RKO reduced its capital from 3,914,913 common shares at $1 par value per share to 3,330,936 shares. The certificate of incorporation does not prohibit the company from reissuing the retired shares under the laws of Delaware, which give them the status of authorized and unissued shares.

"Pop" Has His Day

NEW YORK—At its annual award luncheon last fortnight in the Waldorf Astoria, the National Father's Day Committee named Danny Kaye "Screen Father of the Year." National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis president Basil Connor was named "Father of the Year," Sid Ceaser was honored as "Television Father," and Don Ameche won the "Stage Father" title.

"Cobweb" World Premiere Features Nickelodeon Golden Anniversary

PITTSBURGH—A world premiere of one of MGM's top releases of the coming season will be the feature of the celebration of the Golden Anniversary of the Nickelodeon here.

All the trappings attendant to a Hollywood opening will be on display as "The Cobweb" is presented for the first time on June 15 at the J. P. Harris.

The picture, which stars Richard Widmark, Charles Boyer, Lauren Bacall, Lillian Gish, and Oscar Levant, was the personal choice of John H. Harris, now in Hollywood. Harris felt that "The Cobweb" fitted the occasion best because in addition to being a worthwhile play, it features Miss Gish, whose great screen career has spanned the years from early silent pictures to today's high fidelity sound and natural color productions.

Some of Hollywood's outstanding stars of the current era will come here for the anniversary, and lovable Chester Conklin, comedy star of the early flickering films, has sent word he plans to be on hand.

It was 50 years ago June 19 that the late Senator John P. Harris set up 96 kitchen chairs in a storeroom on Smithfield Street, hung a muslin sheet and opened the doors of the world's first theatre showing motion pictures exclusively. The name Nickelodeon was coined by combining the price of admission with the Greek word for theatre.

The venture was a success from the start and ran shows lasting from 15 to 20 minutes each from eight a.m. to midnight. Seldom was a show presented without standees, and the boxoffice frequently had as many as 7,000 admissions in a day.

Motion picture theatre circuits throughout the country are joining in the Golden Anniversary observance with celebrations which will start around June 13 and continue for the rest of the month. Bob O'Donnell's Interstate Circuit in Texas, the Stanley Warner Theatres, the Walter Reade circuit in New Jersey, the Shea Theatres, the Manos Theatres, and many others from coast to coast have made elaborate plans for this "birthday" of the business. Independent exhibitors in the Pittsburgh districts as well as a number of independents in key cities, also are marking the Jubilee.

In addition to the premiere, the Pittsburgh program will also include special ceremonies at the site of the original Nickelodeon. Mayor David L. Lawrence and his official family; County Commissioners John J. Kane, Harry Fowler and John M. Walker, will join with members of the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania and showmen throughout this area at the dedication of a new marker to be installed by the Historical Society.

At all Harris theatres in the area on June 19, the first 50 patrons will be admitted for five cents each, the Nickelodeon's admission price in 1905. Automobiles and fashions of the 1905 vintage also will have a prominent place in this tribute to the man whose tiny movie house marked the start of the industry.

The theme of the nation-wide celebration will be "Every man his own chairman."

Kansas Attorney General Fights Censorship Repeal

TOPEKA, KANS.—Kansas attorney general Harold R. Fatzer last fortnight filed notice of appeal to the Supreme Court after Judge Dean McElhenny, Shawnee County District Court, ruled that an act passed by the 1955 legislature repealing film censorship is constitutional.

Fatzer sought an injunction to bar secretary of state Paul R. Shanahan from publishing the bill in the statute book, which he is required to do to make it law, after enactment by the legislature and the signature of Governor Fred Hall. Fatzer contended the bill was unconstitutional on the grounds that it contains two subjects, the legislature having hung the movie censorship repeal as a rider on a bill repealing an obsolete traffic law. McElhenny denied the injunction, ruling that Shanahan had a statutory duty to perform in publishing the law.

The attorney general said he will ask the Supreme Court for an early hearing, possibly in June, on the constitutionality of the act, which would abolish the 38-year-old State Board of Review on June 30.

Mayer Sees Little Film Progress Abroad

NEW YORK—Returning last fortnight from two months in Europe and the near east, veteran exhibitor Arthur Mayer, former executive vice-president, Council of Motion Picture Organizations, author, and distributor of foreign films, was "more enthusiastic than ever" about American production accomplishments and potentials, having found little progress in foreign film production which, he said, cannot equal anything that can be done here.

Mayer reported that good foreign productions are increasingly difficult to acquire, while the number of persons looking for them increases. Although he did not acquire any films while abroad, he said that he had left bids for several he believes have possibilities on the American market. Mayer expressed doubt about the success of European high-budget, multi-star ventures, in imitation of Hollywood production standards, replacing notable "art" pictures, supremacy in which can no longer be claimed by the English, French, and Italian film makers who once turned out distinctive and experimetal product for the American market. The decline in European quality production has boosted the product of other nations such as Israel, he said, where he was very impressed by the enthusiasm of the people about motion pictures.

His contacts with the European industry, Mayer added, never fail to impress him with the extraordinary amity existing between exhibition and distribution, contrasted with the almost endless controversy which is characterstic of relations between the two branches in the United States.

Kim Novak...

On her way up

Hollywood has a sultry new glamour girl to exploit

Kim Novak, a dreamy 22-year-old green-eyed blonde of Czech descent, has been rhapsodically called the face that launched a thousand yips. With well-justified joy Columbia Pictures has decided Kim has the magic for movie stardom and the big push is on. Kim herself is taking it easy. The daughter of a Chicago railroad freight dispatcher, she has always lived modestly. She paid her way in high school and junior college by running elevators, working in a dime store, modeling. After college she traveled as a model to glamorize freezers. Her movie career began as a clothes model in Jane Russell's The French Line. Since then, under a Columbia contract, she has played units leads in Pushover, Phffft and Five Against the House. Kim earns $350 a week [illegible]

Kim Novak in Unusual '5 Against House' Stunt

In an unusual one-day promotion for her latest Columbia film, Kim Novak bet "5 Against the House" Friday (6) in the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas gambling casino, for each of more than 100 leading columnists, motion picture editors and television personalities from coast to coast.

Invitations were sent to newsmen and television people, asking them to indicate their phone number and at what time they wanted the glamorous blonde to phone them. Miss Novak placed long distance calls to each person, and while they listened, placed a $5 bet in their name on the roulette number they selected. All winnings will be donated to the Crippled Children's Society of America in the name of the players-by-proxy.

Basis of the promotion was the fact that "5 Against the House" is the story of five people who attempt to rob one of the world's largest gambling clubs. The method of play used in the affair, together with the disposition of the winnings, was checked by legal counsel against both state and federal laws in order to ascertain the plan's legality.

As the odds for number plays at the Sands Hotel roulette table, scene of Kim Novak's betting, start at 35 to 1, the newsmen and others had a chance of winning upwards of $17,500 for the Crippled Children.

Newspaper writers and television and radio networks participated in Columbia Pictures' Kim Novak roulette promotion stunt for "Five Against the House." Newsmen and TV-radio people, including Garry Moore and Martin Block, gave the "gimmick" prominent attention. Miss Novak, in the gaming room of the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas, contacted the participants by phone and offered to place a bet on any roulette number they chose. Winnings were turned over to the Crippled Children's Society. Among the columnists and motion picture editors who tied up with the promotion were: Bill Majeski, Washington "Daily News"; Mildred Stockard, Houston "Chronicle"; Virgil Miers, Dallas, "Times-Herald"; Bob

Cagney Takes To The Road — And He Likes It

Speaking on soil conservation, a subject close to his heart, Cagney addresses the Texas Legislature at Austin. Mrs. Cagney is seated at the right. Senator John Rogers, left, introduced the "Run For Cover" star to the lawmakers the day of the film's world premiere at the Paramount, Austin.

Paramount Star Launches "Run For Cover" With First Publicity Swing And The Public Responds

JAMES CAGNEY recently set a precedent for himself when he took to the road for the first time to promote a picture, Paramount's "Run For Cover," in which he co-stars with Viveca Lindfors, John Derek, and Jean Hersholt. The colorful actor made a long swing through 11 important cities in the south, east, and midwest, with a heavy schedule of stage appearances and newspaper, radio, and television interviews, making himself available as never before to his millions of fans.

A lavish city-wide celebration marked Cagney's arrival in Austin, Tex., for the world premiere of the production at the Paramount. At a luncheon in the Austin Club of the Commodore Perry Hotel, Governor Allan Shivers, himself appearing in a forthcoming Paramount film, "Lucy Gallant," presented the star with a plaque commemorating his 25th anniversary in motion pictures, which coincided with the film's opening. At the University of Texas, Cagney was presented with a pair of silver spurs by the University Men's Club, of which he became an honorary member, and later met with 750 students at a coffee party in his honor. But the highlight of his visit to the Texas capital was the opportunity to address the state legislature on soil conservation, a subject in which he is intensely interested, having worked closely on it with national youth groups such as the 4-H Clubs and the Future Farmers of America. He also found time to make three personal appearances, to the delight of the huge audience at the Paramount, for the premiere.

From Austin, Cagney went on to successive openings of the film in San Antonio, Houston, Dallas, and Fort Worth. As a result of further drum-beating by Cagney in Atlanta, "Run For Cover" got a big reception when it opened at the Paramount there. At the state capital, Cagney was made an honorary colonel on the staff of Governor Marvin Griffin, and was guest of honor at Variety Club luncheon attended by 100 exhibitors from Georgia, Florida, and Alabama, with whom he conferred on plans for the now successfully launched Southeastern Movie Festival.

The Paramount star made advance public appearances in Boston and New York, and from Atlanta went on to Detroit, Cincinnati, and Pittsburgh. He was accompanied on the tour by Mrs. Cagney and producer's agent A. C. Lyles.

During his Texas visit, Cagney stopped off in Dallas for a personal appearance, and dropped in to say hello to Paramount's branch office workers. He is shown here being greeted by Al M. Kane, division manager.

In his Dallas hotel room, Cagney chats with R. J. (Bob) O'Donnell, head, Interstate Theatres, during an early morning breakfast interview for the press. "Run For Cover" was opening at the Palace.

Cagney had a crowded schedule during his Atlanta sojourn for advance publicity of "Run For Cover." At a luncheon in his honor, top right, he is shown discussing plans with J. H. Thompson, president, Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Operators of Georgia. Stopping at the Paramount branch office, he confers on the film with, left to right, Tom Brewster, Grace Bramblett, Frank English, Charles Farmer, manager Foster Hotard, Paul Morgan, and Richard Ridling. Bottom, left, he shows amazement to the office staff at the number of bookings for the film; right, Cagney and Jimmy Harrison, Wilby Theatres, smile over prospects.

Kintner Hits Toll-TV

WASHINGTON—Robert E. Kintner, ABC president, last fortnight told the Television Management Conference of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters that the proponents of toll-TV are misleading and confusing the public, and predicted that the subscription method would result in a limited use of television facilities not in the public interest. An ABC survey, he said, shows that 50 per cent of the people interviewed interpreted toll-TV as "special shows," and that those who really understand it are opposed to it.

Discussing industry problems with the management group, Kintner said the greatest problem at present is the need for accessible television stations to permit the public to receive a variety of programs easily. He made some specific suggestions to alleviate "The monopoly situation": that the FCC act speedily to end substantial monopolies where allocations are now available but no final action has been taken, and immediate consideration of allocation to communities whose coverage areas could deliver a signal to present monopoly markets.

U-I Names Lait

HOLLYWOOD—Jack Diamond, studio publicity director, U-I Studios, last week set George Lait as his assistant studio publicity director. Lait has been on special assignment at Paramount since his recent resignation as director of publicity at Columbia following a career of foreign and war correspondence for Universal Service and International News Service. He had served for six years as a Columbia publicist prior to his appointment there in 1952 as publicity director. Diamond also announced the promotion of Harry Niemeyer, U-I studio publicity staff, to the post of department editor.

Yates-Rank Suit Settled

NEW YORK—A breach of contract suit brought against the J. Arthur Rank Organization for $1,950,000 and $680,000, respectively, by Charles V. Yates, was dismissed and settled, with prejudice, last fortnight in New York District Court.

In July, 1952, Yates charged that he has had a contract with JARO for the distribution of 44 pictures in one group and 40 in another which Rank had failed to deliver.

It seems to me that the Zenith plan, if adopted, will result in more Communism in every community in the U. S. because any time the consciousness of the poor are reminded that they are poor slobs and only the rich can see a special TV show even if the air is free, progress is arrested. My father's brother had a concession in Central Park and somebody sold him the idea to put chairs and benches in the shade of a tree, but in order to sit on those special shady chairs or benches it costs 25 cents. So the poor had to sit in the heat of the day and the rich were made cool and refreshed all day for 25 cents an hour. Well, the natural law of fairness took affect, and no matter how mighty the politicians and the law were at the time, human values were more important, and the chairs and benches were demolished and my poor rich uncle was ruined. I worked for him and I know. Instead of turning a caterpillar into a butterfly, they might as well turn democracy into communism.

MGM Increases Cartoons

HOLLYWOOD—A vastly augmented cartoon production schedule, requiring a 100 per cent increase in its present personnel, was announced last week by MGM.

The new slate calls for filming of 18 cartoons annually, doubling the current schedule. The entire program will be in CinemaScope and Technicolor. With the expansion of cartoon production, Joseph Barbera and William Hanna, for the past 16 years the writing and directing team of "Tom And Jerry" cartoons, were promoted to full producer status. Hal Elias, for 18 years associated with the production and distribution of MGM short subjects and cartoons, has been promoted to manager, cartoon department.

Schenck Quits Magna

NEW YORK—Joseph M. Schenck resigned last fortnight as the board chairman of Magna Theatre Corporation, which owns the distribution rights to "Oklahoma!" and has the majority interest in the Todd-AO Corporation, owning the licensing agency for the new process. No date has been set for the "Oklahoma!" opening at the Rivoli.

It is understood that Schenck will remain as board chairman of United Artists Theatre Circuit, which owns a large interest in Magna.

Republic Declares Dividend

NEW YORK—Ernest A. Hall, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was elected a member of the board of Republic at a meeting held at the company's offices last week at which time a regular dividend of 25 cents per share on preferred stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record as of the close of business on June 10, was declared.

Hall was formerly president, Hall Manufacturing Company, Toledo, O.,

The Tip-Off On Business

(The Tip-Off On Business is a record of how pictures are grossing in various parts of the country. The rating given the pictures (see key) is a cross section of reports received from the field, and presents a summary of various types of runs. Inasmuch as the rating given cannot constitute the business of each individual engagement, an attempt is made to present a general average. By studying the ratings, which are constantly kept up-to-date, exhibitors may guide themselves in their buying and booking.—Editor)

KEY TO "THE LITTLE MEN" RATINGS: (JUNE 8, 1955)

- Registering grosses in the highest brackets.
- Just fair, nothing out of the ordinary, average.
- Good, although not breaking down the walls.
- Disappointing, below what was expected.

Rank And Zenith Contract For British Empire Toll-TV

CHICAGO—Sir Alexander Korda, leading British film producer, has signed contracts with Zenith Radio Corporation leading toward the establishment of subscription television in the United Kingdom, Ireland, and the Channel Islands, it was announced here last week by Commander E. F. McDonald, Jr., Zenith president.

Armed with a broad gauge contract covering use of Zenith Phonevision, Korda plans to seek permission of his government to broadcast subscription TV programs and make manufacturing arrangements to produce the necessary technical devices for the system.

According to Zenith officials, the British producers will establish a new corporation to launch and operate the service.

at 20th-Fox has orders that there is to be no direct contact with Monroe and therefore devious ways and means had to be devised to get her to show up. The last few days prior to the showing were very amusing in some quarters to an outsider looking in.

STILL MORE ON ABOVE: The audience of press representatives, show biz personalities, industryites, and plain ordinary customers seemed to highly enjoy the proceedings which should set every red-blooded American youth between the ages of thirteen and sixty-five to dreaming or reminiscing as the case may be. Tom Ewell steals the picture, being on screen practically all of the time, and Monroe is just about perfect in her role, with the whole thing winding up as very funny film fare and a welcome way to beat the summer heat.

NEW YORK—James E. Perkins has been elected executive vice-president, Paramount International Films, it was announced last week by George Weltner, Paramount world wide sales chief. Perkins, who will headquarter in New York, is a veteran of 30 years with Paramount in posts throughout the world.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: Congratulations on some new appointments, like for instance that of Andy Gebstaedt to the post of advertising manager for Republic by ad-pub director Steve Edwards. It's a nice step up from his post of production manager, and he's a good man. . . . Then it was revealed that Jones Rosenfield, Jr., IFE vice-prexy in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation, has named Lars McSorley to contact trade papers for the company in addition to writing and working on TV and radio contacting. . . . There's a very good piece on the brothers Skouras in the June issue of American Magazine entitled "The Mighty Musketeers of the Movies" by Clarence Woodbury, which is thoroughly interesting and revealing. BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Showmanship Sweepstakes Brings Enthusiastic Exhibitor Response

RESPONSE to the announcement of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES, which tees off on July 6, have been overwhelmingly favorable.

The contest, which offers one prize of $100 for the one best promotional effort submitted each week, represents the publication's effort to back up and bring into continuing focus, the showmanship efforts currently being pushed by MGM with its Ticket Selling Workshops, and other film companies with various contests.

Likewise, the acclaim and enthusiasm with which those asked to serve as a committee of judges for the Better Management contest attest to the fact that MPE's SHOWMANSHIP SWEEPSTAKES is, as previously stated, "the hottest new (and original) idea in the last 25 years."

One prominent circuit head stated in his acceptance as one of the judges that the many ideas in exploitation, advertising, and publicity that he might find adaptable to his theatres would more than compensate him. Another suggested that MPE take the first week's prize itself for coming forth with the idea.

Actresses Hildy Parks, left, and Georgia Landau, are seen recently admiring gold-filled products at the kick-off of the extensive Gold Filled Manufacturers Association-Columbia promotion on behalf of "A Prize Of Gold" at Loew's State, Providence, R. I. The Gold Filled Association has earmarked $50,000 worth of merchandise to be used as contest prizes in each of the key cities where the film plays.

Like almost everything else, the selling of entertainment and of theatre services and conveniences, is apt to fall into a pattern and become routine. All too often, exhibitors and particularly salaried managers are wont to take the attitude that "the people know that" and "it's not worth the effort." MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR is out to disprove this by becoming the ONLY trade paper that will reward effort with a BIG weekly cash prize.

Bringing in those extra bucks at the boxoffice may now be more than worth your time and effort. This is MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S sincere effort to provide an incentive for a resurgence of showmanship.

Honesty Pays Off

WORCESTER, MASS.—Michael Stranger, manager, Plymouth, worked a stunt that had all Worcester talking "5 Against The House" when the Columbia film played his theatre. Stranger collected 35 ladies purses and stuffed them with a typewritten note saying, "Don't Gamble—Stay Honest—Return This Wallet To The Plymouth Theatre And Receive A Pass To See The Big Gamble As It Takes Place In '5 Against The House'." The purses were "lost" around the streets of downtown Worcester. The success of the stunt was testified to by the fact that all the purses were returned to the theatre.

Paul Levi, Pilgrim, Boston, came up with an attention-getting contest, also. Levi called it the "Kim Novak Sizzling Name Contest" whereby contestants were asked to submit a sizzling new name for Kim Novak. The best 20 names submitted were each worth a pair of guest tickets to see the film.

VistaVision Brochure Hails Paramount Films

NEW YORK—Exhibitors, newspaper editors, film critics, and radio and television commentators throughout the country soon will receive in the mail from Paramount branches copies of an elaborate, multicolored 22-page brochure which calls attention in striking detail to Paramount's exceptionally strong product lineup for the near future.

The brochure is entitled, "Paramount Presents Around the World . . . A New World of Entertainment in VistaVision." Two pages are devoted to the critical acclaim that has been heaped on VistaVision, the Paramount-developed production and giant-screen presentation process.

Twenty-four completed and currently-filming productions are analyzed and illustrated in this vivid publication. Special attention is given to Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments." Color stills and star photos plug the many top productions involved.

"Strategic Air Command," "The Seven Little Foys," "Run For Cover," "We're No Angels," "Hell's Island," "Ulysses," "The Far Horizons," "You're Never Too Young," "To Catch A Thief," "Lucy Gallant," "The Girl Rush," "The Trouble With Harry," "The Rose Tattoo," "The Court Jester," "The Desperate Hours," "The Vagabond King," "Anything Goes," "Artists And Models," "The Man Who Knew Too Much," "Too Late, My Love," "Lady Eve," "The Magnificent Devils," and "The Mountain" are the other big-scale productions covered in the lavishly-mounted document. A special section is devoted to the outstanding two-reel VistaVision short subjects which are being and soon will be released, and to the company's one-reel shorts.

Records Plug "Kentuckian"

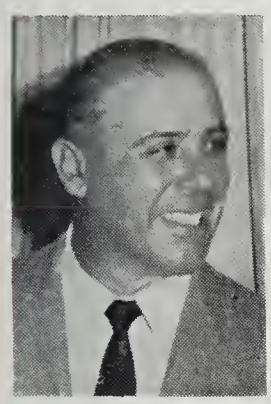
NEW YORK—A wide-ranging music promotion backing United Artists' "The Kentuckian," Hecht-Lancaster production, kicked off recently with national distribution and promotion of five recordings of the title song, it was announced by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for UA.

The initial waxings of the "The Kentuckian Song," which will provide the peg for intensive radio-TV and music store drum-beating, are by Hugo Winterhalter (RCA-Victor), the Hilltoppers (Dot), Guy Cherney (Mercury), Bobby Sherwood (Coral), and Jimmie Brown (MGM).

Special screenings of "The Kentuckian" for disc jockeys and record dealers and distributors in 60 key cities will launch saturation air plays and store displays in the 32 exchange areas. The big-scale promotion will boom the film with special counter and window builds featuring scene stills and credits.

The Editor Speaks

HERB MILLER, a great guy, has left the scene. After more than 25 years as editor of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, he wrapped up the business on his desk, picked up his hat and coat, and quietly went upstairs to much better things.



PAUL MANNING

I KNEW Herb Miller as a man of absolute integrity. He was both a fine editor and a wonderful guy, no mean combination. His brand of reporting was the kind which builds distinction and high principle for a publication and was largely responsible for the enviable editorial reputation which MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR holds today in the field of industry trade journals.

"GIVE THE READERS the unpolished, unbiased truth of the matter. Keep the news brief but factual, the picture reviews honest and precise. Whipped cream belongs in the ads!" This was Herb Miller's creed, and I'm sure there's many an exhibitor out there who has long since come to recognize and appreciate Herb's fearless brand of editorship. Recently, at random, I went through the stacks of correspondence I've had from Herb over the long years of our association. The dry humor, clear thought, and understanding help contained in these documents will long be cherished and remembered.

HIS SORROWING WIFE and young son, the entire staff of the paper, his thousands of readers, his multitudes of personal friends, they will all miss him. And so, Herb, happy landings, and auf wiedersehn!

This Producer's Job Begins Where Others Leave Off, For

Kramer Both Makes Them And Sells Them

FOR the past 18 months, active Stanley Kramer has dedicated himself to the most ambitious and painstaking undertaking of his notable career, preparing, producing, directing, and publicizing the screen version of Morton Thompson's 1,500,000-copy best seller, "Not As A Stranger," which United Artists will release.

Though long known as a meticulous craftsman, Kramer has never before devoted so much time and energy to producing a single film and pre-selling it on a truly international scale.

Kramer's participation in this year-and-a-half long project began in January, 1954, shortly after acquisition of the film rights to the powerful novel about the practice of modern medicine. With distribution of the book, which was to become the runaway best-seller of the year, barely started, he took to the road for a gruelling cross-country swing.

At hundreds of book shops in scores of key cities, the producer met with sales people, readers and reporters to spotlight the novel which he was bringing to the screen. Kramer carried the unique pre-production campaign to an audience of millions with personal appearances on 75 TV and radio network shows.

In talks before readers' clubs and women's groups, he solicited casting suggestions for the prized roles of Dr. Lucas Marsh, the two women who profoundly influence him, and the fellow doctors who figure in the climactic crisis of his professional career.

Convincing proof of the amount of interest he had aroused came several months later with the announcement of star casting for "Not As A Stranger," Olivia de Havilland, Robert Mitchum, Frank Sinatra, Gloria Grahame, Broderick Crawford, and Charles Bickford. Letters by the hundreds commenting on the selections flooded into the United Artists offices.

In September of last year, with book sales soaring toward the 1,000,000-mark and the script by Edwin and Edna Anhalt completed, Kramer assembled the cast on the coast for the production marking his debut as a director. To capture the authentic feel and detail of the medical profession, he had spent months talking to doctors and visiting the wards and operating rooms of dozens of hospitals. Now, before a single camera turned, he put the star cast through a week-long tour of four Los Angeles hospitals, where they observed operations and clinical techniques.

After completion of production, Kramer reurned to United Artists' home office in New York a full three months before release for a step-by-step analysis of each phase of the $1,200,000 ad-publicity-exploitation campaign backing the most important film he has ever brought to the screen.

Then, with his wife, Anne, who served as dialogue director on the picture, Kramer launched a month-long series of radio-TV and in-person appearances that beamed news of "Not As A Stranger" to additional millions in every section of the country. There followed a five-week tour of Europe, where he screened the multi-million dollar production for opinion makers, met with exhibitors, and held air and news interviews.

The hard-driving producer will be back in New York for the area premiere of "Not As A Stranger" early this summer. After that, its the road again and more drumbeating. Kramer has himself a picture and he's making sure that everyone knows about it.

"Not As A Stranger" will have a gala world premiere at the Stanley Warner, Beverly Hills, Cal., with a concurrent opening at the Capitol, New York, on June 29. The west coast premiere will be brought to the nation by a 76-station NBC-TV network via Steve Allen's "Tonight" program, which will originate at the theatre.

Presenting Mark Stevens, Actor, Producer, Director

WITH THE SWITCH these days from actor, to director, to producer, and sometimes to all three at once, why shouldn't a heads-up young star like Mark Stevens get into the swim of things? Which is exactly what he's done. I can report, after this exclusive MOTTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR interview, that Mark likes the water real fine!

BUSILY ENGROSSED in "Timetable," the first wholly independent production for Mark Stevens Productions, Mark is a busy hombre these days. I was just able to grab a sandwich and a little gab with him between shots on a location in the Spanish quarter of downtown Los Angeles. Between chinning with me, thinking about the next shot, worrying about the light changes, and studying his next lines (he was acting in this scene, too), he really had quite a job on his hands; but he was loving it.

MARK CUT his first "behind-the-camera" teeth when he directed "Cry Vengeance" in which he also starred. He turned in a pretty good chore, liked doing it, and it encouraged him to go ahead with the idea he had been toying with for some time, a wholly independent film company of his own. After all, he told me, he'd been around pictures for quite a spell now, and even though he never actually poked his nose into what was going on around him, he did manage to keep his eyes and ears open, asked a few pointed questions here and there, an, in general, didn't miss much.

AND IT PAID OFF, for today Mark has set up his own shop in the busy California Studios, once owned by the late Harry "Pop" Sherman, who gave us those unforgettable Hopalong Cassidy films. Today this studio is a scene of feverish activity. All kinds of production, movie, TV, what-have-you, keep the sound stages and open lot in a constant state of bustling, round-the-clock action. "This," Mark told me, "is the kind of atmosphere I like to be around. Men with their sleeves rolled up, with a job to do, and doing it well."

"TIMETABLE," the suspense action-drama feature he is making, was selected as his initial production only after exhaustive discussions with a number of top exhibitors in the country. Mark is one actor who can see a bit beyond the end of the shooting script. Even when the film's in the can, he knows that there is an important job yet to be done, the selling job! And so, realizing the importance of the selling chore, he wisely sought the counsel of top film-buyers as to what type of films they considered saleable merchandise.

"TIMETABLE," a fast moving, intriguing drama, looked like the best bet, and the bottle of champagne was duly broken over the camera as it started to grind out the first scenes of this exciting picture.

A NEW FEMININE STAR, Felicia Farr, will be introduced in the film, Mark thinks she will go far in motion pictures as a result of her strong performance in "Timetable." In a top role opposite Stevens is that veteran of the Broadway stage and TV, King Calder. Calder is well known to critics and public alike. Marianne Stewart, Mrs. Louis Calhern offstage, in a featured role, rounds out the able cast.

ABEN KANDEL, the celebrated novelist ("City For Conquest," "They Won't Forget," etc.), did the screen play from an original by Richard Angus. Rounding out this young and ambitious company we have Edward Rission, associate producer, and Stanley Silverman, story editor and dialogue director.

SUMMING UP I would venture to think that when "Timetable" hits the screen it should be a pretty good movie. I can tell you that a lot of heart is going into it from every department.

Meet Don Fedderson

DON FEDDERSON

WITH TELEVISION shows and characterizations like "Dragnet" and "I Love Lucy" being first tested and pre-sold to the public via video and then converted into feature movies, TV is at last beginning to pay back its debt to the screen in a way which both producers and exhibitors can well understand, via additional returns at the boxoffice.

THIS SUMMATION of the current situation in the movies-vs.-TV cold war comes from Don Fedderson, producer who is preparing to bring one or more of his well-known television story properties to the screen.

"IT IS no longer a one-way proposition," Fedderson asserted. "If the motion picture showman doesn't profit from TV's innovations then it is his own fault. Hollywood no longer hesitates to exchange, borrow, or lift from television where it is to its advantage. That is obvious in the steadily increasing amount of television time bought by movie interests to advertise pictures.

"FOR QUITE a while it was a matter of picture talent in the acting and technical and creative fields being drained off into TV. Now that TV is so well established and has developed its own techniques and its outstanding craftsmen, there is a two-way talent flow between video and movies," according to Fedderson, whose NBC-TV film series, "The Millionaire," will be produced as or edited into a feature picture for regular movie distribution.

"TV WAS FORCED to develop certain techniques to overcome some of its physical restrictions, and now even these are seemingly being adopted by Hollywood. For instance the restriction of TV's small image made it necessary to condense the angles of action and to 'play the scene' more in depth than in width. The stress put on smaller casts proved an asset rather than a liability in the story-telling. Hollywood is following this trend.

"HOLLYWOOD'S RECOGNITION of the validity of video's innovations and methods is reflected in the quite recent film studio buy of Paddy Chayevsky's "Marty," written and produced first on TV, then bought by a major, with the result that it won over regular film product at the Cannes Film Festival."

Fedderson also pointed out that Rod Serling's teleplay, "Patterns," has been acquired by a studio for screen production, as well as several other recent TV presentations.

"SMART SHOWMEN also recognize the value of actors who come to the screen with a pre-sold popularity from TV appearances. A recent example is James Dean, who was introduced to the public via video roles before going to Hollywood for his screen debut in "East Of Eden'."

IF IT has not already become so, then the TV-Hollywood situation is fast resolving into a reciprocal exchange in which everyone wins, including the public!

GOOD THINGS TO COME FROM HOLLYWOOD . . .

20th-Fox's "Daddy Long Legs"

"Daddy Long Legs" is just what the title says it is, a tall-towering pillar of popular appeal screen entertainment!

Fox producer Samuel Engel seems to be embarking on a solid parade of hits, having also produced "A Man Called Peter." He delivers the now familiar screen tale of "Daddy Long Legs" in a most delectable and charming style. Director Jean Negulesco of "Three Coins In The Fountain" fame brings great sensitivity to the principal roles and adds a great big credit to his substantial record of screen hits. This one will be hard to top.

Leslie Caron, petite and adorable, teams with Fred Astaire, and the result is socko entertainment that will keep you engrossed for two fun-packed hours. Miss Caron is the freshest really new personality to hit the screen for many a moon. She possesses a peculiar charm which almost defies description. If there ever was a natural cinderella girl, Leslie is she. She pulls at the heartstrings and never lets go! This is the secret of the Caron appeal and this is the very stuff great stars are made of.

Fred Astaire, enduring artist that he is, bounces through the title role with an enthusiasm which is nothing short of amazing. Playing it to the hilt, Fred chalks up one of the best performances of his long and colorful career. He's just great, period.

With Thelma Ritter and Fred Clark adding powerful performances to the show, and the breath taking ballet production numbers by the celebrated choreographer, Roland Petit, you had just better mark down "Daddy Long Legs" as the picture you gotta see!

Seen are two scenes from 20th-Fox's colorful musical, "Daddy Long Legs," featuring Leslie Caron, Fred Astaire, and Fred Clark, and bottom, director Jean Negulesco and producer Samuel G. Engel.

Fonda For "War And Peace"

HOLLYWOOD—Dino de Laurentiis announced that Henry Fonda has been signed to co-star with Audrey Hepburn and Mel Ferrer in "War And Peace," the $5,000,000 production to be directed by King Vidor and released by Paramount.

It was announced also that the Italian Government has put its official approval on the production, and has sanctioned the use of the Italian army. Arrangements which have been concluded do not affect contracts with Yugoslavia.

Irwin Shenker, Berlo Vending Company, and Leonard Greenberger, manager, Fairmount, were named co-chairmen of the planning committee to put into action a new continuous fund-raising plan by the Variety Club for the support of the Cerebral Palsy School of Cleveland. Chief barker Jack Silverthorne presented the plan at an invitational membership and school representative luncheon held in the Theatrical Grill. Th plan, following the general outline of the one used in Memphis, provided for the placement of boxes in 100 or more establishments to contain paper safety matches, and a container for voluntary contributions to the school. Merchants selling cigarettes welcome it because it frees them of the obligation of supplying free matches. The Variety Club matches are free, and the contribution is voluntary. Volunteers will service these boxes, reporting regularly to district heads who, in turn, will turn the collected money over to the Variety Club. It is anticipated that the plan will raise about $50,000 a year in greater Cleveland. Shown at the luncheon was a single reel film of the Cerebral Palsy School of the treatment used for children. Film was photographed by RKO salesman Jack Lewis, who was a combat photographer in the war.

An affidavit claiming contract violation has been signed by Jack L. Gertz, John M. Urbansky, and J. Stuart Cangney, who claim they have a prior contract with James J. Barton to build a drive-in on a Barton's Pearl Road property, where the Pearl Road Drive-In is now under construction. The affidavit states that they entered into a contract with Barton in 1949 to form a corporation in which each of the participating parties would own 25 per cent of the shares, with Barton's property representing his investment while the other three members would supply the construction financing. Barton was assigned to obtain a re-zon-

Exhibitors Name MGM Best Warners Called Worst

COLUMBUS, O.—Ohio exhibitors voting in the Allied "box score" of "best" and "worst" film companies in their treatment of theatre owners nominated MGM as the "best" and Warners as the "worst." Results of the poll were announced in a bulletin issued by Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Fifty-two Ohio exhibitors, representing about double that number of theatres, participated. Three points were allocated for first position, two for second, and one for third.

MGM scored with 128 points, followed by Universal-International with 53 and 20th-Fox with 38. Runnersup in the "best" category were Columbia, 34; RKO, 12; Paramount, 10; United Artists, 7; Allied Artists, 5; Republic, 3; and Warners, 3.

Warners had 104 in the "worst" classification, with Paramount in second place with 76, and Fox with 45. Runnersup were U-I, 27; UA, 17; Columbia, 12; RKO, 10; MGM, 6; Allied Artists, 4; Buena Vista, 3; and Republic, 0.

ing ordinance and a building permit to erect the outdoor theatre in the suburban Middelburg Heights location. To this end, the deponents state they paid $1,000 to Barton as part of the consideration for the agreement, and also paid $500 for preliminary architectural services. Some time in 1954, according to the affidavit, Barton's attorney notified the deponents that the deal was off and that Barton was arranging the building of the theatre in association with other people. Construction then went ahead and the theatre is now nearing completion with opening scheduled in June. Gertz, Urbansky and Cangney claim, in the affidavit, that their contract with Barton is still valid, that at all times they were able and willing to provide the necessary financing, and that they are parties to the theatre. Barton could not be reached for a statement of his side of the story.

Joe Leavitt, charter member, Local 160, IATSE, died here after a long illness. A 32nd Degree Mason and a Shriner, he was projectionist for a long time at Warners' Colony. Catholic Conclave Asks Censorship

COLUMBUS, O.—"Flood of indecent and offensive motion pictures" will "engulf the state" unless film censorship is restored, said Henry J. Kondrat, newly-elected state deputy, Ohio Knights of Columbus, at the 56th annual K. of C. convention here. He said the "general moral tone of motion pictures is on the rapid decline."

"They have been getting more smutty, more obscene, and more objectionable in recent months. We license and restrict the sale of guns which could be used to take life—but we ignore the menace of dirty movies which can kill the mind and destroy morality," Kondrat said.

The Cleveland businessman said House Bill 29 (passed by the House of Representatives) offers "some restraint," although it defines "only a bare minimum of standards for the rejection of films which are obscene or tend to glorify crime and criminals." Kondrat said he is urging all 60,000 K. of C. members to advise their representatives of their views on censorship.

"Seeming indifference" of "many legislators" to the "moral climate of the community" was scored by Bishop Michael J. Ready, Columbus diocese, in an address to the convention. "We seem to notice an amazing lethargy among decent people generally with respect to what is blatantly indecent," he said. "The evil of the hour in our communities is largely debasing motion pictures, lewd reading matter, and obscene illustrations. That much of the current indecency, flaunted publicly in word and action, in print and picture, incites to public indecency and debased morals, no sane man can doubt."

Pittsburgh

A $425,000 suit was filed in U. S. District Court by D. J. McCarthy against Gidney and Anna P. Tally, Pleasanton, seeking $375,000 damages plus $50,000 attorney fees. The suit arises out of a contract dispute over distribution of the film, "Bob and Sally." McCarthy alleges he obtained a contract from the Tallys for distribution of the film in areas where it was not banned by censorship. He further alleges the Tallys created an organization known as Modern Film Distributors, giving this company exclusive rights to distribute the picture. This, McCarthy, contends, created a monopoly and left him without any means of distributing the film. McCarthy claims damages to the extent of $125,000, for which he wants three-fold compensation. Corporations named in the suit were Modern Film Distributors, Chicago; Texas Roadshow Attractions; Constellation Roadshow Attractions, and Dale Attractions, all of this city.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Boston Crosstown

The "Late Cinema" art shows on Friday evenings at Interstate's Bradley, Putnam, Conn., received national acclaim when the nationally known commentator, Gilbert Seldes, mentioned the project over his radio program. Originated by Wilbur Neumann, manager, Bradley, and his brother, Erwin Neumann, district manager, Interstate's Connecticut theatres, the program goes on at 10 p.m. with a predominance of foreign films. The policy was started two years ago when the Neumanns felt the need for a late show for the factory workers in the area who stay on the job until 8 p.m. and then are ready for relaxation and entertainment on the eve of a non-working day. The program is operated on a mailed invitation basis only with announcements sent to a listing of over 500 patrons in an area of a radius of about 30 miles. There is no advertising in the local papers, yet these newspapers have devoted editorials and news space to the project, commending highly the ingenuity of the management. Admissions are slightly higher than the regular programs, but the innovation has proven to be successful from every point of view, with emphasis on good will.

Herman Rifkin has gone to the west coast with Mrs. Rifkin to take in the Allied Artists board meeting and to attend the wedding of Eleanor Broidy, daughter of AA's president Steve Broidy. . . . Mrs. Marjorie Carter, mail girl, New England Theatres, Inc., has resigned, with Mary Mack, Cambridge, replacing her.

The doors of the Bowdoin Square have been permanently closed and work started on the demolition of the property to make it into a parking lot. Built in 1875 as a stock company house, the theatre has undergone various stages of development and changes with vaudeville, stage shows, film and vaudeville, until 1930, when it used a picture policy playing 30 days after downtown Boston. In 1937, the theatre was purchased by Ben Williams, who operated it as a second run film showcase. When it is converted into a parking lot, Williams will continue to operate it.

Walt Disney's new "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier" is booked into the Keith Memorial for a June 22 playdate, through the Buena Vista Distribution office here. . . . John Dervin, Stratford Pictures, was in town for a few days on a selling trip, greeting his friends on Film Row. He is planning to return on June 20 to take in the Great Heart Award banquet sponsored by the Variety Club of New England.

John J. Scully, Jr., has been appointed district manager for E. M. Loew Theatres, replacing Nick Lavidor, who resigned to become managing director, University, Cambridge, Mass. Scully, whose family is well known in the industry, was associated with E. M. Loew in the operation of the West End Drive-In, Allentown, Pa. He is moving his wife and two children to this area where he is now house-hunting. E. M. Loew Theatres is reopening the Casino, Falmouth, on June 12 and a week later is reopening the Welles Beach, Maine theatre, bowling alley, and arcade on the coast. Two drive-ins for the circuit are now under construction, both designed and engineered by Richard Rubin. One is the Candlelight, Bridgeport, Conn., and the other is in Hallendale, Fla. Both should be ready for late season openings.

Starlets Marian Carr and Yvonne Doughty recently spread good cheer and good will for UA's "Kiss Me Deadly" on their Boston visit to the UA exchange. They are seen with Ben Rosenthal, Strand Theatres; Harry Segal, Boston UA branch manager; and Ben Williams, independent film buyer. The girls are kissing their way from coast to coast.

Terry Turner, General Teleradio, Inc., was in town huddling with Joseph Levine, Embassy Pictures, on forthcoming product. . . . George Roberts, treasurer, Rifkin Circuit, was elected to represent the Grand Lodge District I at the International B'nai B'rith triennial convention for 1956, which will be held in Washington. . . . Roy Heffner, Goodwill Award, and Harry Germaine, Price Premium, have moved to 42 Winchester Street where they are sharing offices. They were formerly in the offices of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England. . . . Lloyd Clark, president, Middlesex Amusement Company, is still on crutches after his recent accident when he broke a bone in his foot.

A check for $4,300 was recently presented to Ted Williams, trustee, Children's Cancer Research Foundation, by Mrs. Michael Cristley, co-chairman with Mrs. John Crane of a fashion show sponsored by the Daughters of Penelope. Watching the presentation are William S. Koster, Variety Club's executive director; and Mrs. Theodore Gomatos. The Jimmy Fund is sponsored annually by the Boston Red Sox, Variety Club Tent 23, and the Chiefs of Police.

Robert J. O'Donnell, general manager, Interstate Theatres of Texas, has accepted the invitation to be toastmaster at the Variety Club of New England's 1955 Great Heart Award banquet on June 20 when Rudolph F. King will be the recipient of the award. Officers of Variety International will also be present, including George Hoover, John Rowley, Edward Emanuel, George Elby, and Jack Beresin. The governors of the six New England states have also accepted the invitation of chief barker Walter A. Brown to attend. Joe Cronin and the entire roster of the Boston Red Sox, headed by Ted Williams, will be at the head table. The affair is to be held in the Imperial Ballroom of the Hotel Statler where a capacity crowd is expected. Boston's own Dr. Sidney Farber will present the Great Heart Award to Rudolph F. King, treasurer, Children's Cancer Research Foundation, who is Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles.

The Boston City Council adopted a resolution which would have all theatres in the city establish bundle checking desks, and would reserve a "favorably located section in each theatre for the exclusive use of female patrons during and for some time after shopping hours." When asked the reason for the proposed female segregation, the sponsor, Councilman William J. Foley, Jr., replied, "Women will get the idea." He said his suggestion was among those designed to "make Boston more attractive as a place to seek entertainment."

The Cinema Club of Boston, composed of bookers and office managers of the various exchanges and circuits, held its 19th annual election of officers at the Hotel Bradford. The following were elected to serve for one year: president, William Cuddy, RKO, reelected for a second term; first vice-president, John Glazer, Western Massachusetts Theatres; second vice-president, Phil Berler, E. M. Loew Theatres; treasurer, Max Berlone, United Artists; secretary, C. F. McGerigle, RKO. The executive committee is made up of William Romanoff, New England Theatres; William Cuddy, RKO; Richard Owens, E. M. Loew Theatres; Charles Wilson, Allied Artists; Harry Smith, RKO; Nate Oberman, MGM, and C. F. McGerigle, RKO.

"Kiss Me Deadly," parts 1 to 11 (Deletions: Eliminate dialogue, "Let him go to hell," in part 10). United Artists.

After numerous extensions and delays, the underground garage under Boston

Common looms as a reality, with construction on the $7,700,000 project to start as soon as the legislative bill is passed in the Senate. Boston businessmen, realtors, and theatremen have long been urging the Massachusetts senators to vote for the garage, which would enhance business and partially solve the present traffic problems. Given top priority by the entire business section, the Common garage was described by one spokesman as "the one major improvement that downtown Boston needs for its survival." Motor Park, Inc., has had a garage planned since July, 1948, but has had numerous extensions by Mayor Hynes. The Mayor has had recent meetings with the members of the powerful Senate committee on municipal finance, at which he gave his unswerving support to the Boston Common Authority bill.

Morris S. Bernstein, coowner, B and L Theatres, New Brunswick, is seriously ill in St. John's Hospital, St. John, N. B. This circuit operates the State, Madawaska, Maine. Miss Diane Gordon has taken over as the new manager at the Oritani, Hackensack, N. J. Without the usual years of apprenticeship, Miss Gordon moved into the management of the Skouras Circuit's Brook, Bound Brook, N. J. fifteen years ago. Since that time, she has found the theatre an intriguing career. She's firm in the belief that theatre management is more than trying to bring in customers to satisfy the theatre owner. "As a theatre manager, you're part of a community, a part of its everyday life. To do your job right, you've got to give to that community, and that's how I hope to find my position in Hackensack," she said. Miss Gordon's record would indicate that she means what she says. In her posts at the Skouras' Capitol, Fulton, and Rialto, Jersey City, and then at the Central, Jersey City, for Stanley Warner, she concentrated on making her theatres part and parcel of community activity. A dog fancier, Miss Gordon helped promote a dog show that eventually developed into national dog week and in recognition of her acievement she is being honored by an international group at their annual dinner. Miss Gordon joined Stanley Warner last July. She was first assigned to the Central, and now to the Oritani. A resident of Englewood, she is the mother of a 16-year-old daughter. Brewster Lee continues as assistant manager, Oritani. Anthony Williams is the divisional manager for Stanley Warner.

Clayton Pantages is the local 20th-Fox manager. A paragraph in a recent edition of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR mistakenly called him "Clayton Eastman." Eastman, who served for years as Albany manager for Paramount, is now operating a store in Vermont. Pantages, with the same first name, is a native of Connecticut and a World War II veteran, with 20th-Fox service in New Haven, Buffalo and Albany.

Stewart Field Air Force Band and a color guard presented a salute to the men of the Strategic Air Command on the stage of Fabian's Palace, preceding the first evening screening of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command." Manager William With and assistant manager Eugene Ganott, World War II veterans, arranged for the appearance of the band, which is stationed at Newburgh. Edward J. Wall, advertising and publicity director, Paramount, worked on and attended premieres here and in Buffalo.

Bill Haley's Comets gave two evening performances in the Grand, having previously played two shows in Kallet's Capitol, Rome.

Surveying his CinemaScope installations and other improvements at Riverview Drive-In, Rotterdam, Sunset Drive-In, Kingston, and Vail Mills Drive-In, Vail Mills, Harry Lamont found cause for satisfaction in the favorable comments by patrons and the increased receipts at boxoffices. He also spoke enthusiastically of the new double entrance at Riverview which paid off in the prompt, smooth handling of automobiles. A Gloversville paper printed a picture of the widened screen at Lamont's Vail Mills Drive-In. For the reopening in both spots, free gifts to the first 300 cars were added bait. . . . Leeds Drive-In, Leeds, N. Y., also went widescreen and CinemaScope.

Mrs. Ralph Ripps, wife of the MGM salesman, is chairman of the membership committee for the Albany Women's Auxiliary of the Jewish Home for the Aged, Troy. Screen Star Kirk Douglas' mother is one of the guests at the home.

The Mohawk Drive-In is now the scene of Sunday morning non-denominational church services. Mohawk is a Fabian operation, supervised by Irwin Ullman, and managed by E. A. Thompson. . . . Dallas Chamberlain was promoted from counterman to stand manager, Berlo Vending Company, Fabian's Saratoga Drive-In, Latham. . . . William Curry, a restaurateur, was named, stand manager at Alan V. Iselin's Auto-Vision, East Greenbush. Ed Waldman, who filled the slot at Auto-Vision last season, now directs two stands for Berlo at Thatcher

State Park. . . . Harold Leitch, husband of Betty Leitch, manager of the stand at Mohawk Drive-In, was transferred by Berlo to Scranton, Pa., as branch manager.

A report on the recent Variety Clubs International convention in Los Angeles was presented by delegate Jack Goldberg, MGM, at Tent Nine's annual golf tournament at Shaker Ridge Country Club. . . . Another area delegate to the 19th international convention was Louis W. Schine, who with his brother, J. Meyer, head the Schine Circuit and operate the Schine hotels, including the Los Angeles Ambassador. Mrs. Jack Goldberg, niece of the late Marcus Loew, made her initial visit to California for the Variety convention. Also in the party were A. C. Mayer, trail-blazer in Washington of nickel-admission motion picture theatres, and Mrs. Mayer.

John Gardner installed an automatic telephone-answering service at Turnpike Drive-In, Westmere. The first in an area theatre, it provides recorded messages when no one is at the drive-in, as well as when the rush of cars makes live answering difficult. The record announces, "This is Turnpike Drive-In's automatic answering service," and follows with information on starting time of features, cartoons, and intermission, and with Technicolor, CinemaScope, and similar credits. The device also records the number of calls received.

Miss Nancy Watkins, daughter of Strand chief projectionist Claude Watkins, graduated with honors from Syracuse University. . . . Fireworks displays for Memorial Day were staged by a number of drive-ins, including Joe Miller's Menands, Fabian's Mohawk and Saratoga, and Sardos Smalldone's Malta.

U-I officials checking into town were Peter Dana, eastern division manager and one-time local chief; Joseph Gins, district manager, and Irving Sochim, short subject sales manager. Dana and Gins stopped en route to Schine circuit offices in Gloversville, to which branch manager Norman Weitman drove them. Sochim arrived earlier to huddle with Weitman on newsreel promotion. . . . The Paramount, owned by the Hellman family but closed for a year, was reopened by Jules Perlmutter on lease. Albany Local 324 picketed it, because of non-union booth personnel. The reopening was not newspaper-advertised. Perlmutter installed CinemaScope.

Joseph Liss, Stanley Warner district manager, conferred with Stanley manager Andrew W. Roy, and Avon manager Ottilie Fearing, in Utica. . . . One of Troy's veteran projectionists, William J. "Johnny Night" Thrills Thousands PHILADELPHIA—Variety Club Tent 13's annual Johnny Night was held at Connie Mack Stadium last week for the benefit of the tent's summer camp for handicapped children, and followed in the pattern of other years and proved its usual success.

Under the co-sponsorship of the Daily News, which gave the event all-out publicity, numerous night club entertainers, topped by Julius La Rosa, put on a one-hour show; The Fralinger String Band, Mummers parade prize winners; several Veterans of Foreign War drum corps, color guards, and The Reilly Raiders, national champion American Legion drum and bugle corps; and a blondes vs. brunettes girls softball game, all lent their services. This was followed by a regulation National League baseball game, in which the Phillies defeated the Chicago Cubs.

The door prizes were more numerous this year and led off with a Chevrolet donated by Barker Vic Potamkin.

The official attendance was given as 19,974.

Michael Felt, chairman; Joseph Biben, entertainment chairman; and Samuel Karsevar, field director, and all who helped deserve applause for their efforts. Altec and Progressive Electric assisted with the special sound equipment.

Rex Reason, Universal-International's star, made a personal appearance along with "Mutant," alleged out-of-space resident, and thus got in a plug for "This Island Earth."

Baltimore

Newsreels no longer are subject to prior censorship in Maryland. This is the new law passed by the last session of the State Legislature. At the same time, the general film censorship laws were brought in line with recent Supreme Court opinions. The Baltimore City Court no longer has final say in censorship disputes. Cases can be taken to the Court of Appeals.

Property Owners File Drive-In Suit

LANCASTER, PA.—The Comet Drive-In, scheduled to open shortly with the completion of all construction, last week ran into a legal snarl when adjacent property owners filed an equity action asking an injunction to restrain agents or employees of the theatre from entering or using the premises of the plaintiffs.

The complaint, filed by Adolph C. Koehler, attorney for Charles H. and Ethel B. Reinhold, East Hempfield Township, named as defendants By-Pass Theatres, Inc., and Jacob A. and William A. Martin, doing business as Martin Brothers. A rule was issued by Lancaster County Court requiring the defendants to show cause within 20 days why a preliminary injunction should not be issued as requested in the complaint, which states that the Reinholds own and operate a cattle farm four miles west of Lancaster on which the drive-in is located, with five acres of the Reinhold's pasture adjoining it. Martin Brothers is charged with having invaded and destroyed some 40 feet of pastureland in the installation of a large storm-water drainpipe.

The complaint goes on to state that the plaintiffs are prevented from using their pasture because the defendants have removed a fence and an electric obstruction belonging to plaintiffs which prevented cattle from roaming at large. The defendants, it says, have no right-of-way, easement, or other right of any kind to the premises of plaintiffs, and an injunction, preliminary until hearing, and perpetually thereafter, restraining the defendants and their agents from entering or using the pasture, is asked.

In addition to the injunction, the plaintiffs ask the court to compel removal of concrete pipes and the restoration of the land to its original condition, and to award damages for the "willful invasion . . . and willful disregard of . . . rights."

Manager J. Lester Stallman has provided space in the big lobby for gas stoves and kitchen equipment, and movies will be a part of each school program.

Loew's Colonial, Bob Diem, manager, planned a number of Saturday morning shows for children. Tieups with numerous business firms, programs arranged especially for juniors, and big sidewalk display frames announcing the events helped to put the plan across.

Those Mickey Spillane dames, Maxine Cooper and Elyse Novey, in Philadelphia to promote UA's "Kiss Me Deadly," recently met theatre and record company executives before a special preview of the film for disc jockeys and music dealers. Shown with the starlets, left to right, are Roy Robbins, assistant ad-publicity manager, Stanley Warner Theatres; Lee Stewart, radio-TV disc jockey; Vito Samela, Philadelphia branch manager, Capitol Records; Birk Binnard, ad-publicity director, SW Philadelphia theatres; and Manny Kellem, promotion manager, Capitol Records.

Theatremen, fearing another long traffic tieup through a bus drivers' strike set for June 2, were relieved by the signing of a contract by the bus company and the bus drivers' union, giving the drivers a five cents an hour pay raise and another similar pay raise May 1, 1956.

The wind storm of May 29 did some damage at various drive-in theatres in this section, but not as much as Hurricane Hazel last fall. The recent storm was accompanied by a 50-mile-an-hour gale that unroofed many houses and barns in this district. Late shows booked for the holiday weekend found attendance cut by the storm, which struck early in the evening, and continued until after midnight.

Shillington

A new drive-in is being built west of here and will have a 1000-car capacity. Gordon White, Buffalo, N. Y., is builder, and interested are Morris Weinstein, attorney, and M. Katz, associated with Western Auto Vending Company, both of Buffalo, N. Y.

Bernard J. Bispeck, manager, Senate, Harrisburg, Pa., recently ballyhooed a special kids show as shown above. Featured was the Planter's Peanut Man in person.

Tamaqua

Victoria Amusement Company has closed the Victoria.

York

Richard P. Reimer, 80, doorman, SW Strand for 25 years, died at York Hospital after being stricken at his home. He is survived by his wife, two sons, a sister, three grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. He belonged to the local IATSE and State Employees Union.

Virginia

Richmond

Hal Lyon, Franklin, Va., exhibitor general chairman, Virginia Motion Picture Theatre Association annual convention, announced that Jerome Gordon, Palace, Newport News, Va., will head the committee for the special promotion-publicity session scheduled for June 16. The convention will be June 14-15-16 at the Chamberlin Hotel, Old Point Comfort, Va. A panel of leading Virginia promotion-minded exhibitors will lead the discussion, which will include exhibits and achievement reports by such outstanding exploiteers as William Wyatt, recent winner of national recognition, and manager, Virginian, Charleston, W. Va. Top industry leaders have also been secured to start off each day's business session. Horace Adams, president, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, will lead-off, followed by Robert W. Coyne, COMPO special counsel, and E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America. Jack Beresin, past barker of Variety Clubs International, will be the banquet speaker. In addition to the business sessions and banquet, a president's reception is scheduled, with other activities on the calendar including a comedy diving exhibition, a bird's eye tour of the Forrestal, the world's largest vessel, tour of the Jefferson Davis Casemate, card parties, golf, a special game night, and the "Oasis of Good Cheer."

Variety Club

Tent 13, Philadelphia

"You Know What Sailors Are" was screened through the courtesy of UA.

The first group of 74 Variety Club Campers will leave from in front of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel on July 1. Prior to their departure, a staff of doctors will examine the boys. A few vacancies for the month of August exist, and if you know of a handicapped boy between the ages of eight and 13 years, kindly submit his name.

The Ladies Auxiliary held their annual fashion show and cocktail party in the Clubrooms, and it proved to be a very successful affair.

In recognition of the 1955 Deborah Humanitarian Award Dinner to John B. Kelly at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel on June 12, the Club has cancelled the usual Sunday night screening so that the Tent can take care of members and guests, both before, during and after the Kelly dinner.

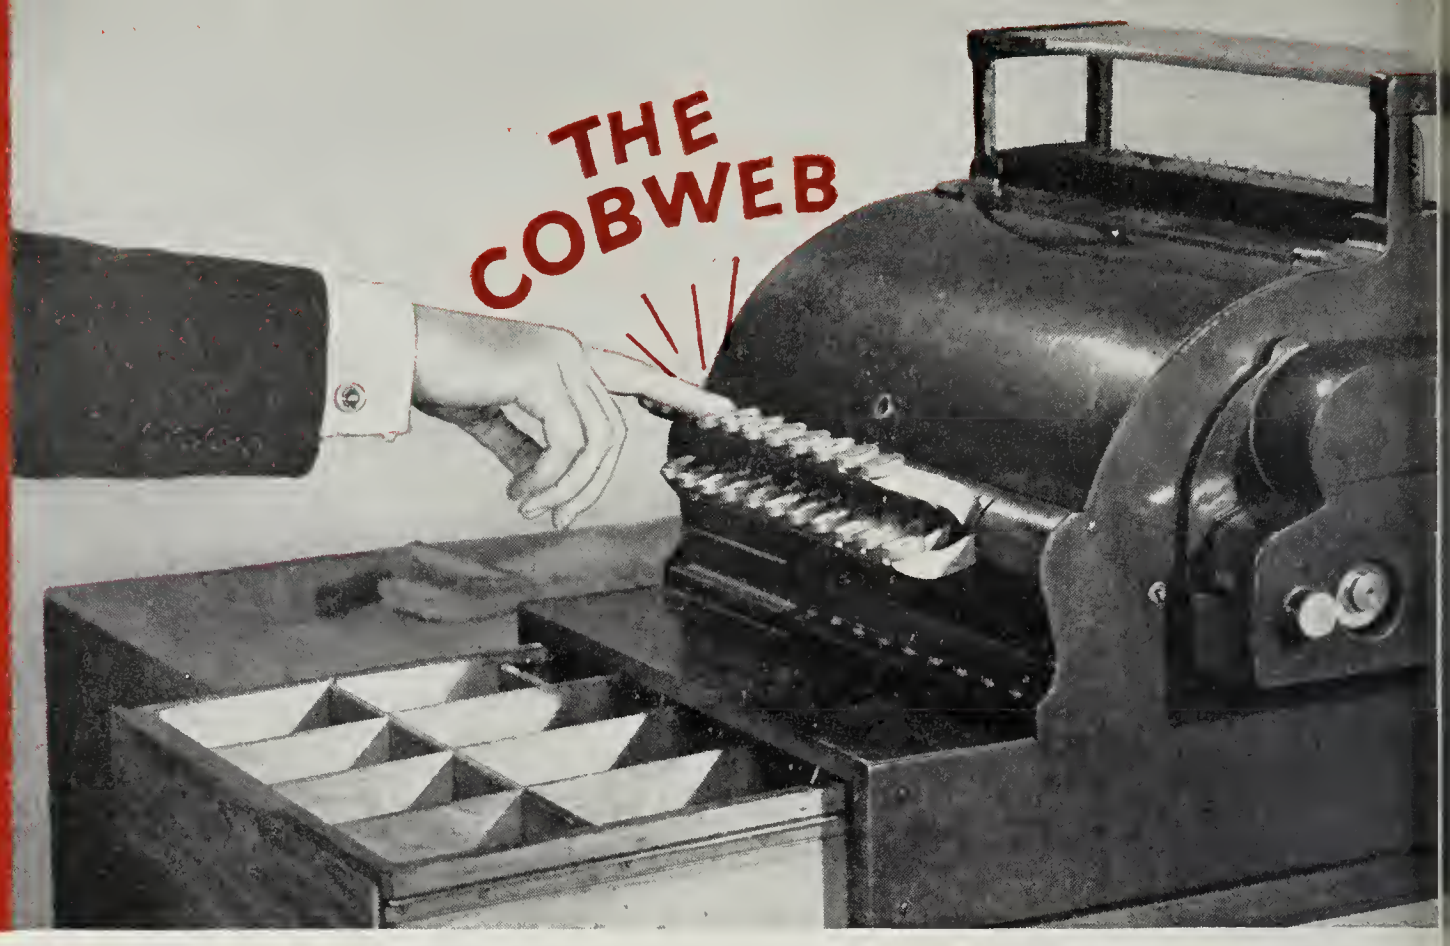
Herman Robbins, chairman of the board, National Screen Service Corporation, was named the "Pioneer of the Year" last week by the Motion Picture Pioneers.

FILL IT UP!



After blasting the nation with its "Blackboard Jungle" Bombshell, M-G-M follows up with a smashing, All-Star production "THE COBWEB," a forbidden subject that will be the talk of America. For the first time the screen dares to reveal the secrets of the psychiatrist's couch in that strange mansion on the hill they called "The Castle."

MERCHANDISING THE FRESH NEW PERSONALITIES

WHILE THERE ISN'T much artistically that we can learn from the low budget, small stage, makeshift productions of TV, any fair industry observer must agree that its very need for economy has given that little-chance-to-be-noticed to a whole new generation of writers and actors. Many of these young people might never have had the opportunity to act, and therefore the acting experience, except for TV. Many of them were missed or unrecognized by Hollywood talent scouts. Many others were found, tested, and buried under the Hollywood star name system; for an investment of a million dollars, and more, in a single feature doesn't permit the gamble on unknown names. For whatever the reasons, we are now increasingly conscious of a host of fresh, new, and much younger personalities, who perform capably and cause an audience flutter of interest that we haven't heard in many a moon. And each time we inquire where they came from, it seems many were hatched in the TV nest.

So maybe TV will prove to be the incubator that will outmode our so-called talent scouts. Maybe from it will come the fresh young romantic leads who are rightly in the effective love-making years, rather than the tired, 50-year-old, arthritic, and held-together-with-baling-wire "names," whose love making we suspect is one good reason for the admitted fall off in younger audiences. Kids can more readily recognize such infirmities than we older folks can.

But, at any rate, we seem to be getting worthy newcomers. And we ought to use real care in introducing them and merchandising them.

In line with this, we like the way in which some major producers are bringing them along slowly. You see them first in a secondary lead or two, where a much bigger name carries the show. Then you'll see several of them featured in small shows of their own, where neither the aims nor the budgets are very high. Not restricted to the postage stamp screens of TV, where individual identification is difficult, enough appearances and a proved ability will eventuate in public regard and acceptance.

We like the way in which some producers draw attention to a fresh new face by singling it out from the cast with a special emphasis, such as: "And introducing Joe Doakes."

We like the way in which some theatre managers have built special lobby displays and over exit door signs, telling the departing patron just who was in the picture just shown—and laying special emphasis on the newcomers.

And now here is a suggestion for producers, learned from our personal experiences in our own lobbies, and from the answering of thousands of patron questions. Regardless of any attention given to stars, casts, or new faces credits in the lead trailer, be sure to add a detailed cast, and to re-emphasize the newcomer, possibly even with a still picture after the final scene. The disgusted or dissatisfied audience leaves quickly. But there is nothing so gratifying to the theatreman as the lingering audience, interested in checking just who took which part, and in giving a candid opinion of respective abilities.

The latter is a pleased and satisfied audience. The future of the newcomer rests more in their opinion than in the abilities of any producer. If such an audience likes the newcomer, and if he or she is the subject of their conversation, then they'll be back!
